Hitler Accepts Accord, Clears Way for Peace; Stresa Parley Jubilant

Berlin Notifies Simon Nation Is Ready to Join in Pact.

Paris Modifies League Protest

Germany Will Be Asked to Help Decide Future of Austria.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Stresa, April 12.—Germany told Britain, France and Italy today she is willing to take part in efforts to forestall war.

Specifically, she let it be known she would enter an eastern nonaggression pact—something she has heretofore rejected—even though other participants "stipulate among themselves accords of reciprocal assistance."

That was the glad news Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, took to Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France and Premier Benito Mussolini and Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Fulvio Suvich of Italy, gathered on Isola Bella.

Sir John had his information from the British Embassy in Berlin, which Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath informed of the Reich's willingness to enter an eastern pact.

(At Berlin German officials said Von Neurath reaffirmed to the British charge d'affaires, D. C. Newton, Adolf Hitler's willingness to sign bilateral non-aggression pacts and work these agreements into one collective system.)

Agreement Reached.

The German offer means she will join an Eastern agreement, something anxiously desired by France and her big friend, Russia, though she will not contract military obligations under it. If other parties desire to do so, that will be no bar to Germany's adherence.

Laval revealed that the three conferees had reached complete agreement as to the program to be followed at Geneva when the League of Nations Council meets Monday to consider France's appeal against Germany's rearmament in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

France, presumably in response to British urging, abandoned all thought of seeking to have the council condemn Germany for her action.

In return, it was authoritatively stated, Britain gave her blessing to regional mutual assistance pacts within the framework of the league such as France desires as her "second line of defense against war."

Geneva Program

A high British spokesman, confirming Laval's disclosure that the powers were agreed as to their program at Geneva, said it covered the lines to be followed on two questions:

1. Germany's armaments program in repudiation of the treaty of Versailles.
2. Desirable action in similar future cases.

The British official emphasizes that only the league council can decide finally on such matters, but as far as the three powers are concerned they are agreed on their attitude.

In announcing Germany's readiness to enter an eastern pact, Simon told the conference the Reich believed there should be two separate documents.

Hitler's offer, informed quarters expected, would soften the French protest to Geneva.

Nevertheless, French circles said, France is going ahead with conclusion of her mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia which is expected to serve as the model of other similar bilateral pacts. A vast European "security system" would be formed thereby, it was said.

A French official denied reports from Paris that the Little Entente would be included in the Franco-Russian alliance which, he insisted, would be bilateral. Such pacts, however, must be negotiated between the countries of the Little Entente and Russia as well as among other countries.

New Conference Hinted.

Persistent reports elsewhere that another conference of the powers, to include Germany and Russia, probably would be called at London in June were received with skepticism. An official said this question had not been raised.

The French memorandum to the league charging Germany with repudiation of the Versailles Treaty and seeking to justify France's appeal under the "menace to international peace" clause of the league covenant was understood to have been sent to Geneva this afternoon.

British officials said they regarded Hitler's move on the eastern pact as a distinct concession.

Hitherto, they explained, the German Feuhrer has qualified as "dangerous and objectionable" the plan to include a mutual assistance pact in a general pact of non-aggression.

When Great Britain pressed Berlin for further clarification of her

Moffett Ready To Resign Post As FHA Chief

Administrator Says He'll See President First Within a Week.

James A. Moffett, the Federal housing administrator, disclosed last night that he is contemplating early retirement from the Administration, perhaps in the next few days.

Before submitting his resignation he wants first to confer with President Roosevelt, he said, and will ask an appointment within the coming week.

"There isn't anything definite yet," he declared. "But I always said the minute the ball was rolling I wanted to get out and return to private business."

Mr. Moffett returned last night from a trip to Detroit, where he attended a housing meeting. He declined to go into detail until he has seen the President.

Ever since his appointment last summer to organize the new FHA, rumors have been current that Mr. Moffett was dissatisfied with public life and wished to retire.

Last night came the first definite word, however, that circumstances have advanced to the point that Mr. Moffett wishes to drop his position with the New Deal immediately.

The reason given by the wealthy, youthful-appearing former oil company executive is that the FHA program is now well underway and is accumulating momentum.

Mr. Moffett came into prominence last year when he resigned as vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey because his sympathy with the New Deal aligned him against other officials of his company. Subsequently, he

Roosevelt Asks His Social Bill Be Left Alone

Request Sent to Congress to Retain Principal Features of Plan.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Retention of the outstanding provisions of the Administration's social security bill has been urged on Congress by President Roosevelt.

The President yesterday outlined his views on the measure to reporters as Representative Sam B. Hill, a ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, told the House the bill would do away with tax-exempt bonds.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized his opposition to proposals that Uncle Sam shoulder all of the burden of old age pensions for the needy instead of splitting the cost with the States.

There is no reason, the President added, to release from their obligations the 28 States which have seen fit to enact old age pension laws.

President Shuns Patronage.

To free the States from all responsibility for helping the needy aged, Mr. Roosevelt argued, also would have the undesirable result of creating a vast army of Federal political appointees to administer the fund.

The President was vigorous in his defense of the bill's provisions for unemployment insurance, which have been assailed on Capital Hill because of a proposed tax on employers to finance that phase of the program.

Unemployment insurance and old age pensions, he said, go hand in hand and together would ultimately answer the problem of balancing

Police Hold Man Suspected As Father Who Beat Girl, 3

Prince Georges County police today will continue their attempt to learn whether a man arrested last night is Robert Green, who was indicted yesterday for beating unmercifully his 3-year-old daughter.

The suspect was arrested by County Policeman William Gray last night in Seat Pleasant, Md. Gray was called by George N. Hurley after the man staggered into Hurley's store.

After phoning police, Hurley ordered him out of the store. Outside, the man met Ralph Hutchison, of Ritchie, Md.

"I'm Robert Green," Hutchison quoted the man as saying. "I know I'm on the spot. I expect I'll get 18 years if I am caught."

When arrested, the prisoner gave his name as Robert Davis, but police are confident he really is Green. He looks like published pictures of the man wanted, they said, and he has admitted that he lives in Ardmore, Md., where Green lived.

Green was indicted yesterday for assault with intent to kill and assault and battery on his 3-year-old daughter, Norma Jean.

The first indictment subjects Green to a penitentiary term of two to ten years. The assault and battery indictment carries an indefinite sentence and leaves punishment to discretion of the court.

Meanwhile, Casualty Hospital attendants prepared to send little Norma Jean home today in custody of her mother. They said she had almost recovered from the bad welts and bruises which her father allegedly inflicted with a steel-buckled belt.

She will take with her scores of toys, good things to eat and memories of kindnesses from an aroused public—kindnesses such as she had hardly known in the last year since her father was released from prison and went home to live.

Hospital attendants said gifts still were being sent to the child. These consisted mostly of candy or other eatables, they said.

125,000 Join Peace Strike; 2,000 in D.C.

Fights Occur in Several Cities; Meetings Here Quiet.

Marvin Cries Radicals, Maverick Criticizes His Attitude.

In universities and colleges all over the United States, from Harvard Yard to the campuses of the Pacific Coast, American students held demonstrations and one-hour strikes yesterday "against war."

Some 125,000 students joined in the walkout for peace, Joseph P. Lash, chairman of the National Student Strike Committee, estimated late last night, the Associated Press reported from New York. A similar demonstration last year brought out 25,000 collegians. Two thousand walked out here.

There was even a demonstration in Puerto Rico. There students of the University of Puerto Rico met in the first pacifist meeting ever held on the island.

Three arrests were reported. A man was detained in Philadelphia for distributing Communistic literature to high school students. Two youths were arrested in San Francisco for giving out anti-war handbills at a teachers' college.

As Europe's statesmen, admirals and generals, in flashing uniforms and morning coats, met in Stresa, to plan for peace and discuss the possibility of another world war, Boston's police were called out in a driving rain when stench-bombs were tossed in a counter demonstration.

In the immense gymnasium of Columbia University, in New York, at the height of the peace rally someone loosed a Nazi swastika, which fluttered lazily onto the crowds below.

As 10,000 students turned out in Manhattan and the Bronx, a woman speaker was pelted with an egg, which she warded off with her umbrella.

In Lansing, Mich., a Unitarian minister and five students who were about to address an antiwar meeting were ducked in the Red Cedar River by 400 Michigan State College students who broke up the meeting with a volley of eggs and fruit.

Two harmless pistol shots cracked at Haverford, Pa. A one-pound gun boomed interruptions to Syracuse University's demonstration. Members of Harvard's exclusive Hasty Pudding Club appeared with wooden swords and helmets, the Associated Press reported.

Rain throughout the East and an intermittent drizzle here failed to dampen the demonstrators.

In Washington an estimated 2,000 undergraduates participated in demonstrations and mass meetings at George Washington, American and Howard universities. There was heckling and booing, but there were no fights, as there were in Chicago, when a free-for-all fight with sticks, stones, eggs and stench bombs developed on the university campus.

George Washington University students assembled on the steps near the school library and one of the class buildings shortly after 10:45 a. m. and heard addresses by representatives of peace organizations and members of the anti-strike committee as well.

Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, was to have talked to the peace advocates, as were Representatives Fred J. Sisson, of New York, and Thomas A. Amlie, of Wisconsin.

Marvin Dissuades Speakers.

A viewpoint expressed by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, in telephone conversations with the three Representatives changed their plans, and the legislators were not on the program, although Representative Amlie mingled with the crowd of students at the foot of the iron steps during the meeting as a spectator.

When he learned Representative Maverick was to speak at the meeting, Dr. Marvin informed him that the gathering was in no official way connected with the university and that he could not be accorded the courtesy and honor he deserved at the meeting.

"I could not officially receive him," Dr. Marvin said last night, "and I was unaware that he was to speak until a short time before the demonstration.

"The meeting was in no way official, and I believe the students back of it, with a few exceptions, are avowed Communists. If the students had declared themselves for peace, and against Fascism and Communism as well, I would have been the first to encourage them.

"As it is, they were protesting against war—and there is a fine line drawn there—for war is one thing and possible revolution another. The abolition of imperialistic war does not necessarily insure peace."

5 Probes On in Bus Tragedy; Roosevelt Attacks Crossings

Teacher-Heroine and Driver in Catastrophe

Post Staff Photo.

Miss Anna Louise Funk, the school teacher and chaperone of the 29 children riding in the death bus, writes a report on the Rockville disaster, as her father, J. Kiffer Funk (left), a former teacher, and Percy Line, the driver of the bus, look on. Line, free on $1,000 bond, is charged with manslaughter.

Railroad Insists It Not at Fault

Teacher Acclaimed as Heroine; Tells Kin How Pupils Died.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Tales of unprecedented heroism came to light in Rockville, Md., yesterday as five investigations into Thursday night's bus crash, which took a toll of 14 lives, got under way, and President Roosevelt seized upon the tragedy to press his $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 program to eliminate grade crossings from the entire country.

Outstanding figure of the disaster was Miss Anna Louise Funk, brave and efficient school teacher and chaperone for the 29 children, when the Baltimore & Ohio train, roaring down the tracks in a stormy night, split their bus in two, killing 14 Williamsport, Md., children, none more than 18 years old.

Rockville rang with her praise yesterday, while officials of two police departments, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroad and insurance company began assembling the cold and calculating facts to retell the horrible story for the official records. Pitiful was Percy Line, grief-stricken driver of the bus who steadfastly maintained that he heard neither whistle nor bell until his bus was on the tracks.

The Maryland State police, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Montgomery County police, all sought to determine the cause of the accident.

Refuses Sleep.

But in Williamsport, Md., interest in the cause or the fixing of blame waned as neighbors sought to assuage the grief of 14 fathers and mothers. Among those who turned to this task of mercy was brunette Anna Louise Funk, who left Rockville yesterday afternoon, weary from interrogation, determined not to sleep until she had personally spoken with those who had entrusted their children in her care.

The American Automobile Association last night arranged the bond of $1,000 that had been asked for Line, who was being held on a technical charge of manslaughter to await action of a coroner's inquest Tuesday, and he was allowed to go back to his home.

In Baltimore, officials of the railroad disclaimed responsibility for the accident, asserting that the crossing was plainly and sufficiently marked.

Known in Hagerstown as a careful driver, and especially chosen by Miss Funk for his record as a safe man at a school bus wheel, Line, who is 27, was questioned throughout the day by assorted officials. Unable to speak coherently after he had helped pull children from the smashed bus, he said to Miss Funk:

"I didn't see the train or any lights. The train hit the rear of my bus, throwing it to the side of the track. Approaching the railroad I did not hear a bell until I was on the tracks. I did not see the lights of the train until it was right on us. I guess that's all."

Dead Marked Absent.

The calmness of Miss Funk astounded everyone. Not only did she take Line's statement and write out her own, but she drew diagrams of the accident. And all this after she had gone from mangled body to mangled body, feeling pulses, helping to sort the living from the dead in the chill and rainy midnight.

Schoolteacher to the core, the Hagerstown girl who in 1929 had been a beauty contest winner honored by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, made out a list of those on the bus.

At the home of Albert M. Boulc, former State's attorney, where those who were less injured were taken, Miss Funk rapidly made a

Doctors Reveal Cancer Relief By Fever Box

Heat Treatments Evolved by Kettering Promising for Tuberculars Too.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 12.—A new kind of fever box, designed by C. F. Kettering, of General Motors, which has cured some forms of arthritis, eye infections and other ills and been used on bone cancer, was shown to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology here today.

The interior of the box rises to temperatures of 160 to 170 degrees. In this, with only their heads outside, more than 100 human beings have found more or less relief from a variety of troubles during the last year at Henry Ford Hospital.

The box has cured 50 per cent of a considerable number of cases of tuberculosis in animals, all of them infected with an acute form of the human variety of lung trouble. The tuberculosis experiments are considered "significant" as indicating that relief may be expected when the fever box is used on human tubercular sufferers.

Under Test for Year.

The apparatus has been in use at the Henry Ford Hospital here for a year, under direction of Dr. F. W. Hartman, Dr. R. J. Major and Dr. H. P. Doub.

Artificial fevers have been used by physicians for several years, created by varying methods, from electric pads to the radio waves. The advantage of the Kettering hot box is its simplicity, its comparative cheapness and ease of temperature control.

The patients, human or animal, are placed in an atmosphere with up to 50 per cent relative humidity and temperatures of 160 to 170 degrees. Human or animal, their bodies are carefully wrapped in thick coverings. This is to prevent blisters.

Within about 45 minutes the humans show temperatures of about 103 degrees. The temperature in the box is then dropped gradually. Meanwhile the human temperatures rise to 105, and may go higher. The air in the box "cools" to about 120 degrees, which seems enough to maintain the artificial fever of most humans, once it has been set going.

The humans and the animals remain in the box four or five hours. They endure the discomfort of intense heat with the aid of sedatives, which may be given from time to time according to their sensations. The animals are treated as carefully as the humans for relief of discomfort.

For one type of arthritis the hot box has proven almost a specific cure. It has not relieved all kinds of arthritis.

It has been effective for pelvic inflammations of women. Also for infections of the eyes. One case was a boy whose eyeball had been

Bodies of 14 Bus Crash Victims To Lie in Williamsport School

Stunned Village Closes Business Houses as Midnight Tragedy Details Are Revealed; Townsmen Meet to Plan Rites.

By Howard Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

Williamsport, Md., April 12.—The dull ache of grief gripped this little community tonight after a day in which its citizens passed from tearful hysteria to dazed, sad-eyed acceptance of tragedy.

As citizens paced the street, grim-faced and sleepless, the bodies of 14 children—eight girls and six boys—killed in a twinkling last night at a Rockville death crossing, were carried slowly to an undertaking parlor.

Business was at a standstill. Those who talked of the disaster spoke in undertones. The bitter grief which had pierced the hearts of 14 families spread throughout the stilled village.

Tonight a still-stunned crowd of townsfolks—simple people only now beginning to think again after the dreadful impact of last night's news—gathered to make plans for burial of their children.

"Their children," for in this little community's grief all seemed welded into one large family.

School authorities and civic leaders had suggested a mass funeral for the child victims, but the parents expressed a desire for individual services.

In consequence, private services and burials will be held from homes and churches here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week.

Since last midnight, when first word of the accident reached here, the entire township has been paralyzed in grief. Men and women alike roam aimlessly about the village, dry-eyed and apparently unable to accept the tragedy as true. Youngsters, their faces a study in sorrow and apprehension, seem not to realize that 14 of their playmates and neighbors are gone.

Today, at school time, as the town rang with unverified reports of the crash, these same youngsters gathered for classes. They were met at the school by nerve-wracked teachers. They were told to return home—there would be no school.

Atop the building, a flag limp in the endless downpour of rain, fluttered at half-staff.

Business ceased. Many stores were closed. The tannery, Williamsport's main industrial center, operated with a small staff. Among its employes were fathers of those

$100,000,000 Allotted to Cut Rail Crossings

Roosevelt Reveals Plan to Speed Elimination of Menace This Year.

Using the Rockville bus tragedy as an example of the need for grade-crossing elimination throughout the Nation, President Roosevelt yesterday divulged plans for spending between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 on this type of work during the coming year.

The money will come from the $4,880,000,000 work-relief fund, $800,000,000 of hich is earmarked for highways, roads, streets and grade-crossing elimination. The President expressed the desire to make the fullest possible use of this fund, consistent with certain basic principles he outlined.

In the first place, he declared, speed is essential to the works program, and for that reason the problem of obtaining the land for the removal of grade crossings will be left to the States, counties and cities. After the sites have been obtained, the Federal Government will bear the rest of the expense.

Projects will be restricted as a general rule to the main lines of railroads, Mr. Roosevelt said, explaining that the railroads have been showing a growing tendency

Dun's Sees Sharpest Boom In 25 Years; Wheat Hits $1

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—Dollar wheat came home like the prodigal son today and the board of trade welcomed it with a sudden flare of bullish enthusiasm that added nearly $11,000,000 to value of winter wheat still in the ground.

Traders wandered out of the pit to read a Dun & Bradstreet prophecy that the sharpest business advance in 25 years was on the horizon.

They came back to the pit for a speculator flurry of buying that lifted May and September wheat contracts above the dollar level for the first time since early January, added 2⅜ to 2½ cents a bushel to yesterday's closing prices and, on the basis of Wednesday's Government estimate of a 435,000,000-bushel harvest of winter wheat, enhanced that crop's value on the futures market by $10,875,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—The most pronounced business rise in 25 years was forecast for the immediate future in the weekly business review by Dun & Bradstreet today.

"More convincing proof has come forward that the passing of March left behind the lows for the year," the review says.

"During the week there was a complete transformation of sentiment, as the hopes for a rather far-removed improvement were replaced by a realization that the immediate future is to bring the sharpest rise that has been witnessed in business in the past quarter of a century."

"Industries in most parts of the country now are advancing at the most orderly pace in the last two months, as all of the strikes have been settled and threats of walkouts have been dissipated."

Senate Reports Bill to Control Motor Carriers

Roosevelt Plans Outdone in Giving Authority to I. C. C.

By Robert C. Albright.

The entering wedge for a coordinated program of legislation touching all forms of transportation and vesting sweeping new powers in the Interstate Commerce Commission was struck yesterday in the Senate, where leaders gave right of way to the Administration's bus control bill.

Federal supervision of all for-hire motor transportation, with additional authority for the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate maximum hours of employes and safety requirements for equipment, was proposed in a favorable report filed by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson said the Senate next week will call up the bill which for the first time may subject common and contract motor carriers to the same type of rate and route regulation now imposed on their chief competitors—the railroads.

Road Situation "Chaotic."

"The competitive struggle," the Senate committee reported, "is to a large extent unequal and unfair, inasmuch as the railroads are comprehensively regulated, the water carriers are regulated in lesser degree, and the interstate motor carriers are scarcely regulated at all."

Administration bills for Federal control of water carriers and railroad reorganization still are tied up in committee. A sharp fight on the water carrier measure may thwart its passage this session, but leaders forecast early approval of the bus regulation bill.

Extraordinary growth of competitive highway transportation, spanning thousands of miles of hard-surfaced roads, has developed a condition which the Senate committee says is "chaotic" and "jeopardizes the maintenance of transportation facilities and service appropriate to the needs of commerce and required in the public interest."

Original Bill Outdone.

The measure reported by the committee provides intensive regulation of common motor carriers, less extensive control of trucks hired by contract, and no regulation of private motor carriers, except discretionary power for the commission to pass on qualifications and hours of employes and safety of equipment.

Interstate bus and truck common carriers would have to obtain certificates of public convenience from the I. C. C. Contract operators would be required to obtain permits and brokers dealing in transportation services, but not employed by any operating company, would be licensed. Rates would be regulated.

The measure goes further than the original Administration bill. As first introduced it provided for investigation and report on the need for Federal regulation of qualifications and maximum hours of service for all motor carrier personnel. As amended, the I. C. C. not only has authority to make the investigation, but may impose reasonable requirements without further legislation.

For more than a year motor bus and truck lines have been subject to a form of regulation under NRA codes but the Senate committee says these codes are "loose" and "admittedly inadequate to bring about necessary reforms."

Lacking motor carrier jurisdiction, the Interstate Commerce Commission already has control over steam railroads, electric railways, express companies, sleeping car companies, pipe lines and steamship lines controlled by railroads.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, who filed his committee's report, said railroads are seeking relaxation of these regulations "mainly because their competitors are unregulated."

District Sues Four To Force Tax Issue

In an effort to compel filing of personal property returns so District taxes can be levied, the Municipal government yesterday asked District Supreme Court to direct two men, a woman and an insurance company to file statements at the District Building.

The four were William Cogger, Earle Building; the Home Title Insurance Co., Columbia Building; E. J. Bush, Barrister Building, and Mrs. David S. Barry, jr., 1511 Thirtieth street northwest.

Petitions filed by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman alleged the District had called upon the defendants to file personal property schedules but they had not complied.

Humphrey Chapin Sues For Divorce in Mexico

Mexico City, April 12 (AP).—Humphrey Chapin, 32-year-old scion of a prominent Buffalo, N. Y., family, today filed suit for divorce against Mrs. Mary Alexander Dahlberg Chapin, who was returned under guard from San Luis Potosi to face charges of taking her husband's typewriter and clothes.

Mrs. Chapin was detained at San Luis while she was en route to Chicago, where, she had announced, she intended to sue for divorce, charging cruelty.

Between You and Me

Problems Vanish at Word From Roosevelt; How Much Is $4,880,000,000?

By Raymond Clapper

AT the end of a busy day yesterday Mr. Roosevelt was still in his most genial humor and going strong.

He had heard a delegation of New England Governors pleading that something be done to stop increasing imports of Japanese cotton goods. With despair written on their faces, they produced figures showing that if these Oriental imports continued the total for the year would reach 49,000,000 yards. That would be a lot of goods, they said.

Well, Mr. Roosevelt explained that he was related to some of the New England textile mill owners and that he could both understand and sympathize. It just happened, however, that he had been looking over some Government figures and had noted that if these imports materialized, they would constitute less than 1 per cent of the output of American mills. If the situation became unexpectedly worse, he would want to do something about it, but meantime the manufacturers couldn't be hurt as badly as they thought. And now it was time to tell the press about the situation and would they mind going into the next room, where they could chat with some members of the Cabinet?

That was the way he disposed of a situation which has filled pages of the Congressional Record for the last few weeks.

Then, with a twinkle in his eye, he took a stand shoulder to shoulder with his right wing critics in spurning a pair of amendments proposed to the social security bill in the House. One amendment would exempt the States from old-age pension contributions. Mr. Roosevelt explained that he had to oppose this amendment because if the States contributed nothing they would have no responsibility in administration and the result would be that the Federal Government would have to set up an army of bureaucratic agents. He was the last to want that.

The smile still covering his whole face, Mr. Roosevelt thought that the second proposal, which was to omit unemployment insurance and confine the bill to old-age pensions, was interfering with his budget-balancing efforts. The whole social security program, he felt, was in the direction of budget balancing because it would take the elderly off relief. The unemployment insurance feature was essential because it would cushion the Federal relief expenditures for the able-bodied unemployed and thus help balance the budget.

Senate leaders have decided to adjourn the Senate Tuesday for committee work. That being the opening day of the baseball season, some of the committee sessions may be transferred to Griffith Stadium. It gets very stuffy in those Senate committee rooms and the Senators must have their fresh air.

* * * *

The size of the new work relief fund is just beginning to sink in. Newspaper exchanges coming into the office indicate that editors about the country have started a new game, which might be called: "How much is $4,880,000,000?"

Here are some of their best answers:

Enough to buy 10,000,000 low-priced automobiles.

Equal to $75 for every tick of your watch until June, 1937, when the act expires.

About $650,000,000 less than the total amount of money in circulation in the United States.

Equal roughly to all of the monetary gold stocks in the world in 1913.

If spent at the rate of $4,500 a minute it would last until June 30, 1937.

Enough to buy any American city except Chicago or New York at its assessed valuation; exceeds the assessed valuation of Manhattan Island.

Would buy all gold mined in the United States in the last 143 years.

In gold it would require 90 ten-ton trucks to haul it; in $1,000 bills it would fill nine bushel baskets; in $1 bills it would cover 20 acres with paper money.

Almost three times enough to pay for all building contracts let in States east of the Rocky Mountains last year.

More than enough to pay the funeral expenses of all the people who ought to be shot for thinking up such answers.

In the few hours that have elapsed since the tragic grade-crossing accident just outside Washington, official attention is turning away from boon doggling to the problem of using some of the $4,880,000,000 work relief chest to eliminate crossing menaces.

Railroad groups some months ago laid before Government officials a complete program which could have been put into effect within 90 days. It called for 12,951 projects, involving an expenditure of $865,000,000 and would utilize 783,489,000 man-hours of labor. Sponsors of the plan estimated that 85 per cent of the money spent would go into labor direct and indirect and that 750,000 men in 10,000 cities could be put to work. Plans already were drawn for these projects.

But one obstacle after another was raised. Some officials wanted to make the railroads stand a share of the cost, and the railroads pleaded poverty. Red tape over condemnation proceedings presented itself. Little was done. Now, spurred by the loss of 14 young lives on the doorstep of Washington, Mr. Roosevelt has taken the matter in hand and action is promised.

It may slow down the safety pin census. Even the eurythmic relief dancers may have to go to work on grade crossings. But, as they used to say when the draft yanked the office clerks into the Army, the outdoor activity will improve their physique. The difficulty has been that it is hard to interest a long-range planner in something right at hand that may save lives now.

The Senate is about to create another standing committee, the first new one since 1921. The Rules Committee has decided to recommend that a committee be set up to deal with civil aviation. Senators have been having trouble agreeing upon a name. McCarran, who doesn't mind a little redundancy now and then, suggested it be called "The Committee on Aeronautics and Aviation." McAdoo, the flying Senator, wanted to call it the "Committee on Aeronautics, Aviation and Radio." Wheeler, whose Interstate Commerce Committee handles radio legislation, objected. Army and Navy officers objected to including military aviation. So it probably will be the "Committee on Air Commerce and Civil Aviation."

The last standing committee to be created was on expenditures in 1921, the only one added since the war. In 1913 the Banking and Currency Committee was created.

Non-Aggression Pact Of 6 Powers Rumored

Paris, April 12 (AP).—Reliable sources said tonight a special conference of delegates from Austria, Germany, Italy, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia likely would be called shortly to discuss a non-aggression pact "with assurances."

The three powers at Stresa, these sources asserted, agreed on the necessity of pushing a non-aggression pact, including Austria and all her neighbors and guaranteeing Austria's independence.

A resolution to be presented for adoption by the League of Nations council, it was said, will provide for the creation of a "committee of three" to determine proper methods of preventing future violation of treaties by one country.

Economic sanctions, as provided in the league covenant at present only in case of war, likely would be extended in the case of treaty violations.

Bootleg Manufacturers Hunted.

Moscow, April 12 (AP).—A campaign to smoke out private Russian manufacturers doing an illegal, though flourishing, business was launched today with the offering of rewards for information leading to their apprehension and punishment. Press accounts estimated there are at least 1,000 "home factories" in Moscow where shoes, hats, clothing and other articles are manufactured.

World Pauses As Noted Bury Adolph Ochs

News Wires Silent for Two Minutes as Thousansd Attend Rites.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—New York paid a final tribute to Adolph S. Ochs today and the body of the publisher was laid to rest in a peaceful sarcophagus.

While the ebb and flow of news currents paused throughout the world, a hushed group of mourners drawn from all walks of life gathered at the bier in Temple Emanu-El for the last rites.

A drizzling rain fell in upper Fifth avenue and the flags on all city churches flapped at half-staff as notables of the State, industry and journalism joined with virtually the entire staff of the New York Times and members of the Ochs family in bidding the publisher farewell.

Approximately 3,000 persons assembled in the massive temple and a crowd of several hundred lingered outside, heedless of the rain, during the brief, simple services.

Flowers Cover Coffin.

A blanket of orchids, white lilacs and lavender sweet peas covered the coffin, which had been borne up from Chattanooga, Tenn., where Mr. Ochs died last Monday, and floral tributes were banked in profusion around the altar.

In the silence that fell with the subsiding of the preliminary organ music, Dr. Y. H. Goldenson, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, entered the pulpit and began the 23-minute service with the reading of Psalm 24.

Cantor Moses Rudinow and the temple choir then sang "I Set the Lord Always Before Me."

After that the sonorous voice of Dr. Goldenson was lifted in the words from Psalm 90 and the twenty-ninth chapter of the Book of Job, and as he concluded the choir sang "Trust in the Lord."

Rabbi Jonah B. Wise took up the reading, from the Twenty-third Psalm, and finished with a prayer of commital—"the Lord hath given and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed for ever and ever be the name of the Lord."

Slowly then the two rabbis led the procession toward the main entrance. Following them came the honorary pallbearers, headed by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Times.

Immediately after the coffin, borne on the shoulders of ten bearers, came members of the family, including Mrs. Ochs and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, daughter and son-in-law.

In the procession were Roy Howard, publisher; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, J. David Stern, publisher; Felix Warburg, Bernard M. Baruch, Frank Parker Stockbridge, magazine editor, and the justices of the appellate division.

Also there were Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Columbia School of Journalism; James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany; Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press; Mrs. Paul Block, Harry Guggenheim, former Ambassador to Cuba; Paul M Warburg, Victor Ridder, publisher, and many others.

The honorary pallbearers included Owen D. Young, John W. Davis, Charles M. Schwab, Clark Howell, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Howard Davis, Alfred E. Smith, Judge Irving Lehman, Frank B. Noyes, and Henry Morgenthau, sr.

Before he entered the temple, former Gov. Smith, a friend of 30 years, had said: "I've come to say good-by."

At the start of the service, the Associated Press halted its wires and suspended activities throughout the world for two minutes for silent tribute. Rengo Simbun Sha, world-wide Japanese news agency did likewise, and in Italy the Stefani News Agency joined in the mourning.

Rev. Chalmers Dies in Famed Trinity Church

Baltimore Rector Stricken at Foot of Altar on Way to Preach.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—The Rev. Dr. Robert S. Chalmers, of Baltimore, Md., dropped dead in historic Trinity Church today as he walked toward the pulpit where he was to have preached the noon-day sermon.

He was 55 years old and the pastor of Grace and St. Peter's Churches in Baltimore.

At the rectory of the old church, which stands on Broadway at the head of Wall street, it was said that the Rev. Mr. Chalmers entered three minutes after the time he was to have begun his sermon.

The church rector, Dr. Frederic Fleming, had ascended the pulpit and begun speaking.

Nearing the sacristy at the foot of the altar and to one side of the church, the Rev. Chalmers stumbled into a pew. Dr. Luis A. Amill, who was summoned immediately, pronounced him dead. Police later said he died of natural causes.

The Rev. Dr. Chalmers served his church in many parts of the United States.

In Baltimore Five Years.

He was deacon of St. Paul's Church, Akron, Ohio, in 1914-15; rector of Trinity Church, Tiffin, 1915-18; rector of St. Mark's Church, Toledo, 1918-24; dean of St. Matthew's Cathedral, Dallas, Tex., 1924-30. Since then he has been rector of the parish in Baltimore.

Born in Dundee, Scotland, he was educated at Edinburgh University and received the honorary degree, master of arts, and another, doctor of divinity, at Kenyon College.

He was married to Adela W. Burnet, of Glasgow, in 1905 and has three children, Margaret, William Scott and James Burnet Chalmers.

Saddened Williamsport Prepares to Bury Bus Crash Dead

Villagers Plan Funeral Rites For Crash Dead

Bodies of 14 Pupils to Lie in High School at Williamsport.

who lay in the town's only funeral parlor.

Totaling less than 1,500, the villagers, without saying so, held a day of mourning.

Last night was raw and cold. A fine drizzle swept the streets. A few lights burned while worried parents waited at windows for sounds of the school bus returning with their children from an excursion to the University of Maryland at College Park.

Dr. I. M. Zimmerman, prominent physician, sat in his office with Mayor Richard Hawken. The telephone rang.

The voice of Miss Louise Funk, high school chemistry teacher in charge of the outing, announced the accident.

Mayor Delivered Sad News.

Dr. Zimmerman left immediately for Rockville. Mayor Hawken organized groups of men to notify waiting parents. Within a few minutes additional lights began to appear in the village. Anxious relatives appeared on the streets in incomplete attire.

Hysterical voice aroused remaining sleepers. Soon convoys of automobiles sped from town toward Rockville.

Frantic womenfolk — mothers, sisters and friends of students aboard the doomed bus, gathered in the town square. They were joined by others. Soon there were hundreds.

Then came word that 11 children were dead. Early reports did not include a list of injured and rumors were circulated that all had been killed.

Hysteria and weeping added to the confusion. Residents of neighboring towns began to arrive. Suddenly a bus appeared at the square. On its sides were the words, "School Bus." Hopes rose, only to be shattered.

This bus was from Rockville, bringing those who escaped with minor injuries. Reunions were pathetic because families whose children did not return on the bus stood and looked.

Wait Through Night.

Throughout the night the town kept its vigil, hoping, praying. This morning final identifications came. The sorrowful task of preparing for the burial of 14 children was begun.

In the three-story new brick schoolhouse, where a happy party of young folks gathered yesterday to start on their excursion, the 14 bodies will lie for final tributes Monday. The dead are Pearl Emmerson, Norris Downs, Claude Myers, Paul McElroy, Virginia Myers, Mary A. Downs, Margaret Eva Zimmerman, Carl Brindle, Lois Winters, Bertha Castle, Phebe Kelley, James Flurie, Elva Harsh and Leroy Kendle.

All were members of the high school chemistry class. The youngest was 14 and the oldest 18. They each contributed $1 toward the trip to Maryland University and it was to become a biennial affair. There, yesterday, they saw chemistry exhibits and demonstrations.

Moves Seat, Saves Life.

Those who escaped hurts are recovering from shock. In Washington hospitals are Jane Staley and Margaret Kreps. The former suffered a fractured arm and the latter internal injuries.

Miss Staley escaped probable death by moving her seat a few moments before the crash.

Many eyewitness stories were related. A vivid description was given by Dwight Fearnow, a survivor.

"I was sitting in the third seat behind the driver," he related. "A few minutes after we started home we were singing class songs. I guess most everybody got sort of sleepy as the ride continued and just before the crash it was very quiet. I was looking over the driver's shoulder and saw the tracks.

Says No Whistle Sounded.

"I did not hear a warning bell or whistle. The first thing I knew, a blinding light struck my eyes.

"The driver apparently saw it, too, and stepped on the gas. Then came the impact. I was thrown through a portion of the bus which was torn away, and found myself lying against a dirt bank.

"Others were lying all around. Most of them were terribly mangled and some were crying. I finally got to my feet and pulled several girls from the wreckage. Some of them didn't have on any shoes and their dresses were torn almost off.

Mayor Hawken and B. J. Grimes, superintendent of schools, officially offered the town's and school's sympathy to grieving parents.

3 Groups Would Dig Graves

Three groups have offered to dig the fourteen graves for the victims of the crash. They include the county relief administration, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and the Washington county board of education, according to Mrs. Margaret Lewis, field representative of the Red Cross. Mrs. Lewis said that officials of the railroad told her they would make the offer to the parents of the dead children.

Mrs. Lewis came here today to offer the services of the county chapter of the Red Cross to the bereaved families. She will stay here tonight and tomorrow. She was also at the scene of the crash last night.

The bus in which the children were riding was owned by a Hagerstown garage and chartered to the Washington county board of education. It carries liability of $50,000, protecting the school board from suits up to that amount. The maximum amount of insurance for each person injured is $5,000 under the terms of the policy.

The accident with the train has stirred heated sentiment in Williamsport against grade crossings in the county. Parents of the children and others point out that had the bus escaped at Rockville, it would still have had to cross three more grade crossings before reaching Williamsport.

The state has ample funds, derived from a portion of the gas tax, to pay a part of the cost of eliminating such crossings. In the past few years, however, the railroads have not been able to pay their share. The State has a standing offer to pay half the cost of building underpasses or overpasses.

list of the children who had made the trip.

Eyes dry, she moved among them with cheering words, calming them as they sat in silent groups. She would pause now and then to answer questions from the bewildered children.

Against the names of those who were dead she wrote the single word, "Absent." Against the names of those who were spared she put a check mark and the word—"Here."

Returns to School.

Descendant of farmers who in 1752 received a grant of land near what is now known as Funkstown, Md., this gentle teacher never cracked or appeared weary. All day her whole interest was to return to Williamsport, not to sleep, but to succor the parents of her school children. Her father, who once taught school himself, but who now runs a farm near Hagerstown, came early to Rockville to lend support.

Finally, there being nothing more for her to do in Rockville, she left with her old friend, Dr. L. B. Broughton, who had lectured on the mysteries of chemistry to her children the night before, and G. F. Pollock, alumni secretary of the University of Maryland, and went home.

"I am going to the school," she said, simply, "to make myself available to any parents who may want to talk to me about what happened."

Roosevelt Urges Gates.

In the Senate, on Capitol Hill, by a strange coincidence, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee favorably reported out a bill which would give the Interstate Commerce Commission Federal control over all lines with buses for hire.

President Roosevelt said at the White House that the accident was illustrative of the need throughout the Nation for grade-crossing elimination. In the first place, he commented, public buses should not be allowed to use side roads. The road, however, where the accident occurred is one of the most heavily traveled in the Rockville area.

Railroads, too, said the President, should not depend upon whistles or gongs to sound warning of trains to autoists. They should be required to have gates in operation at all times. He then discussed his plan to eliminate grade crossings, a project he hopes to accomplish within a year.

The accident, as nearly as could be determined, happened at 11:26 o'clock Thursday night. Driver Line, it was established through Miss Funk, who was on the front seat with him, had but a few minutes before wiped his windshield which a mechanical wiper was slowly sweeping. To do this he had slowed down but had not stopped.

He was traveling at a medium rate of speed when the car of Edward L. Stevens, Rockville golf professional at the Manor Club, passed him. Stevens, probably the only actual eyewitness to the accident and first to arrive on the scene, told a Post reporter that he had cleared the track just before the crash.

He said he had heard, but not seen, the train, or at least had heard the warning bell, but had crossed anyway. He was on the track when he heard the bell. Immediately when he heard the terrific crash he pulled his car to a sudden stop.

He was out of his car, he said, hurriedly, and had to wait for the train to pass before he could see what had happened. The train must have been going at least 60 miles an hour at the time, he said.

He had seen the bus; he expected the crash; but the sight that met his eyes was almost overwhelming. As he raced to the bus, Miss Funk got out and began pulling victims from the twisted wreckage. Line was still sitting at the wheel. He was dazed.

Fire Truck Arrives.

Stevens said he helped Driver Line out. He was all but unconscious. Seeing that he was alive, Stevens turned to the others. Nearby residents came running up. Someone, probably the driver of a laundry truck, sounded an alarm. In six minutes a fire truck was on the scene.

Two priests, the Rev. Charles O'Hara, convalescent pastor of St. Mary's Church nearby, and his friend and visitor, the Rev. Cecil J. McNeal, of Catholic University, appeared, it seemed miraculously. Miss Funk was passing from one victim to another, feeling their pulses.

Rockville's citizenry praised highly the work of the two priests who gave absolution to all who lay there, dying, regardless of their faith.

Stevens, the priests, neighbors, the bus driver all worked in the darkness and mist getting the bodies out.

Dr. William S. Murphy, nearby resident, was driving in Rockville with his wife. He heard of the accident and was the first doctor on the scene. Mrs. Murphy was a registered nurse at Georgetown Hospital before her marriage. The two of them went professionally, calmly to work.

Bodies Strewn on Cemetery.

They helped in the gruesome task of separating the dead from the living. From the mass of cut, bruised bodies they selected two to send to Georgetown Hospital on the fire truck. They worked all night, and until dawning, on the injured, rendering first aid.

The bodies were strewn all up and down the embankment near St. Mary's churchyard cemetery. When some semblance of order had been restored, the teacher, Miss Funk, telephoned Dr. Ira M. Zimmerman at Williamsport. His daughter, 16 years old, Margaret, lay dead in the Rockville morgue.

The country doctor silently left his home, drove through the night that had dealth death to his daughter, reached Rockville early. He had been given by telephone the list of those known to be dead.

He walked into that morgue and saw his daughter lying there. Bareheaded he looked at her. Briefly tears streamed from his eyes. He turned to Mrs. W. Reuben Pumphry, wife of the undertaker, for a moment silent.

Brought Them Into World.

"Do you know all of these children?" he asked. Most of them had not then been identified.

"No," she said, "can you help us?"

The country doctor choking back his own sadness, said:

"Well, I brought most of them into the world. I guess I can identify them."

His was a task that would have tried any man. He assembled and smoothed the mangled bodies, fixing features so that parents would be less stricken when they gazed at their children lying there.

And things were not so bad as they might otherwise have been when parents began coming in from Williamsport, but still there was grief enough and sights that many a father and mother and uncle and aunt will never forget.

Fail to Recognize Girl.

Bertha Jane Castle, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Castle, was one of the last to be named. The crash had disfigured her beyond immediate recognition even by her own parents.

At Williamsport Paul McElroy's father and mother, William and Alice McElroy, were so overcome that they could not leave their home. It fell to an aunt to make the fearful journey from the home to the morgue and say it was her nephew lying there.

To a 70-year-old man fell the lot of naming his granddaughter, pretty 17-year-old Elva Harsh.

The impact of the crash was so great, witnesses said, that clothing was strewn about and had to be collected and sorted.

In Washington, representatives of the Keystone Automobile and the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club issued harsh condemnations of the grade crossing, which, it was found, is among 11 recommended for elimination in a bill pending before the Maryland State Legislature.

The crossing has long been known as a dangerous one on the main highway between Baltimore and Rockville and agitation for its elimination is nothing new. There was no watchman at the crossing, his time of duty having ended an hour and a half before the crash.

A formal inquest will be held into the crash at the office of the Rockville coroner, probably on Tuesday.

Railway Denies Blame.

C. W. Galloway, vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio, issued the following statement:

"The crossing is protected by standard signals and by warning bells which, we definitely know, were operating at the time of the accident.

"There are no buildings close to the crossing which would obstruct the vision of the driver, and the crossing is well lighted.

"Three outside witnesses have stated that the engine whistle was blown approaching the crossing."

Other witnesses, said, however, that the whistle invariably is sounded so close to the crossing that it is not adequate warning.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, acting under authority of the laws of 1910, had three men on the scene today. They are required to report fully on the accident and make recommendations concerning it, but they do not seek to place criminal blame.

The commission report will not be finished until after all other hearings and inquests are held.

Out of the tragedy came the revelation of romance as contrast to the grim and gruesome details. It was learned that Jane Staley, 17-year-old school girl, had secretly been married to Edward Murray. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Staley, Ned visited his bride, who lay in a cot at Georgetown Hospital with a broken arm. Beside her, and perhaps dying, lay her companion, Margaret Krebs.

Jane greeted her young husband, who rushed to the hospital with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Staley. She and Ned had tried to keep the romance secret until the end of the school year.

It was the merest chance that saved the bride's life. She smilingly told reporters that just before the crash she had moved from the rear of the bus to change seats with one of the boys sitting up front. "At first I wasn't going to let him," she said.

She said she remembered little of the tragedy beside hearing Miss Funk say, "Oh, my God."

The Kreps girl was asleep when the crash came. Her first words after regaining consciousness were words of reassurance to her mother, who was sitting next the bed.

"Don't worry," she said, "I'll be all right."

Her name last night was on the danger list and doctors were not sure whether she would live.

College Press Group Hits Long Censorship

New Orleans, April 12 (AP).—Southern college press representatives meeting here today adopted resolutions condemning Senator Huey P. Long's recent "censorship" of the Reveille, Louisiana State University campus paper, and calling for freedom of opinion in student publications.

The resolutions declared in favor of freedom of expression "subject only to the restrictions imposed by the law of libel," and indorsed the "courage and fearlessness" of Jesse H. Cutrer, editor of the Reveille, who was expelled with journalism students because of a student contribution to which Long took offense. "The subservience by President James M. Smith to Senator Huey P. Long" was likewise condemned.

to abandon branch line trackage made unprofitable by bus and truck competition.

Administration of both the grade-crossing and highways end of the works program will be centered in the Bureau of Public Roads, which is headed by Thomas H. MacDonald. Thus, Mr. MacDonald is expected to be one of those to sit on the administrative board that will guide the whole works program.

In leaving the States and local communities the responsibility of first obtaining the rights of way for grade crossings before coming to Washington with their plans, the President reiterated his intention to spend such part of the works fund as he does used on projects which can be completed by July 1, 1936.

No Cost to Railroads

He added that there will be no cost to the railroads—thus removing at one stroke a bone of contention which some have argued is largely responsible for the Nation's small progress in constructing safe crossings in the past.

In most cases, the States themselves will do the actual work on grade crossings, Mr. Roosevelt said, but where States have no proper agency to take charge the Federal Government will do the job. He pointed out that the development of fast, stream-lined trains, raising speeds from 45 and 50 to 70 and 80 miles an hour, makes doubly important the elimination of crossing hazards.

The unusual advantages of grade-crossing elimination in providing small, widely distributed projects within easy reach of centers of unemployment have long been recognized among Administration leaders. Surveys have shown that hundreds of millions could be spent in this manner. Mr. Roosevelt said, however, that the general expectation is for an expenditure of between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 the first year.

Mr. MacDonald said that the Bureau of Public Roads already has on hand plans for the construction of a large number of such underground or overhead crossings. More than 500 dangerous crossings have been eliminated, or are in process of removal, he said, since July, 1933.

An even larger number of train-crossing hazards have been eliminated by the relocation of highways, he added, since it is estimated that for every crossing made safe by construction work two are removed by straightening roads. Nevertheless, at least $30,000,000 of the $600,000,000 which the Bureau of Public Roads has been given to distribute to States during this Administration has gone into structural work at crossings, he figured.

Interest Cut Due.

The number of grade crossings showed a drop in 1933 for the first time since the development of railroads—a drop largely due to the abandonment of trackage. In the same year the American Engineering Council suggested early elimination of some 5,000 crossings at an estimated cost of $500,000,000.

"It has been variously estimated," according to the recent report of the National Resources Board, "that further elimination to the amount of $12,000,000,000 would be justified."

As he explored this and other possibilities of the works program, Mr. Roosevelt let drop a remark of encouragement to the cities which owe money to the PWA. Now that the Federal Administration can borrow money at less than 3 per cent, he commented, it would be a safe guess that the present 4 per cent rate charged municipalities will be lowered.

With Director Robert C. Fechner, of the CCC, the President went over plans for enlarging the CCC to 600,000 foresters, and with Underescretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell he discussed rural aspects of the works program. Mr. Fechner brought word that approximately 1,500 new camps can be constructed and 300,000 new men enlisted within two months' time.

'Ideal' Marriage Ended by Slurs on His Income.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 12.—Slender Mary Astor's marriage of nearly five years to Dr. Franklin Thorpe ended in divorce today at a five-minute court hearing in which the film actress was accused by her physician-husband of referring humiliatingly before friends to his smaller earning power.

"I have a good—I'd say a lucrative practice," Dr. Thorpe testified in obtaining the interlocutory decree, "but compared to an actress' sayary, well, of course——"

Miss Astor did not appear to contest the suit.

Dr. Thorpe said they were married in Yuma, Ariz., June 29, 1931, and separated March 25, 1935.

He said the actress had agreed he should have the custody of their 3-year-old daughter, Marilyn.

Pope Expects to Live Until 1950, at Least

Vatican City, April 12 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XI expects to live until 1950, at least, and proclaim another jubilee year when he is 93, he revealed today. The holy father was urged to name new cardinals to fill 15 vacancies, but smilingly replied:

"There is no haste to prepare for our successor."

Explaining, the pontiff said he recently was informed that a seer had predicted he would live at least another 15 years.

Alyce Can't Go to See Circus, Says Surgeon

Fall River, Mass., April 12 (U.P.).—Alyce Jane McHenry, who sang "Man on the Flying Trapeze" as a sort of theme song for her upside-down stomach operation, can't go to New York to see the circus.

Hardly had the 10-year-old Omaha girl told of her longing to see "a real three-ring circus in New York" when she received an invitation, good anytime in the next three weeks. But tonight Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, who righted Alyce's "tummy," said it was "out of the question."

Jimmy Neilson, 13-year-old San Jose, Calif., boy who had his upsidedown stomach righted last Saturday, today had a second "needle operation" to drain fluid from the chest cavity.

Tomorrow Dr. Truesdale is scheduled to perform another upside-down stomach operation—his twenty-seventh—on 9-year-old William Spiegleblatt, son of a Newport, R. I., baker.

Berlin Agrees To Join Accord; War Fear Dims

Stresa Parley Jubilant as Hitler Clears Way for Peace.

stand, Von Neurath explained that the Reich had not changed her view, but she was prepared to become a party to a pact of non-aggression even though other powers wished to supplement it by an agreement for mutual assistance.

If there was to be a supplementary pact, the German foreign ministry added, the agreement should not be in one document but in two.

Air Pact Delayed.

Discussions concerning Austria the British termed "satisfactory" since, they emphasized, Germany would be asked for further information. They said they understood Hitler was prepared to consider a Danubian pact if satisfactory explanations are given him.

As to the proposed western air pact, it was explained that this involves difficulties for England and Italy. A spokesman said:

"The question at issue is how we shall devise an air pact which shall not differ much from the land Locarno pact."

France and Italy, it was learned, today entered the final phases of a security pact between themselves, one of the principal points of which was a guarantee of Austrian independence.

This pact is to create a Latin bloc which in turn would invite Great Britain to conclude a treaty of friendship and consultation—but not a treaty of alliance—with it. The pact is to include, strehgthen and enlarge the accord concluded at Rome January 7.

The conferences will reassemble at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Where differences of opinion yesterday threatened chances for agreement, things smoothed out quickly today as the negotiators, preliminary exploration work done, got down to business.

Tonight Mussolini entertained the visiting premiers, with their assistants, at dinner in the Hotel Borromeo.

A French spokesman, discussing the tri-power agreement on the course to be followed at Geneva, said it covered "measures" to be applied against any power violating treaties in the future.

It was understood the "measures" are mainly economic, such as refusal to supply treaty violators with raw materials, particularly those intended for war industries.

Circles close to the conferees reported Premier Flandin wanted to insert sanctions in the league covenant itself, while Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain opposed them.

Proposed Sanctions.

Such sanctions, it was assumed, would obligate league members, in case one member attacks another, to refuse all economic and financial assistance to the aggressor and finally lend military aid to the country attacked.

The covenant as it now stands provides merely for economic and financial action in case of aggression and says the league council may invite members to put military provisions into execution.

If the "measures" against treaty violations to be discussed at Geneva imply penalties, this would indicate necessity for revision of the covenant, which contains no provision for sanctions against treaty violators.

Reform of the covenant, in the opinion of some Stresa circles, might mean another big peace conference. As efforts presumably would be made to bring the Kellogg pact outlawing war into harmony with the league covenant, some officials foresee intense American interest in any scheme to restrain treaty violations.

German Invitation To Laval Reported

By the United Press.

Stresa, April 12.—French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval was reported tonight to have been invited by Germany to visit Berlin on his way to or from Moscow late this month.

Also, if Poland hesitates to follow Germany into the projected eastern European pact, Laval will stop off at Warsaw on returning from Moscow.

The French delegation said there had been no official suggestion for Laval to visit Berlin. However, it was believed Berlin's willingness now to enter the eastern pact will result in this added gesture of good will between these two chief antagonists on the continent.

Banking Group Protests Moratorium in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla., April 12 (AP).—Investment bankers protested today against Florida declaring a 2-year moratorium on public indebtedness of its counties and other bonded subdivisions.

The House Wednesday adopted a measure declaring a "public emergency" and providing that for a period of two years courts of the State could order tax levies, by mandamus or other proceedings, only upon determination of the tax-paying ability of the governmental unit. The State has no bonded indebtedness. Protest was telegraphed to Gov Sholtz by the Investment Bankers Association of America. The moratorium bill now is pending before the Senate.

2 Seized in Onion War.

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—The customs border patrol made its largest capture of the "onion war" today when agents seized a 40-foot lugger in the Detroit River with a cargo of 280 fifty-pound bags of Canadian onions. Two men were arrested.

Anti-Fascists Sentenced.

Rome, April 12 (AP).—Seven anti-Fascists were sentenced to prison for from 2 to 4 years each today by a special tribunal for the defense of the state sitting at Trieste.

joined the Standard Oil Company of California.

His career at the head of the housing administration was marked early in the winter by a head-on collision with PWA Administrator Harold W. Ickes. The difference of opinion, finally patched up by the White House, concerned Ickes' plans for low-cost housing.

Under Contractors' Fire.

Later, the housing administrator was subjected to some crticism by contractors and building interests for alleged failure to stimulate construction to anticipated heights. In recent months, however, much of the crticism had abated.

Mr. Moffett has been regarded as one of the more conservative administrators of the New Deal, representing generally the viewpoint of business. He early manifested an interest in the NRA and served for a time as a member of the Industrial Advisory Board.

Meantime there was no intimation of a successor to head the FHA. From time to time reports have circulated that FHA and the HOLC might be merged into one credit agency. Mr. Moffett said, however, he was not aware this was being considered.

Veteran of '65 Says Strikers Need Spanks

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., April 12.—Although saying he was "against war," Gen. Harry Rene Lee, 89, adjutant and chief of staff of the United Confederate Veterans, commented today regarding students who "struck" in behalf of peace:

"They ought to be put across somebody's knee and spanked—every darn one of them."

Germans Base Peace Gesture On Four Points

Will Sign Accords Without Clauses for Mutual Assistance.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 12.—Adolf Hitler today reassured Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, that he stands by his offer to sign bilateral non-aggression pacts without mutual assistance provisions.

That was the promise he made Simon, now at the tri-power conference at Stresa, during their recent conversations here, and that promise Simon carried to Stresa in the German memorandum summing up the conversations.

While German officials expressed surprise at reports from Stresa that the Reich had offered something new to help the conference reach an agreement, it was disclosed that Simon through British Charge d'Affaires D. C. Newton, today asked Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath to confirm what Hitler told him. Von Neurath complied.

Hitler's Peace Offers.

This was, in brief:

1. That Germany would sign bilateral pacts agreeing not to aid an aggressor in any way, whether economically, financially, militarily or otherwise.
2. That Germany would not accept mutual assistance provisions.
3. That what other powers put into their bilattral non-aggression pacts was not Germany's affair.
4. That all these bilateral pacts could be assimilated into one general pact.

The effect of this, German officials said, would be that other powers could have their mutual assistance if they wanted it, but none of Germany's pacts would obligate her to use her men, airplanes and guns to help anyone in trouble.

It also would obviate other powers' passing over German territory en route to answer an SOS call. This is the German substitute for proposed Eastern pacts.

View on General Pacts.

That Germany should agree to negotiate bilateral pacts without the mutual assistance clause even though other powers included it among themselves was described as quite "logical" for, it was stated, "in the making of bilateral pacts outside countries can not dictate what those treaties shall contain."

"The general pacts envisaged here," it was further explained, "are merely collections of small units alike in general but with some differing stipulations."

A government spokesman said, "We now expect a document of some sort to issue from Stresa instead of just a communique, but we are waiting to see what that document is."

Optimism was lacking in official quarters. One spokesman said it was like pulling teeth "for some countries to relinquish privileges they acquired 15 years ago."

"But no progress can be made," he continued, "until discrimination against Germany has been abandoned in the interest of a peaceful Europe."

The German press attacked Premier Mussolini of Italy sharply for his anti-German attitude, the old Nazi organ Reichswart suggesting that the Vatican is behind Il Duce.

Banker Loses Prison Appeal.

Topeka, Kans., April 12 (AP).—The State Supreme Court ruled today that Warren W. Finney, 61-year-old Emporia capitalist, must go to prison for embezzlement, joining there his son and a former State treasurer who figured in a million-dollar bogus bond scandal. He was convicted of embezzling approximately $65,000 from his now closed Emporia bank.

Austrian Draft Plans Glorify Hapsburg Rule

Proposal for Pre-War Army Linked With Praise of Franz Josef.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, April 12.—Austria today linked preliminary preparations to restore the pre-war system of universal military service with praise of the pre-war monarchy under Emperor Franz Josef.

Revealing that the recent decision to increase the army, limited to 30,000 men under the Treaty of St. Germain, would involve restoration of universal conscription, the government announced public attention simultaneously would be directed to the greatness and glory of the ousted monarchy.

Col. Walter Adam, the government's chief of propaganda, explained that actual renewal of compulsory military service would await the confidently expected granting of arms equality rights to Austria.

Meanwhile details of reorganization of the army are being worked out.

"Barracks, uniforms and equipment must be ready," Col. Adam said, "before the change is actually put into effect—and that's likely to take considerable time."

The propaganda head also announced that an internal loan, probably of 100,000,000 schillings (the schilling is currently quoted at about 18.79 United States cents), would be floated soon for the creation of jobs for unemployed.

In connection with the army, Col. Adam said:

"It is illogical to describe a big army as oppressive, unproductive and a burden on the taxpayer.

"Practically all the money spent in equipping an enlarged army with uniforms and so forth will flow directly into the coffers of industry and stimulate employment."

Army reorganization, involving the construction of new barracks, will employ some 35,000 men, it has been estimated.

Memories of the Hapsburg dynasty, whose youthful aspirant to Austria's throne is Archduke Otto, will be kept in the forefront of the public mind through the Franz Josef Exhibition, to be held from May to October.

The resources of all the State museums, theaters, opera houses and the like will be used in this campaign to glorify the late emperor, outstanding representative of the Hapsburg dynasty.

Rubber Chiefs Submit a Plan To Avoid Strike

Miss Perkins Hopeful That Akron Unions Will Not Walk Out.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins went back into conference with American Federation of Labor Rubber Union officials at midnight, hopeful that the Akron, Ohio, rubber strike threat would be removed later today.

Miss Perkins said she and the union officials were going over "indefinite proposals" of the manufacturers.

The union men, she said, would not likely either accept or reject the proposals—still not made public—before morning.

The possibility of holding an employes election at the Goodrich and Firestone plants without withdrawal by the companies of their appeal to the courts to review the labor relations board's election orders, she said, was being discussed, among other things.

Conferences began in the forenoon, were resumed at 5, and continued into the morning hours.

Miss Perkins had conferences yesterday with the manufacturers and with Coleman Claherty, Akron labor organizer.

The nature of the manufacturers' proposal was not disclosed.

President Roosevelt at his press conference said Secretary Perkins had reported progress in her efforts, but did not amplify on prospects for a final settlement.

Miss Perkins herself told newspapermen that the outlook was not as dark as it was Thursday night after her first conference with the manufacturers.

Whether President Roosevelt would take a hand in the negotiations remained a subject for speculation among observers here. His eagerness to maintain the truce that has generally prevailed since last fall was shown, however, by the close touch he kept on the parleys through Miss Perkins.

Monday Walkout Rumored.

The refusal of the Goodrich and Firestone companies to allow the labor relations board to hold employes' elections in their factories are the fundamental strike issues.

After the board ordered the election, those companies held them up by asking the Circuit Court of Appeals to review the board's orders. The Goodyear Co. also is involved in the strike threat proceedings.

Department officials said yesterday they understood the strike was set for Monday. Neither Coleman Claherty, federation organizer in Akron, nor William Green, A. F. of L. president, would confirm this, however.

Early in the afternoon, Miss Perkins and Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary, started negotiations with Claherty after he had held a long conference with Green. Miss Perkins left after an hour for a Cabinet meeting, but McGrady and Claherty were together throughout the afternoon.

"Not So Black."

"We had a very interesting and in some ways helpful talk," Miss Perkins said of the morning conference with the manufacturers.

"They are showing an effort to be helpful and are standing by. It does not look as black in my mind as it did last night."

In another labor case, Secretary Ickes yesterday ordered the American Petroleum Co., Houston, Tex., to recognize the National Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America as its employes' collective bargaining agents.

U. S. Action Threatened.

He approved a decision of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board declaring that if the company did not comply with the order by April 29, "the case will be referred to the proper governmental agency for further action."

This could be either the Justice Department for prosecution on charges of violating Section 7 (a) of the recovery act, or the Petroleum Administrative Board for removal of the firm's Blue Eagle.

Employe elections conducted successively by the American Petroleum Co. and the Petroleum Labor Policy Board had resulted in victory of the union over the company's employes representation plan, but the company had insisted that bargaining representatives "must be bona-fide employes."

Studebaker Plans A Census of Youth

Study Would Cover Young People in 60 Cities.

A youth census in 60 cities to obtain scientific information about young people between 16 and 24 years to help them obtain employment after leaving school was projected yesterday by John W. Studebaker, Federal education commissioner.

At the same time Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, introduced in the House a bill providing for a census to be taken this year of population, occupations, unemployment, employment and for other purposes.

One of the reasons for the bill, it was explained, is lack of satisfactory data on unemployment. Estimates on this matter are widely in conflict.

Fish Calls Relief Bill Mammoth Slush Fund

Indianapolis, April 12 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, charged in a speech here tonight that the $4,880,000,000 relief bill just passed by the national Congress "is just another slush fund to be used for campaign purposes a year from now."

Representative Fish referred to the $4,880,000,000 relief bill as "the alleged relief bill" and asserted the transferring of "the control of the purse strings to the President upon his own arrogant demand is actually a change in our form of government without the consent of the governed."

Senators Balk At Eccles Plan Of Bank Power

President May Be Asked to Defend Strengthening Federal Reserve.

Prospects that the Senate Banking and Currency Committee will divide the Eccles banking bill and defer action on the section giving the Federal Reserve Board increased control over currency and credit yesterday caused such concern in Administration circles that President Roosevelt may be asked to intervene.

This became known when a high authority revealed he had become reconciled to a division of the bill by the Senate Banking and Currency sub-committee headed by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia. The Administration is opposed to any division of the bill, fearing it might mean sidetracking the sweeping Federal Reserve provisions.

The bill as submitted to Congress consisted of three parts. Title I provided for revisions in the Federal deposit insurance law; Title II gave the Federal Reserve Board much greater authority than it now exercises over the Reserve banks, open market operations, eligibility of paper for discount and deposit reserve requirements; and Title III contained miscellaneous and, for the most part, technical and minor changes in the national banking act and Federal Reserve act.

Eccles Hearing Monday.

"I think it very likely Titles I and III will be taken from the bill and handled separately," Senator Glass said, but he did not predict what would happen to Title II.

The Virginian said his sub-committee would commence hearings Monday on the nomination of Marriner S. Eccles to be governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and probably would start hearings on the pending bill later in the week.

The House Banking and Currency Committee has completed hearings on the bill and is expected to report it to the House within a few days. The House committee has decided, it is understood, to keep the three divisions of the bill intact.

Meanwhile it was learned that when the Federal Reserve Advisory Council—consisting of one representative of each Reserve bank—was here several days ago, it severely criticized several of the proposed changes in the organization of the Reserve system.

Bankers in Fight.

Gov. Eccles, it is further understood, attempted to dissuade the group from their opposition but was unsuccessful. The council is now preparing a report for submission to the reserve board outlining its objections to the bill, said to be similar to those recently raised by the American Bankers Association.

The executive council of the American Bankers Association will hold its spring meeting Monday at Augusta, Ga., and is expected before adjourning to unloose further criticism of the Eccles proposals. At the same time it is reported that the Eccles bill as finally drafted was not submitted to the Federal Reserve Board until after it was made public and that several members of that body do not approve all the controversial sections Title II contains.

Gov. Eccles ardently favors these provisions, subject to some changes he proposed to the House committee when he appeared before it, and he is ready to battle for his bill. It is possible that he may appeal to President Roosevelt to come to his aid in trying to keep the measure intact.

Incidentally, the President has never publicly shown the enthusiasm for the measure displayed by Gov. Eccles. When Mr. Roosevelt sent the measure to Capitol Hill he described it as "a tentative draft" of the Administration's objectives and subsequently said that it in general represented the reforms he wished to make in the Nation's banking structure.

On the other hand, it is reported that it was at the President's direction that all proposed banking legislation be put into one bill and for that reason the financial officers of the Government look to Mr. Roosevelt to defend the proposition of keeping the measure intact.

Separation of the Federal reserve proposals from the less controversial provisions affecting the deposit insurance corporation and the National banks enhances the prospects of passage of those sections, it was contended on Capitol Hill. Opposition to Mr. Eccles' proposals is said to be so bitter that if left intact the entire measure may be blocked.

Roosevelt Rebuffs Governors On Japan Cotton Cloth Curb

Joint Committee Will Study Troubles of Textile Trade, Headed by Roper; Appeal to Congress Now Foreseen.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Meeting with a group of New England Governors and representatives, President Roosevelt yesterday indicated he would not restrict Japanese cotton cloth importations by minimizing the seriousness of this competition on the business of American textile mills.

Having previously set his face against elimination of the cotton processing tax, the President apparently gave the New England group little satisfaction when they presented him with a lengthy list of grievances and a story of the rapid deterioration of the textile industry in the Northeast.

Mr. Roosevelt after discussing the situation with the complaining group for three-quarters of an hour turned them over to four of his Cabinet officers. Out of that meeting came the announcement a joint committee of New England members of Congress and textile manufacturers would work with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper in an effort to find a solution for the industry's difficulties.

Met with what amounted to a rebuff at the White House, the New England textile interests were expected to concentrate pressure on Congress in an effort to force action from that end of Pennsylvania avenue, with repeal of the processing tax as the chief objective.

Congressional agitation became active yesterday when Representative Isaac Bacharach (Republican), of New Jersey, introduced a bill providing a 50 per cent excise tax on all textile importations made wholly or partially of cotton. He said his proposal was designed to shut the Japanese product out of this market.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, announced he proposed to ask the House Ways and Means Committee to name a subcommittee at once to investigate cotton importations.

The governors' committee discussed the situation facing the New England mills with the congressional delegations of the States affected. Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts proposed a prohibitive duty on cotton cloth equal to the cost of American production plus 10 per cent. This found favor with the congressional group and was included in the recommendations made to the President.

After he had conferred with the Governors, President Roosevelt revealed at his press conference that he had challenged their contentions as to the serious effect of Japanese importations on the industry here. He indicated that he regarded the basis of many of the textile manufacturers' complaints as propaganda.

Mr. Roosevelt said there was no doubt that cotton cloth imports from Japan had increased rapidly within the last three or four months. He pointed out these imports in December totaled about 2,200,000 square yards as compared with a previous monthly average of 500,000 square yards.

In January, he said, imports of Japanese cotton cloth totaled approximately 3,300,000 square yards, and in February 4,800,000 square yards. If the Japanese imports continued at this rate for the remainder of the year, he added, the annual total would be about 49,000,000 square yards. But that figure, he said, represented but seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the total American production for 1933.

He said if the increase in the imports from Japan continued to be accelerated with indications that the annual total might be much higher, he would cross that bridge when he came to it. He indicated, however, he saw no reason at this time for any restrictive action against Japan. Moreover he further indicated that he had not yet found merit in any of the proposals made by the textile group.

The Governor's committee laid before the President a statement contending that industrial employment in Massachusetts had dropped from 668,000 in 1923 to 399,000 in 1933; pay rolls had dropped from about $800,000,000 in 1923 to $355,000,000 in 1933, and that employment in the cotton goods industry had decreased from 114,000 in 1923 to 45,000 in 1933.

The number of spindles operating in Massachusetts 15 years ago was about 37,000,000, whereas now there are only 10,000,000 spindles in place, of which only about 6,000,000 are in active operation, the statement asserted. Massachusetts, it was contended, was an accurate reflection of what has happened in all the New England States.

Statement Is Gloomy.

"Conditions in the textile industry have grown steadily worse since 1933, except for a temporary improvement at the time of the adoption of the textile code," the statement explained, adding; "There is every indication that the cotton textile industry will cease to be a New England industry unless competition from Japanese-made goods is speedily ended and immediate adjustment is made of governmental regulation of industry."

Specific recommendations proposed by the committee were:

Adoption of a duty equivalent to the cost of American production plus 10 per cent on manufactured textiles.

A similar prohibition on all goods soil of our farm land is blown or washed away, if our mountains are denuded and if our rivers become alternate trickles and torrents."

Graf Damaged, Takes Off Later for Home

Rio de Janeiro, April 12 (UP).—The Condor Syndicate announced tonight that the Graf Zeppelin had taken off from Recife on its return trip to Europe on schedule despite a mishap which damaged the dirigible earlier in the day.

Recife (Pernambuco), Brazil, April 12 (UP).—The Graf Zeppelin, German dirigible, was damaged in landing here today from one of its regular Trans-Atlantic passenger-mail flights.

The dirigible missed its regular landing field because of fog and tried to descend on a football field. As it settled towards the ground, the dirigible struck a house, damaging the main gondola, twisting the rudder slightly and bending the propeller.

Depression All Bookkeeping, Ad Session Told

It Has Nothing to Do With Distribution, Production, Kettering Says.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—The depression is merely a matter of bookkeeping, Charles F. Kettering, vice president in charge of research of General Motors Corporation, told the convention of the American Association of Advertising Agencies here tonight.

It has nothing to do with nature, distribution or production, he said.

Speaking of his work as a research engineer, Mr. Kettering declared, "Our gang are simply industrial prospectors."

He said, "We have today a great many perpetual motion economic machines that haven't been recognized as such." He defined perpetual motion as "getting something for nothing."

"We have a great many people," he said, "who want to divide what we have. We don't want long division. We want multiplication.

"We are trying to overcome mistakes of the last generation which says we must use things we don't want and don't need.

Sees Bright Future.

"I don't like to see people running down the future. The future to me is very, very rosy. We are going through a thing called moulting. We are going to throw off the old shell and get a new one.

"All," he said, "that I know about business is that we must have a product." He suggested that 1 per cent of amount spent for advertising be used in improving the product.

Woman Is Found Burned to Death

Police investigating the mysterious deat hof an unidentified colored woman in the 2000 block of Eighth street last night reported their belief that she was burned to death when hit by a lamp thrown at her by a colored man.

Responding to a call, police found the woman's body in the back yard. The house was on fire. After the blaze had been extinguished fragments of a broken lamp were found in the house.

Mrs. Kettering Solves Problem Of Keeping a Genius Happy

Is Something of a Genius Herself in Handling of Husband.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—How to be happy though married to one of the world's greatest inventive geniuses and how to keep the inventive genius happy—that's Mrs. Charles F. Kettering's problem and has been for 30 years.

Her remarkable success in solving it is apparent to every one who knows "Boss Kett" and his vibrant, youthful-appearing wife; "Boss Kett," who invented the self-starter, spark plugs, Delco lighting, streamlined Diesel engines and numerous other mechanical devices which have gone a long way toward making twentieth century living the high-geared affair it is today; "Boss Kett," who is vice president of General Motors Corporation, in charge of research, and "Boss Kett's" wife as Irish as a shamrock, with a smile continuously hovering on her lips, with a joke always on the tip of her tongue, with a warm friendliness which reaches out and encompasses everybody who comes near her.

Making a go of her marriage has never struck Mrs. Kettering as being a problem. She is Mr. Kettering's first and only sweetheart. They met under unusually romantic circumstances in her home town of Ashland, Ohio; were engaged four years, then were married and have been living happily ever after. It's as simple as that to the wife of the man who is frequently called the second Edison.

A Genius Too.

But after talking with Mrs. Kettering for an hour or so, first quietly in her room at the Greenbrier, then snatching at ribbons of conversation as she held the center of a distinguished group of men and women in the hotel's lounge, one began to suspect her of being a genius too; a genius with a prodigious talent for understanding, for making everyone comfortable.

She learned long ago, she confided, not to try to understand the things Mr. Kettering does along scientific and mechanical lines. He never talks over his inventions with her, and she never asks questions. When he is feverishly working out some problem he withdraws into himself, is surrounded by a veil of abstraction. She leaves him alone. If he doesn't want to talk, that's all right. She admitted, however, that she does try to persuade him to eat. When the time of abstraction is over neither one mentions it. It is as if it had never happened.

MRS. CHARLES F. KETTERING.

Nor does Mrs. Kettering try to take her husband's mind off his work when he comes home in the evening by giving him a recital of what her friends said at the bridge party that afternoon, how much truoble she's having with the cook, or the time she had finding a hat that suited her. In all his 30 years of marriage Mr. Kettering has never had to sit down in the evening and listen to gossip. Mrs. Kettering has seen to that.

It is her job, she believes, to make a comfortable home for her husband.

"Why, he doesn't know any more than a stranger what I pay the servants," she said. "He takes no interest in finances. It's up to me to look after the expenses of running our household. I buy his shirts, his socks, even his ties for him. He can't be bothered with things like that."

And when Mr. Kettering said years ago his idea of a comfortable home was a place where a man could put his feet in a chair without worrying about the upholstery, Mrs. Kettering took him at his word.

"I've had to have the house done over three times," she laughed. "But what does that matter?"

She likes parties, gaiety. He doesn't. So they lead a quiet life as a rule. She plays bridge with her women friends while he's away during the day. That's enough social life for her, she insists. Often when he comes home in the evening he wants music.

When they were living in their hilltop home in Dayton, Ohio, she usually played the organ for him. Now that they have an apartment at the Book Cadillac in Detroit, it's piano. She loves to play. He never tires of listening. And ideas for at least two of his inventions, the self-starter and Delco lighting, came to him while he was sitting quietly, listening to his wife play for him alone.

Music had a good deal to do with bringing them together 34 years ago. Mrs. Kettering, then a rosy-cheeked colleen named Olive Williams, was organist for the Lutheran Church in Ashland. One evening as she was on her way to the church to practice, young Charlie Kettering, strolling along with another youth, passed her. He had never paid much attention to girls but the bright-eyed colleen attracted him. He asked to meet her. The youth with him refused to introduce him to Olive. She was already engaged to a young man in New York. Besides, she had broken enough hearts in Ashland.

A few nights later, Charlie Kettering, visiting in a neighboring town, chanced to tell a man friend of the wonderful girl he had seen and hoped to meet. Said the man friend: "Why, Olive Williams is my cousin. We'll call her up long distance and you can talk to her."

"And so," laughed Olive Williams Kettering, "I met him over the telephone. He had quite a way with him, I remember. Soon after the telephone conversation he came out to our house to put in a transmitter so some relatives out in the country could hear me play the piano. But I was out when he came. Later my father told me I should call up the young man and thank him for his work. Father was director of the telephone company in Ashland. Charlie worked for the company.

"Well, I called him up and the minute he spoke I realized he was the one who had called me long distance a short time before. I suggested he listen to me play through the transmitter. He said he liked his music at closer range. And so he came over. That's the way it all started."

And now they've been 30 years married. Their son, Eugene, has a baby boy named Charles F. Kettering 2d

2,000 Students Here in Strike Against War

G. W. President and Rep. Maverick Row Over Marvin's Attitude.

Representative Maverick took issue with Dr. Marvin.

Maverick Raps Marvin.

"The idea of Communism having anything to do with the antiwar demonstration is silly, and I told Dr. Marvin I had no desire to talk to him about that," stated Maverick.

"I told Dr. Marvin that if the meeting meant that students must cut classes, or in any way violated the rules of the university, I would not speak. He said this was true, and I didn't go.

"I think he has handled the entire affair in a very silly, unwise manner. I will address the students anywhere off the campus and say anything I please," added Maverick, who served overseas during the World War, and won the Silver Star and Purple Heart citations.

Substituting for the congressional speakers at George Washington were Chester Williams, former secretary of the National Student Federation of Amerca; Jesse MacKnight, of the R. O. T. C., representing the National Council for the Prevention of War; John Coggins, of the student group for Academic Freedom for Strikers and Miss Jean Scott, and C. Gurewitz, both of the National Student League.

Students Protest.

A resolution was sent Dr. Marvin, protesting his "action in denying us the privilege of hearing our scheduled speaker, Representative Maverick."

Representing the anti-strike committee were C. T. R. Bohannan, who brought with him four students in R. O. T. C. uniforms; George Parker, a premedical student, and Al Waters, who said, "we should have bigger and better wars."

At American University all classes were called off at 11 a. m. and a special assembly was held, at which Jack Hoover, president of the student council, presided.

The principal speaker was former Representative Jeanette Rankin, of Montana, now with the National Council for the Prevention of War.

"I am ashamed of my generation," declared Miss Rankin, who was the first woman member of Congress and who cast her ballot against war 18 years ago, "for we have not yet removed war from the civilized world. The task is for you, the younger generation, to do."

Howard University students left their classes at the appointed hour, and paraded with banners on the campus. Many of them heard addresses by Maurice Gates, of the League for Industrial Democracy, and Lionel Florent.

Four women and two men, representing six organizations, called at the White House yesterday morning and left a petition for President Roosevelt in the hands of Marvin McIntyre, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary.

They said they represented the National Council of Methodist Youth, the Student League for Industrial Democracy, the American Youth Congress, the National Student League, the American League Against War and Fascism and the Inter-Seminary Group.

The strike proved a boomerang at the University of Maryland. The drill period of the R. O. T. C. unit, set for the time of the strike, was better attended than ever, with few absentees reported.

A quiet demonstration was staged at Western High School, and at Roosevelt students gathered in the auditorium and held a panel discussion on peace.

Across the Nation student peace strikers marched and spoke, shivered in chilly spring rain and booed and brawled.

Chicago Students Riot.

Chicago University's peace meeting broke up in a free-for-all fight that brought police. No one was seriously injured.

An assemblage of 3,000 students at the University of Minnesota, in Minneapolis, heard Gov. Floyd Olson declare that no government has any right to force its citizens to bear arms in an aggressive war.

At Dartmouth, Ramon Guthrie, professor of French, told the students of his experiences in the World War, and branded statements of war-time posters, "Your Country Needs You," as lies.

Eight hundred Smith College girls, in Northampton, Mass., cut classes to attend an anti-war meeting.

University of Virginia students applauded Joseph B. Matthews, former editor of the New Republic, when he told them "A strike against war is a strike for culture and peace against brutality."

At the College of the City of New York a hall seating 1,500 was filled. New York University had 1,500 demonstrators. Many New York high schools had strike meetings and total attendance in the New York area was estimated at 30,000.

Vassar College for Girls attended almost en masse a program at which the president and students spoke. More than 2,500 joined a peace demonstration at Western Reserve University at Cleveland. St. Lawrence University dismissed classes to permit students to attend.

The University of Pennsylvania and Temple University dismissed classes at noon to permit perhaps 15,000 students to participate.

Two girls at Hunter College, New York, were suspended for strike organization activities, but 1,000 of the student body walked out in defiance of school authorities and met in the rain.

About 150 students at the University of Illinois at Champaign left classes. At Milwaukee, students of State Teachers College and the extension department of the University of Wisconsin formed a strike group of 2,500.

Two Girls Are Beaten.

School authorities at Los Angeles Junior College, where two girls were beaten, tried to drown out speakers in the student crowd of 1,500 by speaking through a loudspeaker system concealed on the roof of the administration building. The group was dispersed when water sprinklers were turned on.

Rain dampened the enthusiasm of 500 Yale student strikers, who listened to a few short speeches and then scurried for shelter.

Anti-war demonstrators at the University of Wisconsin at Madison split into two groups, offering competing programs, when the anti-war committee was accused of Communism.

In the Pittsburgh area demonstrants numbered more than 1,200 from the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech and Pennsylvania College for Women, but were only a small fraction of enrolled students.

Wayne University, Detroit, mustered 500 strikers; the University of Minnesota, 2,000; Dartmouth, 500, and Brown University, at Providence, R. I., 1,300.

The entire student body was dismissed at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex., to attend a meeting. A quiet meeting on the University of Kansas campus was attended by 1,000 and 1,100 University of Texas students participated in a mild demonstration.

Student Head Joins.

Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College at Winter Park, Fla., and a personal friend of the late Woodrow Wilson, joined his 150 students in their "peace strike." He walked out of the classrooms with them to the shores of Lake Virginia, where he told them they should realize their power to prevent war. "We are headed straight for another war," he warned.

In a heated chapel meeting, a two-thirds majority of the students at Southwestern University, Memphis, Tenn., adopted a resolution demanding abolition of military training in colleges and high schools.

When 1,000 students at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, joined the strike, they were told by President Frank P. Graham: "Go to it; I am all for you."

Approximately 14 per cent of the enrollment of Vanderbilt University, Peabody College and Scarritt College, or a total of 250 students, attended a joint, quiet demonstration meeting at Nashville, Tenn.

Only 100 students, or 5 per cent of the enrollment, joined the "strike" at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

Prison Abuses Denied By Justice Officials

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials yesterday joined Warden James A. Johnston in denying charges of a former inmate that Federal prisoners, including Al Capone, were being driven to insanity because of "inhuman treatment" at the Alcatraz Island prison off San Francisco.

The charges were made at Chehalis. Wash., by Verill H. Rapp.

Department officials said Alacatraz was used only for "difficult cases," and that the most severe penalty there was "brief periods of from three to ten days in solitary confinement."

Compromise Bill On Bonus Offered

Sen. Thomas Would Advance Maturity to 1937.

By the United Press.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, offered a currency expansion compromise bonus bill in the Senate yesterday in an effort to meet some of President Roosevelt's strongest objections to this type of legislation.

The measure proposes to move up the date of maturity of the adjusted service certificates from 1945 to April 6, 1937 and calls for the issuance of more than $2,000,000,000 in non-interest bearing Treasury notes to finance the payment. Veterans cashing their certificates before the date of maturity would face a lower interest penalty.

Veterans not injured in the World War would be compelled to accept payment as fulfillment of all governmental obligations, blocking later pension claims.

Public Health Aids Outlined

Social Agencies Committee Hears H. W. Green.

The public health man must concentrate his program where morality is high, Howard Whipple Green, secretary of the Cleveland Health Council, declared yesterday in a talk before the research committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

"In order to do this intelligently," Mr. Green declared, "he must be cognizant of the character of the population in each section of the city as well as the morbidity and mortality experienced in these sections. The social worker deals with the poor and those in trouble. Without a thorough understanding of the environment he is working blindly."

In all these studies, he continued, the census tract with its definite boundaries is invaluable in selecting different sections of the community for study.

Relief Inquiry Asked in Fight By Illinois Unit

Commission Charges Plot to Discredit It, Asks U. S. Action.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—The Illinois emergency relief commission tonight voted to request the United States district attorney, State's attorney and attorney general to investigate its work and an alleged "deliberate conspiracy bordering on criminal libel" to discredit it.

The resolution asked that Federal authorities conduct the scrutiny of Federal funds and the State's attorney the investigation of State appropriations.

The action was taken after a letter from Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the commission, was read. It charged reproductions of relief checks in a Chicago newspaper had left pertinent parts deleted. The deleted portions, Reynolds charged, would have shown checks, which the newspaper alleged were disbursed irregularly, were either withheld or returned to the commission and were never cashed.

The tenor of the protested reproductions, the letter charged, was to indicate relief funds had been unnecessarily wasted.

The criticism of the commission has been expressed in varying degrees, principally from political sources, since its inception. Recent accusations have alleged waste, duplication and shoddy management. The organization has handled millions of dollars since 1932.

Reynolds commented the number of checks withheld indicated how meticulously relief irregularities were checked by the commission.

Mellon Hearing On Tax Claims Will Move Here

Announcement Is Made After Day Spent on Bethlehem Merger.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 12—The Government shifted its attack in the A. W. Mellon income tax case today to the merger of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation with Bethlehem Steel in 1931.

Bethlehem acquired the $21,000,000 steel fabricating business of McClintic-Marshall in exchange for some of its common stock and bonds, some 40 days after the company had divested itself of $4,000,000 in assets by formation of the Union Construction Co.

In seeking $3,089,000 additional taxes from the former Secretary of the Treasury, the Government has charged that the Bethlehem transaction was no merger but a sale and that therefore the entire $21,000,000 should be treated as a capital gain and be taxed. Mellon owned 30 per cent of McClintic-Marshall.

Late in the day Ernest H. Van Fossan, presiding member of the Tax Appeals Board, announced that after the evidence is completed in Pittsburgh—in about two weeks—the hearing will move to Washington. Earlier it had been agreed to go to New York for testimony of 20 Mellon witnesses regarding valuation testimony of McClintic-Marshall and about the $3,000,000 in paintings which Mellon gave to a trust company and on which he is asking deductions. Under the latest plan, these witnesses will be heard in Washington.

Just before the hearing ended its eighth week, R. H. Schlotman, assistant controller of Bethlehem Steel, was called by F. R. Shearer, Government counsel, to tell what he knew of the merger.

Schlotman testified that about the middle of November, 1930, he conferred with Bethlehem attorneys in New York regarding the proposed McClintic-Marshall merger.

Shearer has tried to show in cross-examination of Mellon witnesses that certain property not wanted by Bethlehem was transferred from McClintic-Marshall to the Union Construction Co. between the time that concern was formed on December 30, 1930, and the completion of the merger on February 10, 1931.

His argument is that this would help prove his contention that the formation of Union Construction and the merger were but two steps in one transaction—a sale.

The Moral At Rockville.

Washington is horrified by the accident at Rockville. Disasters of this sort seem doubly terrible because they are so unnecessary. And the ultimate responsibility for this tragedy extends behind any negligence which inquiry may attribute to either bus operator or locomotive engineer.

Ghastly as this accident appears when viewed at such close range, it is by no means unique. Continually the newspapers record similar instances in which children traveling to or from their classrooms are slaughtered by locomotives plowing through motor buses. Drivers are frequently negligent. Engineers sometimes forget to sound the alarm before their thundering trains streak across public highways. And what is even more serious, thousands of grade crossings are inadequately safeguarded.

It seems to be impossible entirely to eliminate human frailties in situations of this kind. The most cautious driving will not entirely remove the inevitable hazards encountered everywhere that trunk railway lines bisect automobile highways. So long as this menace exists statisticians can calculate, often with grim accuracy, the probable number of accidents comparable to that at Rockville.

Out of this pitiful destruction of life should come an imperative demand for the elimination of death traps on the highways. And the moral is particularly appropriate at this moment, when the Administration is devising ways and means of spending $4,880,000,000 on work-relief projects. The elimination of grade crossings obviously affords a fruitful field in which a very considerable portion of this fund may be most profitably invested.

Projects of this kind require a large amount of direct labor and construction materials. They do not throw the Government in competition with private enterprise. On the contrary they would relieve the railroads of an expenditure the carriers can not afford. More important still, they serve an urgent social need. Maintenance of conditions which encourage such horrible accidents as this one at Rockville can not possibly be justified when the Government is preparing to ladle out billions of dollars on public improvements.

Anyone familiar with the highways about Washington will be able to think of many crossings where death is always lurking. Similar conditions exist in nearly every part of the country. The Administration could not begin expenditure of its enormous work-relief fund more effectively than in the removal of these intolerable hazards.

The Student Strike.

In Europe the Class of 1914 has been called to arms. The regiments now going through maneuvers are largely made up of 21-year-olds. Yesterday in this country something more than 100,000 of this same Class of 1914 took part in widespread demonstrations against war. And except for occasional tinges of red, indicating Communist agencies that joined the procession after it was under way, the movement must be set down as an altogether spontaneous and deeply sincere affair.

No one has a better right to organize against war than these students. For if their fears materialize and it comes to fighting, they will be the ones whose lives will be wrecked first. Theirs is the right to demonstrate, and if they choose a "striking" technique there is none who should say them nay so long as order is maintained. This appears generally to have been the case in yesterday's assemblies.

The students, whose concern for world and national affairs marks a new and commendable departure in school interests, will do well to bear in mind all aspects of their new activity. They must take full caution not to abuse the rights afforded them by American freedom. In many countries of the world today such efforts to influence governmental policy would be utterly out of the question. Further, such anti-militaristic demonstrations have in the past paved the way to iron-fisted dictatorships. Germany and Italy are cases in point: both countries experienced general pacifist reactions after the war, the impractical idealism of which was taken full advantage of by militant factions in their armed ascents to power.

Let the slogan be "Construct, Don't Crab!" In nearby Maryland students took yesterday's demonstration as an opportunity to militate against the recently passed teacher's oath bill, which they believed (and rightly) undesirable. And finally, wise leadership is needed to control the ardor of the ranks. Tact will be necessary to avoid inciting the indignation of those who may, with equal sincerity, think very differently on the highly debatable question of the pursuit of peace. A real liberalism must be the order. Otherwise this impressive campaign will quickly defeat its own ends.

On The Wrong Track.

The Administration is being urged by representatives of the cotton textile industry to place cotton cloth from Japan upon a quota basis. As is often the case, the temptation is strong to blame other countries for industrial distress that is largely of our own making. The Japanese have undoubtedly been rapidly increasing their sales of certain kinds of cotton cloth to the United States. But, despite the marked percentage increase in such imports, they constitute a negligible proportion of our domestic output of cotton cloth.

In 1934, for example, American cotton mills produced over 7,000,000,000 square yards of cotton cloth and approximately one-sixth of that yardage consisted of bleached goods, which accounts for the bulk of Japanese imports. In February, the last month for which statistics are available, Japan shipped 4,800,000 square yards of cotton cloth to the United States, while her general imports (including warehoused goods) totaled 5,700,000 yards. Even if this rate of importation should be maintained or surpassed, it seems obvious that Japan will not make much impression upon the American market, although indirectly low-priced imports will have a depressing effect upon the domestic industry.

The increase in the volume of imported Japanese cottons is significant in view of the high duties that have to be paid upon these goods, which are also subject to compensating duties imposed to offset the domestic processing tax upon cotton. Cheap Japanese labor and excessive depreciation of the yen help to explain Japan's increasing inroads in this country as well as in foreign markets where she has acquired export trade at our expense and particularly at the expense of the British.

The present agitation against Japan, however, is primarily the result of conditions resulting from Administration policies that have advanced the cost of raw cotton, added to the operating expenses of cotton mills under the codes, and thus made inevitable advances in the prices of finished goods of American manufacture. The total amount of cotton goods imported into this country last year was insignificant, and if we were to establish an embargo upon all foreign purchases of cotton cloth our mills would still find their outlets inadequate because prices have outstripped consumer purchasing power as a result of the activities of the AAA and the NRA.

Since Japan is a heavy buyer of American cotton, the imposition of quotas upon Japanese cotton goods might mean that our farmers would lose more than our textile manufacturers would gain by such action. Certainly our situation would not be improved by resort to policies that invite retaliation on the part of a country that is now buying more from this country than she sells to us.

Our basic trouble, of course, is due to efforts to raise prices of export commodities and raw materials far above world levels. Unless we eventually modify these practices, it will become necessary to cut ourselves off to an increasing extent from contacts with the rest of the world, in order to protect American producers against the competition of nations with lower costs.

While this may prove to be the outcome of continued reliance upon scarcity-induced high prices, it is quite certain that such methods will not enable us to raise our living standards and restore prosperity. On the contrary, we should find ourselves confronted by a progressive restriction of market outlets through gradual extinction of foreign trade.

The Impartial Attitude.

When Donald Richberg was made general counsel of the NRA in 1933 many conservative leaders of industry shook their heads sadly. They felt that their worst fears had been confirmed by the assignment of this important position to a man who had fought the battles of organized railway labor so vigorously and adroitly. Their suspicion that the NRA might be used as an agency for increasing the power of labor without granting employers coveted privileges of control over prices and production became akin to certainty. Mr. Richberg was a symbol of all that they most feared and disapproved.

Time often brings great changes in men's opinion of those who hold high office, even if the men themselves remain unchanged. Hence it is not surprising that Mr. Richberg, as head of the NRA, has now become for some critics a man bent on shielding employers against the punishments they are supposed to deserve. Senator Nye, for instance, is indignant, because Mr. Richberg has not shown a proper eagerness to chastise a manufacturer of munitions who, the Senator alleges, has refused to negotiate with recognized labor organizations. Mr. Richberg's excuse is that he prefers to try to adjust differences before appearing before the Senate Munitions Committee to prefer complaints.

If Senator Nye had had Mr. Richberg's experience in trying to adjust disputes between labor and capital, he might not be so ready to pass judgment upon the rights and wrongs of a particular case. A competent negotiator must be able to see both sides of a question, no matter which party to a controversy he happens to represent. No doubt, Mr. Richberg's experience has helped him to take a more impartial view of the problems that confront the recovery administration than would be possible for a man who had never helped to fight the battles of either labor or capital.

A Confused Beginning.

Various reasons may be advanced for the preference shown the CCC in allocation of the work-relief fund. The CCC rates high among the New Deal's emergency organizations in point of successful performance. Director Fechner has already completed plans to double the strength of his conservation corps. And the scheme is easy. It requires less constructive thinking than most of the projects to be financed through the $4,880,000,000 appropriation.

Explanations of this sort are not, however, entirely satisfactory. The CCC has been spending about $325,000,000 per year. At that rate it has been able, according to Mr. Fechner's recent report, to advance forestry and park development from 10 to 20 years ahead of the normal program. No doubt the CCC will continue to do good work. But the more it accomplishes the sooner will come the time when the Government must face the problem of disbanding a CCC army greater than the entire population of Washington.

Apparently the President seeks to make the CCC serve as a part of the "pump-priming" venture. His allocation of $600,000,000 to that agency coincides with announcement of intention to spend as much as possible of the enormous work-relief fund during the next fourteen months. The coincidence leads inevitably to the assumption that this allotment has been made more in the interests of distributing money than in thoughtful conservation of the country's forests.

It should be noted, however, that the CCC does not lend itself to "pump-priming." A large portion of its expenditures goes into wages at the rate of $30 per month, into food, clothing and miscellaneous supplies. Moreover, the CCC demand for construction materials is relatively trivial. Consequently, its stimulating effect on business and industry is meager in comparison with that of some other types of public work. Furthermore, only 300,000 men are to be enrolled on the CCC allotment of $600,000,000. On that ratio the four billions altogether available for work-relief will fall far short of the objective of taking 3,500,000 unemployed from the relief rolls.

If the "pump-priming" theory is practical, which many economists question, it must stimulate private enterprise so that normal employment will automatically take the place of artificial jobs created by the Government. Obviously no private employer is going to hire 600,000 foresters when the CCC allotment is spent. And since their activities in the meantime will contribute very little, if anything to the country's industrial tempo, it is difficult to see how expansion of the CCC will have any appreciable effect upon the basic problem of recovery.

Once more it appears that the Administration is going forward without fully considering whether the means it employs will be effective in achieving the much-advertised objective. The complete work-relief program is yet to be revealed, but the CCC segment, which will require more than one-seventh of the gigantic fund available, offers little encouragement to those who realize how essential it is that this program shall not fail.

Domesticity On The Hoof.

Without benefit of Emily Post or the aid of a lovelorn column, Uganda, one of Great Britain's most primitive colonies, is apparently succeeding in solving an extremely delicate problem. Bachelors in this country, and even a few husbands, may be inclined to differ with the solution, but it suits the Ugandans and they are the ones who have to live in Uganda.

Briefly, the question before the protectorate is—how much is a wife worth? After much discussion and numerous test cases, the stable price handed down by the court of chieftains is five cows! That is, provided, of course, that both the girl and the cattle are on the hoof. This ruling is intended to dispense with unfair competition, haggling by the bridegroom and extortion by the girl's father.

But the point that is worrying the administrator of domestic relations in that remote outpost is what to do in case of divorce. When the bridegroom returns the bride to her paternal roof, should the father respond in kind and send back the five cows? Or should he discount something for wear and tear on his daughter and send back only two of the animals? In the last analysis, therefore, it's not what a girl is worth before she is married, but how much she depreciates afterward. If "darkest Africa" can shed any light on that question, even Judge Ben Lindsey will have to take a back seat.

Leave Train Size To I. C. C.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Several Western States are flirting with proposals for the limitation of the length of railroad trains.

This is a backward step. It is harking back to the era before the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In fact, the various conflicting laws that States were passing in those days in regard to railroad operation compelled the Federal Government to take the whole subject over.

An attempt to make a distinction between transportation within the States and through the States is impossible. Goods in transit come under the rule of interstate commerce if their ultimate destination is interstate.

Laws limiting the size of trains would cause confusion and, even if workable, they would add greatly to the cost of shipping. California shippers of perishable products would be seriously affected. If any regulation of the kind is called for it should be left to the Interstate Commerce Comission.

The Desolation Of Dust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have lived through a few major catastrophies: war, flood, earthquake. This week I crossed certain dust-storm areas of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas. And I knew that never before had I had such an overwhelming impression of final desolation, of doom inescapable, complete, as I then experienced.

Always before, there had seemed to be something to be done, there was some way of escape—there was sky, there was air. This time, though there was, I believed, something to be done, in appearance there was not—there was no air, no sky.

It was as if from outer space the fatal thick gray were sifting down, extinguishing sky, absorbing air, where the eye still could pierce the thickness, the scattered, paintless farmhouses were outlined in gray ghostliness; no cow or dog stirred, no human being moved about. If men and women, if children, had not fled this airless land, they were shut behind those ghostly doors holding cloths over nose and mouth to save throat and lungs.

There was no height left—the gray closed down over man and his fields. His world was a thin dust strip between darker grays. There was no width left—the horizons clamped their darkness close about him. Whence, one asked could come the courage even to flee—so futile effort seemed.

Was it something like this that buried lost civilizations?

More St. Patrick.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One can agree with T. J. A. Flynn that there was a papacy in the time of St. Patrick, and that the Pope sent Palladius to the Scots who inhabited the northern part of Ireland. However, in the interest of accuracy, the claim that the Pope also sent St. Patrick is not so readily admitted. The history of that early period is of course somewhat shadowy. But it may be noted that St. Patrick says nothing whatever about any such papal commission in his "Confessio"—his autobiography. Gleanings from authorities on the subject bring one to the belief that St. Patrick went to Ireland "on his own hook."

It is somewhat akin to the claim that St. Augustine took Christianity to England, whereas the venerable Bede relates the meeting of Augustine with eight bishops of the Britons who had been driven by the heathen Saxons into Wales. In short, the Christianity of St. Joseph, of Arimathea, and St. Alban was known and practiced in England several hundred years before Augustine, who converted, not the original inhabitants of England, but the invading Saxons.

Consider The Mule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a mule gets stubborn and wants to go down the wrong corn alley it's called mulish. But when the Administration goes the wrong way and persists in it, it is called leadership.

Please keep up the good work in your paper and bring out the real truth on what is going on in Washington. This used-to-be wonderful Government of ours has gotten on three flat tires under the New Deal.

First Laugh.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please thank Bargeron for me. His article on April 8 gave me the first laugh I've had in ten years.

I've sadly plowed through seas of funnies—never even a smile for me. But humor, wit, whimsy and brains, all mixed in one, give me hope.

Frank Declaration Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial of April 5, you quote Senator Tydings on the folly of producing less and less in an effort to employ more and more people. In the same paper, Mr. Thurston says we must first secure production before we can talk about distribution and quotes Mr. Hoover's criticism of the policy of scarcity pursued by his rivals, the Democrats. At first sight these ideas seem consistent if not identical.

Yet one suspects that Mr. Hoover and Senator Tydings are, in reality, far apart. Because the Senator is objecting to that very curtailment of agriculture which was the inevitable consequence of the tariff act put through under the auspices of Mr. Hoover. What he wants is an abandonment of such "supernational" policies and an expansion of agriculture.

If Mr. Hoover wants this he still has an excellent opportunity to say so and the country would be delighted to know where he stands. A frank statement from him would be preferable to criticism of his opponents for their constructive efforts to alleviate the misery caused agriculture by his surrender in 1930 to high tariffs.

Thank You.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper has many varied and pleasing parts. One column in particular I enjoy reading is "No End of Books" by Theodore Hall. It was his column of April 2 on "Spring Cleaning of the Mind" that prompted this little note of appreciation. This is a splendid bit of writing and well worth reading two or three times.

Here's wishing you and Mr. Hall continued success and may he and your other writers bring forth many more interesting articles such as this.

Too Much Brain Trust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: B. L. M., in The Post of April 9, is wondering if it would be interesting to the readers of your paper for you to write up the lives of Hopkins, Tugwell, Ickes, Wallace and, perhaps, others of the brain trust. You will please permit me to say no, it would not.

We have already heard more about them than we wanted to hear, and if you have nothing else to write about, you will just please send my paper along without any printing on it at all, and oblige.

Economic Pressure In Danzig.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of April 9 on Danzig, which is closely similar to the general impression in this country, has so far misinterpreted the conditions in Danzig, and the results of the recent election, that I can not refrain from comment.

I lived for a year and a half in Danzig, in 1930 and 1931, and was closely in touch with the situation in East Prussia, Danzig and the so-called Polish Corridor. Although there was little publicity then about the conditions, the foundations of the present situation were being laid.

The basic fact that your editorial overlooks is that the livelihood of Danzig is not based on East Prussia, but on the commerce that flows from Poland. This has always been true. Danzig is dependent on its commercial business which comes from the hinterland, formerly Russia, now Poland. The commerce of East Prussia has never supported Danzig. This commerce is small and flows through Konigsberg. Today Danzig is inside the Polish custom borders, and commerce can flow from Poland through Danzig. Yet even under these conditions, Poland has seen fit to create the port of Gydnia. Poland has likewise established new rail connections direct up the Polish Corridor to Gydnia, clear of the Danzig borders.

In case that Danzig were to vote politically so that it were possible to reattach Danzig to Germany, without wiping out the whole Corridor and thus control commerce flowing from the hinterland, it would mean that Danzig would be outside the Polish custom borders and free from any restraining Polish control. The commerce from the hinterland would then flow entirely to Gydnia. The industry and commerce of Danzig would almost entirely disappear, which would bring a very serious crisis in the lives of all these inhabitants. It was these conditions which made the Hitler government fall short of their goal of obtaining a two-thirds majority in the Danzig Senate, far more than disbelief in the Hitler policies.

The fact that the inhabitants were faced with voting away their livelihood was a serious handicap for any party to overcome. Had the question been in such a form that it would have left the Danzigers in control of the commerce flowing from the hinterland, I believe that the result would have been as overwhelming as it was in the Saar. It is a very difficult thing for a population knowingly to vote itself into a condition of starvation.

The Noble Bean.

In an earnest endeavor to get all essential legislation out of the way before the season for spring plowing is too far advanced, Michigan's House of Representatives took time the other day to designate the bean as Michigan's official vegetable. This is a touching tribute to a real benefactor. A lot of Michigan citizens get a substantial part of their living from producing beans, and a lot more by eating beans.

If the Senate and the Governor take the matter seriously and cooperate, Michigan may be the first State in the Union to have an official vegetable. The choice is fitting. Michigan for some time has been the first bean State in the Union.

So, if nothing further comes of it than this official recognition by a branch of the Legislature, something has been done to let the world know that Michigan is bean conscious.

The Post Impressionist

Going Gertrude?

Postoffice, Saturday.

HERE is a cry for help from a deserving quarter—it may be even a deserving half. When you have read it, you will understand why it has been signed with a pseudonym: indeed, you may understand what it is all about. But concerning its author, we may say merely that he is one of the Capital's most promising, and patiently performing, painters, who, as he modestly admits, "put some lousy art in the Greater Wash. exhibit."

His letter is as beautifully typewritten as if Brownie had linotyped it in a saner moment. The envelope is addressed "To The Post-Impressionist—if he is (all) there—on The Washington Post." And the signature that we are asked to append is "The Daring Young Thing on the Flying Divan."

"I still read," says he, "your Column: not because of my depraved esthetic taste, but because a habit is hard to stop. Therefore, your story on drunken drivers was pretty well digested. Nevertheless, I am still picking pieces of it from my mind, if not my teeth, and I want to tell you one thing about it and ask you another.

"In the first base, I am sorry to learn that you do not drive a car, for now I know that it was not you whom I ran into—or, rather, who ran into me. It is very tragic to discover that it was not the Post-Impressionist who knocked me down at the corner of New York avenue and Thirteenth street. Also, I didn't get the fiend's number, and, after all the stars and numbers I saw to pick from, I should have found the license of that hit-and-run terrorist. Besides, it was my fault, and it always makes me angry to be run over or into when it is an act due to carelessness on my part.

"I was merely sauntering along and using the last thin dime I had to cut the pages of Thomas Wolfe's last encyclopedia... And suddenly I bounced up and then down on the nice asphalt.

"The asphalt didn't give a bit. But the book lay a few feet away, looking quite unread and lonesome.

"But now to get to second base: back, I mean, to drunks. For I have an ulterior motive in writing, and hope it's not so low that you will ignore it.

"I suppose you will think I am drunk myself, or going Gide. Stein on you. Not so.

"I once drank, but my stomach saved me. I have tried to lasso fireplugs from speeding cars, delivered marvelous extempore speeches, made love to other men's wives (not recommended), forgotten people's names (including mine). I have probably committed other bibulous crimes which my former fellow-inebriates would recall, should you consult them. But my stomach saved me. I ascended the wagon.

"Well, I now want to rescue other sufferers. And I can't get any instruction on how to do it. The question is: Do you have a book on the Care and Feeding of Drunks?

"I have watched Steig drawings closely, and Peter Arno and even John Held—that ol' young man who is not related to Anna Held. And I have written for the catalogues of Abercrombie & Fitch, Sears-Roebuck, apple-growers, rabbit-breeders, soap premiums, exploding cigars—have perused a few chapters of Freud, Pavlov, D. H. Lawrence, Kay Boyle, Hemingway and Don Marquis, all in vain.

"I admit that these scientists are excellent for some purposes. But they don't help me in my present plight. They are absolutely silent—either from pure spite or purer ignorance—upon how to remove a drunk from the geraniums, the fish pond, the fireplace, the taxicab, the shower, all-night quick lunches, or the 'phone booth.

"There is one drunk among my so-called (so self-called) friends, who insists on singing the Toreador song, and there is another who sleeps with the coal scuttle in his arms."

In fact, I might mention a few more:

"The one who raids the ice box. The one who weeps copiously over the fact that he is drunk. The girl who falls consistently into the Potomac, regardless of season—provided she is near the Potomac. The woman who clings to the 'phone and calls people up, eventually bringing chaos and the police—or vice versa.

"All these—and I with no authoritative volume to guide me! You can see that I am in a quandary—not to say several quandaries.

"If you can't recommend a book on how I am to rescue these poor people—if none of your readers can recommend one—then I entreat you, dear Post-Impressionist, to come around and rescue the goofy buffoons yourself.

"I am miserable up here all alone on the wagon. I have to have company!"

Alas, we are not so well read—except by the Column fans—as our correspondent hopes!

French Are Wondering Where They Blundered

Nation Has Always Split On Policy Toward Germany; Teuton Philosophy Alarming.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

Paris.

FACED with the fait accompli of Germany's rearmament, the French are asking themselves with mixed feeling what their mistakes have been in the past. For many of them, France should not have been so lenient to Germany and should have shown more strength to defend the Versailles Treaty. For the others, France did not make enough concessions or, rather, she made them too late. For all Frenchmen, their country suffers from not having adopted, and clung to, one of the two policies.

There is just one point on which they all seem to be agreed. They are convinced Germany's dignity complex has become so touchy it may lead to war. They are concerned by that mysticism stirred up around Wotan and the Nordic gods. And they fear that the German leaders, some day, may choose to seek a glorious end in blood and war, like those Wagner heroes of the Niebelungen legend.

All this is expressed with considerable bitterness but in no panicky way, as by people who see the danger but keep their heads on their shoulders. They hope for the best and consider their past faults.

* * * *

MANY a Frenchman sighs with regret at the thought of a Franco-British treaty which now would seem too good to be true and which a good many years ago almost saw the light of day. It read more or less as follows:

"Considering that the French soil has been invaded twice in a lifetime and that it still suffers from the devasstation that was inflicted upon it by the enemy;

"Considering that both the populations of France and the British Empire have paid a heavy contribution of human lives and wealth to repel the German armies' invasion;

"Considering that security guarantees given France against a future invasion by Germany are indispensable to the restoration of stability in Europe, to Great Britain's security and to the world's peace—

"His Britannic Majesty and the President of the French Republic . . . have agreed that:

"Article I.—In the case of a direct and unprovoked German agression against the French territory, Great Britain will immediately side with France with her naval, military and air forces."

* * * *

This sounds almost impossible now. Yet, it is the text of a treaty which was submitted by the British Premier, Lloyd George, to his French colleague Briand, at Cannes on January 11, 1922. Briand was called back to Paris and the accord was rejected on the ground that some of its economic clauses were likely to jeopardize the reparation payments.

As Wladimir d'Ormesson, a conservative political writer, wittily puts it in Figaro: "A Frenchman always refuses to lose five francs. But he is always ready to lose half a million if he thinks he can call it an investment."

* * * *

WHEN Poincare invaded the Ruhr to obtain the payment of reparations, his showing of strength quickly lost the French public opinion's support. But two years later, when Briand shook hands with the German statesman, Stresemann, at Thoiry, a little Swiss village, he did not have more than half of the French people behind him.

So, neither a policy of strength against, nor of concessions to, Germany has ever had the French nation's unreserved following. Even now, the French feeling toward Germany is as complicated as ever, with no clear-cut edges.

The sensation caused by Germany's blunt rejection of the military clauses of the Versailes Treaty is counteracted by the realization that sooner or later Germany must be let alone; the craving for alliances is checked by the unwillingness to encircle Germany in an iron ring, as the League of Nations ideal and the hope of obtaining collective security are not dead.

* * * *

"FRANCE never felt like refusing to admit Germany's dignity," Emmanuel Berl, noted leftist writer, recently wrote. "We never thought of establishing a hierarchy of nations which would work against Germany. We never denied that Germany was the equal of any other nation by her cultural contribution, her industrial power, her demographical enthusiasm.

"We merely considered that Germany differed from other nations by her potential menace, because, while we regarded every nation as a fixed entity, metaphysically indestructible, Germany only praised the outburst which constituted a nation . . .

"No discussion, no serious conversation will be possible with Germany so long as she does not realize how terrifying her philosophy is for her neighbors.

"If Germany wants us to take her armaments as a proof that she now regards herself as second to none, no Frenchman will object. If she wants us to think that she is no more alarming than any other nation . . . no Frenchman will believe it."

* * * *

THIS average French reaction, except in very conservative circles, commands the problem of French armaments. The French Parliament recently voted that, for the next four years, French lads will serve two years instead of one to make up for the deficiency of births during the "lean" war years. This will keep the French army up to its present strength. But the French realize this strength, no matter what they do, will be inferior to German possibilities, since the "lean" years produced a little over 300,000 births a year in Germany and 120,000 in France.

Gen. Denain, French air minister, recently obtanied from parliament the authorization to modernize the French air force by spending in 1935 a $100,000,000 credit appropriated for 1936. The navy is about to build a $70,000,000, 35,000-ton cruiser. Nationalistic and military circles would ask for more credits. The Parliament, concerned with coming municipal elections, is unwilling to increase military expenditures.

Voicing the opinion of a large majority of peasants and workers, L. O. Frossard, a moderate Socialist leader, wrote a few days ago in Marianne:

It is imperative to make a choice, once and for all. We can not have both quality and quantity. It is impossible to give France, in every domain, a superiority which she can not attain because of her low birth rate and her already too heavy financial charges. There is a touch of folly in wanting, at the same time, the most numerous military effectives, the most perfectly equipped professional army, the most powerful war material, a larger navy and the fastest air force.

"France, alas, has neither the men we wished nor the billions we would. We are ready to make sacrifices. But only provided they leave us some reason to live."

9 Mexican Cities Crippled in Strike

Vera Cruz Hardest Hit by Sympathy Walkouts.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico, D. F., April 12.—Nine Mexican cities were without lights or power tonight as the result of strikes called in sympathy with the week-old walkout of power company employes in Tampico.

Hardest hit was Vera Cruz, on the Gulf of Mexico, where industry, transportation and water service were reported completely halted.

A general strike of the Workers and Peasants Union, which claims 40,000 members, was called off after President Lazaro Cardenas promised the government would help workers obtain their legal aims. Forty-five labor organizations in Tampico voted to strike April 26, however, to protest the recent federal supreme court decision allowing the Huasteca Petroleum Co., subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, to appeal against the board of conciliation and arbitration's decision requiring it to pay striking employes full salaries.

Delano Loses $20,800 Suit.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 12 (AP). Herman Acker, of Poughkeepsie, today was awarded $20,800 damages from Lyman Delano, first cousin of President Roosevelt, for injuries received while cutting a tree on the Delano estate near Barrytown. Acker, formerly employed at the estate, testified today he was crushed under the tree as it fell and was permanently crippled. He collapsed while on the witness stand.

The Safe Outlet.

AFFLICTIONS come together, my spirit shrinks and squirms, and I denounce the weather in harsh and bitter terms; then no one is affronted, no ruffled feelings smart; my language, though unwonted, can bruise no tender heart. I well might roast the banker who sold me phoney stocks, who seemed to yearn and hanker to rake in all my rocks; or I might roast the voter who spieled around and spoke, until he sold a motor that always keeps me broke; or I might roast the faker who hung and snooped around until I bought an acre of oil-producing ground. But someone then might tell them, and they would pine away, the curses that befell them would bring them to decay. And so with lungs of leather anathemas I toot, and roast the blooming weather, which doesn't care a hoot. "The weather's getting colder than weather ought to be; I have a frozen shoulder, I have a frozen knee; the weather's simply ghastly, e'en when it's best; and I denounce it vastly, it ought to be suppressed." I don't denounce my neighbors when troubles break my heart; with words as sharp as sabers I score the weather chart; and then no man is weeping because of words unkind, no delegate is keeping my adjectives in mind; there is no talk of slander among the gossip-birds, because I, in my dander, turned loose a flock of words. The weather man is smiling, a twinkle in his eye, although we keep on piling the cuss-words mountain high.

"This is twice you've forgotten the tools. You should have stuck to plumbing!"

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The National Plan.

NEW DEAL agencies along a broad front were preparing to move yesterday toward the solution of the problem of Henry. In high quarters it was said that while the problem is vexing there is no reason to consider it insoluble, not by a New Deal Government anyway.

BARGERON.

Henry, it will be recalled, is an aged Negro who sweeps up the floor of a children's dress shop in Richmond, Va. Mrs. Wise, the proprietor, was told by one NRA inspector that $12.50 a week was a gracious plenty for him and fitted in perfectly with the President's plan to uplift Southern living standards. A second NRA inspector, wanting to lift Southern living standards still higher, said Henry had to be paid $14 a week. Then, all of a sudden, Mrs. Wise realized Henry was really superannuated and, after getting a doctor's certificate that he could only do part-time work, is now paying him $9 a week.

* * * *

The matter is considered exceptionally serious in Washington because it is a rough spot in the NRA which must be ironed out before legislation extending its life can be enacted. This is because the new legislation will provide for a perfect NRA and a thing like this can not be permitted to exist. The original legislation called for a perfect NRA, but the new legislation is to say, "positively."

Donald Richberg is expected to confer with the President in an effort to get quick action on the security legislation. Henry could then be taken from the keep of NRA, it is pointed out, and placed under this legislation. This would then leave a clean and perfect NRA unless, of course, something else like it bobs up.

Fearing, however, a long delay in the enactment of the security legislation, Mr. Richberg, it is understood, plans to confer with Harry Hopkins to see if the latter can't take Henry over.

* * * *

An obstacle arises here, though, by virtue of the fact that under the $5,000,000,000 works bill Harry is to go out of the relief business. Observers yesterday recalled Mr. Roosevelt's declaration, "we must quit this relief business," or words to that effect. This, it is pointed out, would make it embarrassing for Harry to take Henry under his protective wings. The strictly politicians of the Administration agreed that Mr. Roosevelt ought to quit making cracks like this because they are bound to come back to haunt him later. In other quarters, in what might be described as the high-minded side of the New Deal as opposed to the political side, it was said Mr. Roosevelt is not the slightest interested in the politics of the matter, that he hasn't the slightest concern whether he is reelected or not and that his sole aim is to give the people a more abundant life.

There was a suggestion that Homer Cummings might be asked to decide whether Henry could not come under the provision in the work bill for remedying population maladjustments. In this event Henry could be turned over to Rex Tugwell's "Third Economy." Rex, it is not believed, would be averse to taking Henry unless it necessitated his changing it to the "Fourth Economy." He is understood to be determined to stick to "Third Economy" as a description of the "new social order" because it sounds pretty. Not much worry is entertained about getting a favorable decision from Homer but then there will remain Comptroller General McCarl.

At any rate, Richberg is believed to feel strongly that some agency should take Henry for a few weeks until he can get his new legislation. Then he will take him back. He would do the same for the other fellows, his friends assert.

While not directly interested in the placement of Henry, the National Industrial Labor Relations Board and Miss Perkins plan to look into the question of whether when Mrs. Wise said to Henry one day, "Henry, you are shiftless and not worth $14.00 a week," she was not violating Section 7(a), which prescribes the mental attitude between employe and employer. To tell Henry he was shiftless and not worth $14.00 a week, it is held by some authorities, was intimidation in that it might cause Henry not to think as well of himself as he should.

To An English Visitor

Lecturer Summarizes His Reactions To The United States After 7,000 Miles Of Traveling.

By Harrison Brown.

THE first thing that strikes the visiting Englishman is that on this side there is a more general awareness that "things are happening." That things must change, are changing and will continue to change is tacitly accepted by the American. Nor does he attach many strings to his vision of change, except a strong aversion to certain labels which have been accepted elsewhere as denoting the changes he envisages. He will, for example, eagerly admit that the economic system under which he has grown up is badly stalled. But the label "Socialist" is as much anathema over vast areas of the country as it was in Victorian England when Bernard Shaw first chose it as his telegraphic address.

I have spoken with members of school boards who listen regularly to Huey Long or Father Coughlin, but who look askance at the name of Norman Thomas on a proposed list of lecturers. Main Street is impervious to the appeal of Socialism as such, but its heart throbs wildly to the parables of the Utopian Society. Even the magnificent TVA project rouses doubts in some minds. Too bad that more people can not see it for themselves.

Another thing which must strike the wandering observer is the amount of apparently unnecessary misery in many rural districts. To find gaunt hovels perched amidst refuse dumps, and hungry children in them, is strange to one accustomed to the peasant gardens of Europe. The European peasant has always been an oppressed class, but never, except occasionally in time of war, has he actually starved. There are American tenant farmers today who are in that plight and one reason for it at least could be cured without a revolution. Too often the peasant abroad has been tied to his spot of land. The bane of the tenant farmer in America is insecurity of tenure.

The "Go-West-Young-Man" tradition persisted long after the early nineties, when the frontier was officially declared closed. Nothing could be more natural than the tenacity of this migratory habit, since all young men did not seek land. What they did all seek was opportunity, and for a long time America's claim to be a democratic country came nearest to truth of all those claims. There very nearly was equal opportunity for all. During this visit, and for the first time, I have gained the impression of a widespread realization that no open frontier remains over any horizon. North or South, East or even West, there is short time and low wages, with the hobo camp on the outskirt of the city.

AND therefore something is wrong and drastic change is required. The elderly conservative in Chicago may think only in terms of getting back to predepression days. But the more thinking of the younger generation already see him as doomed to disappointment as was a similar generation in Europe in 1919, which thought their prewar world would come to life again.

But if the younger people do not share the sad illusion of their elders, neither do they accept things as they are. For a country which has never known politics in the European sense it seems certain that European examples must be of limited value. Such popular political tradition as exists in America was summed up recently in the cartoon which showed a young man reading a letter: "Father writes from the Poorhouse to be sure to vote Democrat." This lack of any political philosophy, combined with the drama of sudden collapse and the increased tempo, is perhaps responsible for the fact that America, too, has arrived at the heyday of demagogy.

It was in Detroit that I discovered the new version of the old migratory tradition. Detroit was "nearing the peak." The springtide of production produced a boom psychology, despite the fact that, with mathematical precision, in three months time the flood would have dwindled again to a trickle. This year the population of Detroit has grown. For some time the automobile plants have imported "seasonal" labor from the farm lands of Illinois and Michigan. This year they have gone farther afield and sent their recruiting agents into the South. From the hills of Kentucky and the Appalachian "wilderness" of Tennessee, and even farther South, have come many thousands of young men who had never seen a large-sized town or the inside of a factory. No skill is required and a wage of 50 cents an hour is riches to them, while it lasts.

But Detroit has 50,000 families on relief even during this "boom," and many old automobile workers are included in their number. When every allowance is made for the importance of the industry in the general economy of the country, the patriotism of the manufacturers seems to the outsider somewhat hard to find. The city fathers of Detroit will probably share that view if Federal funds again become difficult to obtain.

* * * *

CERTAIN reflections are inevitable when one sees American employers resisting by every device that which in western Europe has long been accepted as the backbone of such democracy as exists. In this respect the chief aim of Fascist regimes in Europe may be said to coincide with the aim of the large employers' associations in America, with the difference that the former are destroying a mechanism which already existed, whereas here the aim is still to prevent the mechanism being installed. If the New Deal conferred respectability on the idea of collective bargaining, there would seem now to be a widespread conviction in labor circles that it can expect little more in the way of help from the Administration. How long it will be before labor itself "goes political" is an interesting speculation. If the scales were evenly balanced this early nipping in the bud of any tendency on the part of labor to rely upon outside help might be a good thing for organization which cost nothing would inevitably be ephemeral.

The test of how evenly the scales are balanced is the manner in which force is used by the State in times of crisis. Is the "restoration of law and order" applied with equal justice whichever side has destroyed it? The question answers itself.

To hop from Detroit, "bustling capital of American industry," to old New Orleans is to change one's world. It is also to change dictatorships. So much has been written about Huey Long that the visitor acquainted with European Fascist countries almost expects to find himself in the same familiar atmosphere of espionage and ill-concealed terror. The Crescent City shows no outward signs of either. So far as the mass of its inhabitants are concerned it continues to sprawl beside its river as unconcerned about its new dictator as about the fact that it has dropped from second to seventh most important port in the country.

THE situation in Louisiana may be likened to that in Rumania, where also opinions are often expressed forcibly but where elections are never "free." It is easy to find business men in New Orleans who dislike Long intensely, it is not easy to find one willing to be quoted; outside, in the lumber towns and so on, it is even less easy, for there tax assessments can be an even more powerful gag.

There is a certain smug satisfaction amongst Louisianans today as they see alarm at their Huey spreading to Washington and across the country, nor is there any doubt that it will spread wider and faster. For the outsider, however certain he may be that the course of events in the two continents will not repeat themselves in their details, it is impossible to ignore that fundamentally conditions show great similarity. The same declining standard of living which helped to produce the Mussolinis and Hitlers is operating in the United States to swell the army of radio listeners and "club" members of Long and others.

Most of this army has never thought of "politics" before, their frame of mind is no better protection against demagogy than is the despair of Europeans who have thought too much. In one respect, however, there is all the difference in the world. America still lacks the appalling consciousness of being in the grip of the iron claw of the war machine. There is therefore hope and determination to see things through. The tragedy of Western Europe is the unspoken feeling that her race is run.

Jefferson's Birthday

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY is Jefferson's birthday. He was born April 13, 1743, in Virginia, and he died on the same day as his great political opponent and predecessor in the presidential office, John Adams, July 4, 1826, at the age of 83. In the later years of their long lives, these two former rivals and enemies, John Adams, of Massachusetts, and Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, became intimate epistolary friends and their correspondence is immensely interesting.

It is a brilliant exchange of ideas between two great men who had played important parts in the drama of the republic, and whose respect for each other's intellect was mellowed by a constantly increasing affection. They were fortunate in living long enough to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their country; and few things in its history have been more dramatic than their joint departure on their country's birthday.

* * * *

Jefferson throughout his life was a passionate lover of learning; he went to William and Mary College and studied 14 hours a day. In addition to learning Greek, Latin, mathematics, French and natural science, he was a fine athlete, a good dancer, played the violin and was a solo singer. He studied law and finally entered politics, where his career is a part of national history.

He drafted the Declaration of Independence, and worked steadily in Virginia and in the country for equal rights in voting, taxation, and opportunities for education. He believed in religious freedom and in Virginia secured the abolition of taxation for support of the Established Church.

* * * *

He became Secretary of State in the first Presidential Cabinet under Washington in 1789; under John Adams he was Vice President; at the national election, in 1800, he and Aaron Burr had the same number of electoral votes, and it was only after a sharp contest that he was elected. Although a great upholder of the rights of the people, he fortunately did not allow any theories to stand in the way of the purchase of Louisiana Territory from France in 1803, one of the most audacious, far-seeing and wisest actions in the history of the presidential office.

After he retired in 1809, he devoted himself to a project very dear to his heart; and the University of Virginia was the result.

Monticello, his beautiful home, near Charlottesville, is visited annually by many thousands of Americans.

Progressives' Plight Leads To Orthodoxy

No Other Logical Course Open To Suffering Sons Of Wild Jackass.

By Elliott Thurston.

THE plight of the Progressives is one of those political tragedies which has not had the attention it deserves. Amid the many ills of the world the painful position of the Progressives may seem less than momentous. Nevertheless their sufferings are real and acute. They need relief.

Some time back when that authority on the subject, former Senator Moses, was asked if he knew or could ascertain what had become of the Sons of the Wild Jackass he replied that from all he could learn they had been swallowed by the New Deal whale. Scarcely a trace was left. Subsequently, however, the Progressives, who had always been so many Jonahs to the G. O. P., were in some cases rather violently regurgitated. The Messrs. La Follette and Cutting, notably, were cast out upon the political seas, most unexpectedly, to sink or swim unaided and alone. They just managed to reach shore. The experience left them badly shaken. Senator Norris, patron saint and patriarch of them all, who had done much to herd the Progressives into the New Deal, became and remains embittered.

All this was sad enough, but while the Progressives dallied with the New Deal, a new crop of leftist leaders sprang up—the Huey Longs, Father Coughlins, Upton Sinclairs and Townsendites, for instance, all selling the same political wares, offered in greater or lesser degree. All rushed to the market with redistribution of "wealth" offerings.

* * * *

THE Progressives suddenly found themselves without any goods to sell, except perhaps 16-to-1 silver. And enthusiasm for that is singularly absent from the minds of the masses. The voters may be as stupid as Henry Mencken alleges, but they do not seem to be so ignorant as to suppose that draining most of the silver of the world into Treasury vaults is going to create any business or abundance or usable real wealth. No; the ghost of Bryan is not only incongruous in this day, but it has lost its silver appeal.

Moreover, the New Deal has sapped the silver issue by its surrender to the silverites, whereby the Treasury has been buying silver in huge quantities, and nothing much has happened except misery for Chinese and therefore a not unnatural glee in Tokyo. Not even a Bryan could sell the idea to the country today that there is any magic left in silver.

Then, too, the New Deal has devitalized most of the other Progressive issues either by adopting them outright or compromising. Nothing much has been left with which to construct saleable political wares. That is, nothing has been left, curiously, except issues which sound strangely orthodox. The Progressives can not outbid the Longs and Townsends. As surely as the cotton plowers-under have lost their markets, the Progressives have lost theirs to the new leftwingers. The only choice left to them is to stay unhappily on the outer fringes of the New Deal, with it but not of it, or to go orthodox.

THIS is not so impossible as it sounds at first. Already the Progressives, with Mr. Borah and Mr. Nye long since in the vanguard, are battling against monopolistic results of NRA. But the monopolistic results are by-products of the whole price-raising, production-reducing drift of NRA. Thus, logically, the Progressives who are against the monopolies must oppose the price-raising and production-cutting. And that lands them exactly where most orthodox economists are and have been all along.

Similarly, there can be no doubt about the agrarian revolt fast brewing against the AAA, and for the same reasons. The cotton crisis has served to demonstrate vividly how disastrous the whole concept of planned scarcity is. The Progressives' first anxiety is for the farmer. The West, as all political scouts agree, is rebelling against man-made crop destruction, now tragically outdone by drought and dust storms as if by some vengeance of Nature.

As for Labor, the basic complaint welling up from its ranks is that the cost of living has risen faster than wages. The "little business man," who feels himself victimized by NRA, the farmer and the worker are the first concern and the political customers of the Progressives. All three are suffering from approximately the same thing—the consequences of attempts to base domestic economy on scarcity instead of plenty.

* * * *

LOGICALLY, there is no place for the Progressives to go but to a policy of plenty as opposed to scarcity. And that is economic orthodoxy. Will they come to that? The answer depends a good deal on whether the New Deal will re-form itself in that direction, as has sometimes been indicated only to be canceled out by more silver-jugglery or announcements from the White House that prices must go still higher.

In any case, if the now politically lost Progressive tribes are to stand for something they will have to come to the orthodoxy of an economy of abundance. The inevitable corollary is a policy of reviving international trade, which in turn would necessitate currency stability. Yet all this is the very incarnation of what is miscalled conservative policy. If logic is to have a voice with them, the Progressives have no alternative policy open to them. They may even yet find that their true political soulmates are those once-despised Easterners who remain tainted with deep-dyed orthodoxy.

Once Overs

Wedding of a Nazi Chief.

Under a fleet of bombing planes, and with the entire army in attendance, the wedding of Gen. Otto Doe and Fraulein Gretchen Blank was celebrated today. It was one of the finest military displays in the history of the country, and, in the opinion of foreign military attaches, showed Germany to be in readiness for a major war at any time.

* * * *

The nuptial ceremonies were most impressive. The bridegroom rode to the church in an armored car under an escort of 46 tanks, six brigades of infantry and several thousand shock troops especially chosen for formal functions.

* * * *

The bride arrived on a gun carriage decorated with lilies, cherry blossoms and iron crosses. The bridesmaids looked very fetching in army ambulances, and the ushers cut a pretty figure as they dashed through the streets in trucks from the quartermaster's department.

* * * *

There was a slight delay at the church while identities were established to the satisfaction of the secret police, a feature of the activities at this point being a half-hour fight with non-Aryans. When order was restored the happy couple entered the edifice. The bride walked down the aisle on the arm of the Richtofen Bombing Squadron. The bridegroom was accompanied by a detachment from the Chemical Warfare Service.

* * * *

The bride looked charming in a gown of battleship gray and an atmosphere of the front line trenches. She carried a bouquet of nasturtiums and six days' marching equipment.

* * * *

The bridegroom wore his full regimentals and carried three gold-braided swords, a couple of ultimatums and the usual topographical maps. The poison gas squad brought up the rear and gave an added touch of beauty to the imposing scene.

* * * *

The happy bride was given away by her mother, assisted by the War Office and the Twenty-second Brigade of Wire Cutters.

* * * *

Goose-stepping was by the vested choir. Following the ceremony the couple left with the infantry for a honeymoon in the vicinity of the nearest war threat.

Two weeks ago Dr. Weaver was named to a four-year pastorate at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest. But he is not new to Washington church circles. He served the church as acting pastor for one year, and has been, and is, executive secretary of the Columbia Baptist Association.

What Religion Means to Me

Mr. LaRoe contributes this week's article to The Post's series of informal discussions on the everyday application of religion.

By Wilbur La Roe, Jr.

Chairman Committee on Civic Affairs, Washington Federation of Churches.

Religion, like love, can not be defined; yet, like love, it is indispensable. Every thinking man must give thought to his relation to the mysterious universe in which we live. The philosophy of irreligion is that we are mere accidents—the fortuitous products of a physical change which took place when this planet, in its process of cooling off, happened to attain a temperature conductive to life. At that time, we are old, life cells began to multiply and when enough of them multiplied human beings resulted.

This barren philosophy may satisfy the pessimist or the athiest but it is not satisfying to the average person. The average man will not agree that the hapless bumping together of molecules or atoms or microbes could produce a rose, or that chemistry can explain why one man will sacrifice for another. Religion takes the facts of life and discovers in them a guiding purpose. It develops and refines our sense of appreciation so that we can see, even in the ordinary things of life, beauty and harmony.

But I am not an artist, and religion to me must be a practical thing. I have seen a man surrounded with luxury, but sunk in the depths of despair. And I have seen a woman, in the midst of the direst poverty and distress, stand unafraid and set her face resolutely toward the future. The woman had what we call, for want of a better name, faith. Faith has been defined as the thing that enables a man to put his foot down boldly where nothing can be seen.

Every true adventurer must do that. And every man who lives his life in fullest measure must live and love beyond himself. Christ used a cross to project himself and his love countless centuries beyond the end of his own physical life.

One has only to look at the world today to see the necessity of making a choice between hope and despair, between worry and faith, between war and peace, between hate and love, between accumulation and sacrifice, between selfishness and service, between racial intolerance and brotherhood, between profits and human kindness. And if one makes his choice honestly he is bound to find himself aligned with those who appreciate the value of true religion, because hope, faith, peace, love, sacrifice, service, brotherhood and good will among men and among nations are of the very essence of true religion.

Salvation Army Services Slated

Five Units Will Conduct Rites Tomorrow.

Five Salvation Army units will conduct services tomorrow in various sections of Washington. The programs have been announced as follows:

Washington No. 1 Corps, 606 E street northwest, Capt. W. Kenneth Howarth in charge. 11 a. m., meeting; 8 p. m., Lieut. Commissioner Ernest I. Transit Concern Loses on Refund

Appeal for $374.46 Is Turned Down Here.

The Washington Rapid Transit Co. has lost its appeal for a refund of $374.46 on personal property taxes paid for November and December in 1932, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, announced yesterday. The petition had been denied.

Utilities experts had been interested in the case because in its appeal the company claimed the value of its buses for taxation purposes was $104,665. The sale price for the purchase of the company by the Capital Transit Co. was $843,253. This figure was rejected by the Public Utilities Commission as being more than the fair value of the company.

The buses constitute the bulk of the value of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., officials say.

Cancer Cures Now Possible, Parley Is Told

College of Surgeons Hears That 25,000 Cases Have Been Arrested.

Cancer can be cured, more than 1,500 Washingtonians gathered in a "community health meeting" in Constitution Hall were told last night.

In some 25,000 cases, cancer, second greatest cause of death in the United States, has been halted or cured, Dr. Robert B. Greenough reported. Greenough is president of the American College of Surgeons and one of the Nation's leading cancer experts.

Nevertheless, he pointed out that: "Cancer is gradually mounting in the list of causes of death. This is largely because the most successful prevention of disease thus far has dealt with the diseases of early life and not so much with those of the last half of life.

"Within the last half century, science has prolonged the life span from 40 years to 59. There are more people living in the cancer age, the years after 40."

Lists Five Symptoms.

Successful treatment, he warned, depends upon early recognition of the disease. He urged periodic health examinations. He listed five danger signals:

"A lump or growth anywhere in the body.

"A sore that will not heal.

"Chronic indigestion.

"A discharge of blood or mucous from any organ.

"Pain."

The cause of cancer, he said, remains unknown. Irritation is understood to be an important factor. The agents which cause cancer must operate over a long period, meantime, producing lesions.

Two methods of treatment have been successful—competent surgery, for one, and treatment by X-ray and radium. But pastes, serums, and other alleged cures, Dr. Greenough asserted, should be avoided.

He reported that, where competent records have been kept, 1,506 cases of cure of cancer of the lip and mouth are known, 909 of cancer of the stomach, 8,051 of cancer of the breast, and 7,980 of cancer of the uterus.

The night was largely devoted to reports of medical advance. More than 200 nurses from local hospitals were conspicuous in the stadium-like assembly hall, and there were many prominent in local medical fields. The meeting was sponsored by the American College of Surgeons chapters in the District, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware, and Dr. Ralph M. LeComte, of Washington, presided.

A letter from President Roosevelt stressing the importance of discussion of community health was read, and District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen voiced his good wishes.

Many doctors praised the work of the college since 1918 in raising the hospital standards. Where 89 institutions were on is honor roll then, 2,480 were approved last year.

Hospitals Praised.

From Dr. Robert Jolly, president of the American Hospital Association, came a report of hospital progress from the "charnel house period" 100 years ago, through the "boarding house period," to the present "day of real hospitals." He said hospitals were operating under meager resources, that 4,500 of the 6,437 in the United States were volunteer organizations, that some 400 had had to close during the last five years, that donations had dropped 85 per cent since 1929.

Deaths from accidents in industry are "to the credit of the industrialists, steadily dropping," Dr. Frederic A. Besley, of Waukegan, Ill., reported. He said each large plant should have its own medical director.

Wife, Children Move From Barrymore Home

Beverly Hills, Calif., April 12 (AP). Dolores Costello Barrymore, wife of John Barrymore, and their three children moved today from her husband's palatial Hilltop estate, but continued to decline to discuss reports of an impending divorce in the famous screen family.

Mrs. Barrymore's household effects were taken to a mansion in the heart of the Wilshire district on which she took a year's lease. She remained in seclusion during the day and refused to confirm rumors the move meant separation from her actor-husband.

Cardenas Halts Talk of Mexico Turning Soviet

President Makes Public Disavowal of Red Ideas of Government.

Mexico City, April 12 (AP).—Four months of uncertainty as to whether the government of President Lazaro Cardenas planned to establish a communistic regime in Mexico were ended tonight when he said "Communism is not my doctrine nor the inspiration of my policies."

At a time when strikes are sweeping the country, the president declared himself openly in favor of the strike as a "weapon of the worker in obtaining social justice."

Optimistic About Conditions.

But at the same time he predicted a rapid end of current difficulties and said under his government private enterprise "can count on full guarantees and securities."

Summarizing conditions in the country, Cardenas said Mexico is headed toward an era of directed economy, but that this must be founded on social justice for the working classes.

The present strikes, he continued, "are movements which will revindicate the essential rights of the workers and I am glad they came in my administration.

"We have encouraged and defended the right of workers and peasants to elevate their living conditions with better salaries, to own their own lands and enjoy more just working conditions, and when from words we pass to facts the timid spirits are frightened.

"As for me, all those who know me know that I can not be the instrument of a prosperity founded on unjust exploitation of working classes."

Almost simultaneously with publication of the interview, the principal business organizations in the country made public a letter to the President in which they declared "the business depression is growing worse daily" as a result of lack of confidence and called upon Cardenas to give assurances the rights of all social classes would be respected in conformity with the law.

The groups included the General Confederation of Industrial Chambers, the Confederation of Chambers of Commerce and the Bankers Association.

Japanese Show Way to Orient, Dr. Das Asserts

Dr. Park, of Chicago, Also Gives Lecture at Howard University.

Jewish and Negro problems, their racial and cultural aspects, were subjects of discussion yesterday at Howard University before the discussion conferences on problems, programs and philosophies of minority groups. Dr. Taraknath Das, of the Catholic University, also discussed "The Oriental in the Present-Day World," and the general subject of race and culture was treated in a lecture by Dr. Robert E. Park, of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Das expressed the belief that Oriental peoples will again acquire their former political and economic plane, with Japan showing the way, through intellectual, economic and political achievements.

Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, of New York, made a comparison of Jewish and Negro racial experiences, showing parallels in persecution, in taboos and in philosophical generalizations and rationalizations.

While he believes pluralism as a technique is developing rapidly in popularity among Jewish and Negro peoples, so that there is an increasing growth of cultures distinct and apart from the stereotyped Anglo-Saxon standard, he was unable to hold out any assurance that such cultures would not be destroyed by "100 per cent" school boards and propaganda agencies of the future.

Dr. Park discussed mental tests to indicate that civilization is culture of the people who wandered from their homes among the indigenous folk to the metropolitan centers.

"The real test of any people, or race," he said, "is not such mental test, but the test whether the individual can get to metropolitan centers and lead an intellectual life."

Just now, Walt and Phyllis are wrapped up in a baby girl they've adopted . . . a waif left with a mysterious note on the running board of Walt's car. Others in this engaging menagerie are Corky, Skeezix and the good Doc. After tomorrow, you'll find them only in The Post . . . daily and, on Sunday, in a full page of color!

● JUST in case you don't already know it, THE GUMPS are the most happy-go-lucky crew of nit-wits ever to appear in any comic strip. Andy Gump, homely and lovable, and his wife Min, are just like a lot of people you know. As for Uncle Bim . . . he's the most unusual rich man ever to fall prey to designing females—namely, his blonde wife Millie and her scheming, mercenary mother. Then there are Chester Gump, the young white hope of this amazing family . . . the lugubrious maid ("Soup's On!"), and others.

Other Post comics, appearing daily, Sunday or both, include Benny, "Cap" Stubbs, Apple Mary, The Bungle Family, Joe Palooka, Dixie Dugan, Napoleon and Uncle Elby, Our Boarding House, Jane Arden and Alley Oop.

Justice For Women Absorbs Interest Of Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Club Leader

Tree Planned In Recognition Of Her Service

Planting Exercises to Be Held Tuesday Afternoon in Meridian Park.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson leveled a broadside against clubwomen, in general, on the score that they were too much concerned with the social side, "the nut-cup phase," of club work, she certainly couldn't have had in mind women like Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, in whose honor a tree will be planted in Meridian Park Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Wiley has been a member of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs since 1912 and is now on the last lap of her term as president of that organization.

A summary of the work carried on during her administration reveals that in the last three years she has taken an active part in almost every outstanding civic and cultural movement in Washington, and has efficiently directed clubwomen of the Capital as they finished old projects, launched new ones and contributed to public welfare while they enriched their own lives.

MRS. HARVEY W. WILEY, outstanding clubwoman of Washington, who admits her absorbing interests—besides her sons—are still "justice for women" and the pure food law.

Women an Important Factor.

Yet Mrs. Wiley takes all this as a matter of course. "Clubwomen today are naturally interested in national, civic and cultural activity," she said at her home in Ashmead place. "If women are inclined to take a more active part in public life than they were back in the early days of clubwork, it is because they realize they have something to contribute and are now an important factor in their city."

She said this as she led the way to the upstairs living room of the house where she has lived for 22 years. "Here," she said, walking into the room, "is where I do much of my work."

It was a homey place, from the cretonne curtains to the framed motto hanging on the mantelpiece. Books lined one wall and at either side of the opposite end of the room there were two more loaded bookshelves. All around the room—on the walls, on the mantel and on the desk—there were family photographs. There were numerous pictures of Mrs. Wiley's two sons and of Dr. Wiley, "father of the pure food law." There was, also, a snapshot of Dr. Wiley in his automobile, the third ever used in Washington; there was the medal that was struck for Dr. Wiley at the fortieth anniversary of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists; and there was a photograph of Mrs. Wiley herself, taken in 1898 and carried in Dr. Wiley's watch for ten years.

Talks of Many Things.

A solid blue rug, a couch, some blue wicker chairs and a typewriter stand completed the furnishings of the room. But the two card tables, temporarily set up and piled high with letters, pamphlets and circulars, revealed how busy the occupant of this room had been and would be.

As she sat in this room, Mrs. Wiley talked of many things—her sons (Harvey, jr., who was widely known at his birth as the "pure food baby," and John, who was graduated last June from the Naval Academy at the head of his class), her noted husband, and her work in the federation and the National Woman's Party.

A woman of wide interests, she admits one of her most absorbing concerns has always been justice for women. This caused her, as a girl, to write her graduating essay on "What Is Liberty?" This led her, later, to become an active worker for woman suffrage; to become president of the Elizabeth Cady Stanton Suffrage Club in 1907; to assist Miss Alice Paul and the congressional committee of the National Woman Suffrage Association in arranging the famous suffrage parade in 1913; and, finally, to join the 218 women who went to prison in order to focus attention of the country on women's demand for the privilege to vote.

Gruesome Experience.

"All I did to get that prison sentence was to stand at the White House gates with a banner reading, 'Mr. President, how long must women wait for liberty?' Going to prison was a gruesome experience, but now, looking back, I'm glad I was among those women who were willing to undergo any hardship for justice. I am still working for justice for women, and I am convinced that only by a constitutional amendment can discrimination against women be removed."

In this connection, Mrs. Wiley mentioned that her husband, also strongly in favor of women having equal civil and political rights with men, had been the first president of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage in the District. Proof of Dr. Wiley's approval of his wife's stand on equality for women is borne out by the dedication in his "Autobiography," which reads as follows:

"To Anna Kelton Wiley . . . My beloved wife, mother of my boys, who, without neglecting her motherly and household duties, has devoted her life to the welfare of women, first to secure for them the right to vote, and, second, equality before the law, with my full consent and approval, I dedicate this book, a simple narrative of my life, its victories and defeats. Her character and devotion to me have been strong factors in my success and her sympathy and advice inspiration in defeat."

Served in Many Capacities.

One of the most outstanding and most active women in Washington, Mrs. Wiley has served her city in numerous capacities. In 1931 she was made chairman of food conservation. Organizing the clubwomen of Washington and enlisting the aid of the domestic science departments of the District of Columbia Public Schools, she directed this work with the result that $3,000 worth of food was collected, canned and distributed to the needy. A year later she was in charge of the clothes conservation committee that had an important part in collecting and distributing 30,000 garments. Since her husband's death she has helped to continue the work in which he was interested by advocating the passage of the proposed new food law, designed to bring the first pure food law up to date to prevent false advertising.

Among those who will take part in the tree planting ceremony will be the chairman of the committee on forestry for the District of Columbia Federation, Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, who will present the tree and who has written a poem for the occasion; Marshall C. Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks; the Rev. H. H. Sterrett, rector of the All Souls' Episcopal Church; Mme. d'Aulby, Miss Rose Maxwell Dickey and the past presidents of the District of Columbia Federation—Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgins, Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Mrs. Virginia White Speed and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt.

Research Shows That 4,000,000 in U. S. Are Twins

Latest statistics show there are 4,000,000 twins in the United States and that they comprise about 3.7 per cent of the population.

Their prospects in life are shown to be less than single individuals because there are two ways in which a pair of twins can be disrupted by death and only one for the individual. Despite this, their chances of survival as a pair are reported unusually good, as compared with the one person. A single male individual has a life expectancy at birth of 59.3 years, as compared with the male twins' expectancy of 46.1 years. A single female has an expectancy of 62.8 years and the female twins 50.3 years.

This data was compiled by the statistical department of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Tea Time Finds the Briton on Keen Edge

Habit or Characteristic of Race? That Is the Big Question.

By Ware Torrey.

LET NO ONE say that the average Englishman is unimpassioned, reserved and phlegmatic on all occasions. If you think so, you have not observed Englishmen at tea time.

It's not only tea itself that stirs a Briton. One of the most dramatic spectacles the empire affords is one of her sons selecting a tea cake. The tea cakes wait coyly in their paper frills. The choice lies usually between a pink, green or caramel frippery, decorated with spirals of whipped cream and spun sugar, that would send an American male shuddering toward cocktails.

There can be only one choice that is the right one for your Englishman, and as the slow process of elimination goes on, other tea cake addicts wait in sympathetic silence.

Habit or Racial Characteristic?

The ritual of tea pouring is too well known to need elaboration, with all its earnest banishment of tea leaves and measurement of hot water. And the two schools of taste are also well known, the toasted-scone followers and the wall paper sandwich converts.

But the question that burns unanswered is whether tea worship among Englishmen is a habit or a racial characteristic.

If a habit, its grim hold is worthy of a better cause. If a racial characteristic, it should be traced down to climatic causes, or scarcity of sweets in early life, or the strong man's need of a good excuse for taking an hour off.

Toward tea time, you see your English friend becoming absent-minded, distraught, and finally downright irritable. He needs his tea, poor dear.

And he knows it. Employes scamper from their desks to tea, with their superiors smiling benignly upon their flight. Or else there are crumbs among the papers, and tea drips in the inkwell, or ink drips in the tea well or what have you. In offices in which individuals don't fancy ink with their tea, there is the exodus of a general strike between 4 and 5 p. m.

Tea Inevitable on Island.

It may be no more than a cup of tea extract and a biscuit, alias a soda-cracker. But no man's a man without it, at tea time in England. Picture the postman pausing on his round, the clerk retiring round a corner of his counter, the doorman negotiating a cream bun in an off moment, and the lorry-driver balancing a crumpet over his steering wheel.

Something really should be done about a custom that makes such strong demands upon the nervous system. Perhaps a few pamphlets on the dangers of overeating and a handful of raisins might help. It would be a pretty pass to have the British coat-of-arms become the lion and the unicorn smiling across a tea cup rampant.

How Does One Break Into "The Writing Game," Woman Past 30 With Lots of Time and No Financial Worries, Wants to Know.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am very anxious to know about the best way to get into the writing game. Can you advise me if I should take a course in journalism or suggest a better way of acquiring the ability to write?

* * * *

I have always been interested in writing and would like to write incidents and experiences of my friends, as I have traveled extensively and have had quite a few interesting experiences myself. How can I make contacts with persons who could use my articles?

* * * *

I have had quite a number of letters printed in newspapers in different cities, which I sent in under my own and assumed names, but that is as far as I have gone. I have plenty of time on my hands and would like to become a writer and eventually get on the staff of some newspaper or magazine. I do not need the money but I want to express myself.

* * * *

Am I too old now to undertake this work, do you think? I am in the thirties. I will watch the paper for a reply.

Very truly yours, READER.

No Specific Formula.

DEAR READER: So far as I know, the only way to get into the writing game is to dedicate your efforts to the realization of that ambition. A course in journalism helps some; a course in creative writing, either in the university classroom or by correspondence, helps others; still others place themselves in the hands of an agent, who, for a reading fee, assists them in drafting their beginners' efforts into marketable shape.

* * * *

In his recent book, "City Editor," Stanley Walker, famous New York newspaperman, takes a rather pessimistic attitude regarding the opportunities for recognition accorded would-be journalists today. A well-known woman journalist, asked "What is the future of the newspaper woman?" replied, "Her future is behind her."

* * * *

As with so many professions, I should say success in writing is a matter of "1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration," to quote words attributed to the late Thomas A. Edison in defining genius. Most successful writers will tell you they "work like dogs" to keep whatever success they have earned by similar exertion.

* * * *

One thing is certain—one can not approach a writing job in the role of dilettante and expect to achieve an iota of personal satisfaction or public acclaim. Whether one deliberately elects writing as a career, or finds oneself wrestling with it by accident or necessity, it is a grimly relentless taskmasters, mentally and physically.

* * * *

And while I believe your age has no relevant bearing on your chances of success as a writer, your implied lack of imagination, initiative and sense of values does. A woman past 30 with plenty of time on her hands and no financial worries, with a purported desire to write, surely should be able to hit upon a more direct means of attaining her goal than writing letters under real or assumed names and mailing them to newspapers.

* * * *

How can you make contact with persons who could use your articles? By locating an agent, as I have said; by mailing your material direct to the editors of such publications as purvey material similar to that you have written; or even by approaching the magazine or feature editors of the daily newspapers here. The latter may find your stuff suitable for use, and if not, they may be willing to suggest a possible market for it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Survey Shows 11-15 Hour Day For Housewives

WHO SAYS housewives have an easy time? They work from 11 to 15 hours a day, according to a recent survey of Washington homes. The survey also shows a considerable portion of those hours is spent in the kitchen developing "sink fatigue." In order to learn how many trips a day are made to the sink and how much time is spent there, the International Nickel Co. installed an electric eye and a time-recording clock in homes selected for the study.

Results proved the size of the family has little control over the housewive's trips to the sink. Although the average number of trips was found to be 107, one woman who has a family of six made only 42 trips daily, while another woman with a family of the same size made 162 trips.

Average time spent at the sink was an hour and a half a day. The survey showed, however, that some women spend two hours and a half each day at their sinks, while other women spend less than an hour.

The number of trips and the amount of time spent was determined by the electric eye and time-recording clock placed in a group of kitchens for three-day periods. Each time the housewife went to the sink she interrupted the passage of a beam of light from one part of the apparatus to the other. The duration of the interruption was recorded by the delicate timing instrument.

Culbertson On Bridge

Low Card Significance.

Listening to bridge players discussing hands one might be led to believe that such cards lower than the ten-spot did not exist. Reverence is paid to Aces, deference to Kings, and love to Queens. Even the scamps known as Jacks hold key positions in the post-mortem discussions. Occasionally the eight and nine spots may come in for an honorable mention, but cards of lower rank seem to be forgotten. Alas, poor deuce!

Finessing Low Cards.

Great attention must be paid to low cards when a difficult hand is being played. Declarer's failure to finesse a seven-spot caused the loss of a game in today's hand.

East, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable; East-West part-score 90.

1—A shaded opening bid, for without a rebiddable suit 3 honor-tricks are required; but the bid may be excusable in view of the part-score.

2—South is unwilling to make a takeout double since he does not want to force a heart response. If North makes a free heart response, South may eventually bid game in notrump.

3—East doesn't like the spade or diamond situation for notrump purposes.

The Play.

West opened the singleton ten of clubs, dummy played the Jack, East the King and declarer the Ace. A small diamond was led to the Jack, West failing to take with his King, and the seven of clubs was returned. East and South played low and West ruffed. A heart return was ruffed by declarer, and the King and Ace of trumps were cashed. The Ace of diamonds was laid down, followed by a low diamond which was won by West's ten. A heart return forced declarer to trump again.

At this point declarer's position was hopeless. West was bound to get in twice—once with the King of diamonds and once with the master trump—and South had only one trump left to stop the heart suit. He led the Ace of clubs and failed to make the contract.

Declarer should place the ten of diamonds in the West hand on the bidding and finesse the seven of diamonds at trick 2. Since this prevents the loss of more than one diamond trick, declarer will have just enough time to establish the diamonds without having his trumps exhausted by repeated heart leads.

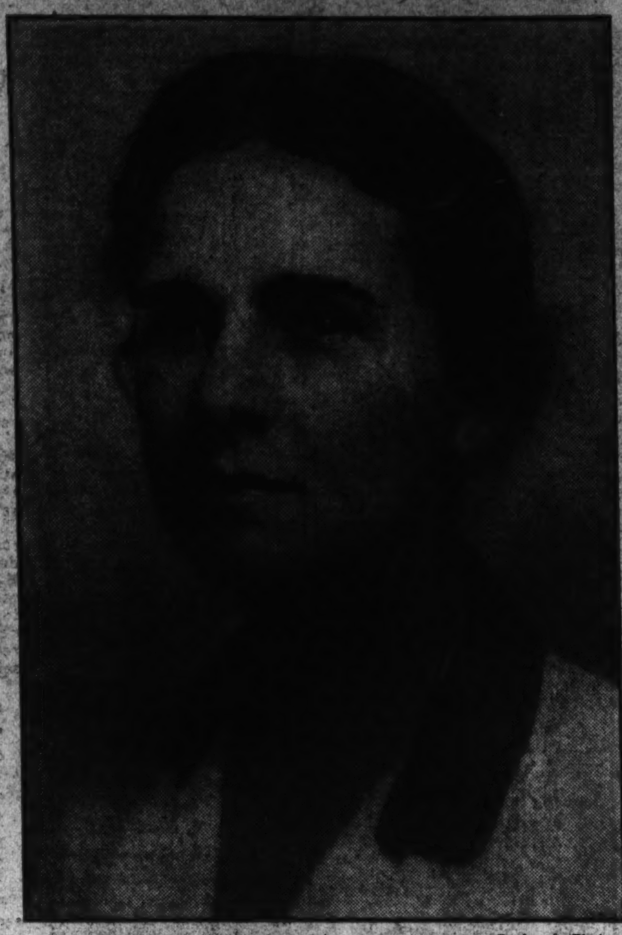
Economic Ills in U. S. Laid to Mental Laziness



Bachrach Photo.

Women of today need to know their economics as thoroughly as they know their fashions and their cookery, believes Miss Dorothy P. Hill, director of the Summer Institute for Social Progress at Wellesley College.

Americans Stereotyped in Their Thinking, Miss Dorothy P. Hill, Director of Social Institute, Charges.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE AMERICAN people are too easily managed and too easily pleased. They go in for stereotyped thinking, are swept along by the demagogue with the loudest voice, take too seriously such catch phrases as "back to the gold standard" and "balance the budget."

This is a true picture of the country, Dorothy P. Hill is convinced, after directing two sessions of the Summer Institute for Social Progress at Wellesley. She is equally convinced the United States will conquer its economic difficulties only when the people have acquired a common knowledge of economics.

The population as a whole is too reactionary, believes Miss Hill. In her opinion this attitude is the result not of inner convictions, but of a certain laziness of mind.

"Most persons rebel at a change in the social and economic order simply because it requires effort for them to think along new lines," the director of the Institute for Social Progress declared yesterday. "They would rather muddle along than study things out. Of course, most of them know so little about economics they can't study things out correctly."

Fosters Economic Study.

And that's where the Institute for Social Progress comes in. Its chief purpose is to study economic problems presented by persons recruited from indusrty, business and the professions. But closely allied to this main purpose is the secondary one of interesting everybody in economics, Miss Hill explained.

"We ought to have a common knowledge of economics just as we have of machinery," she said. "It would be almost impossible to sell even a woman an automobile with a defective motor today. Everybody now knows a good deal about machinery," she smiled. "I don't know why I said 'even a woman,'" she continued. "I don't think women are superior to men but I certainly believe they are equal."

If and when the people of the United States become interested in "popular economics," they will be able to separate the sheep from the goats among economists, Miss Hill believes.

Will Recognize Sound Planning.

"They will know better than to be taken in by a lot of half-baked theories, she said. "They will recognize sound planning when it is presented to them."

This sound planning, in Miss Hill's opinion, is likely to be along cooperative lines. Whatever it is, it will take two or three generations to put it into effect, she is convinced. Before the people of today can even set the machinery in motion they must study statistics, must learn the principles of economics, must determine to learn the truth about existing conditions, Miss Hill warned.

When the new social and economic order is eventually brought about it will result in higher standards of living than we know today and will utilize machinery to its fullest extent, she believes.

Calls Problem "Underconsumption."

"There's no reason why we shouldn't have higher standards of living," she said. "Our country is rich in resources. All we need is an intelligent plan. Our problem has never been overproduction but underconsumption."

Plenty of plans have been discussed at the Institute for Social Progress, Miss Hill admitted. At the session last July, 20 states and 52 vocations were represented. Farmers from the Middle West described their reactions to plowing under crops. A pale, undernourished young woman from the coal mine district of West Virginia told of the lack of food among the miners' families. Employers brought out some of the problems they are up against. Union leaders explained strike tactics. Lawyers expounded laws for the protection of property.

This summer the members of the institute will again be recruited from industry, business, homemaking, teaching, engineering and farming. A total of 130 men and women will be accepted for the sessions which will be held at Wellesley from July 6 to July 21. A few scholarships are awarded each year to persons who could not otherwise afford to attend.

Iowan's Trip Costs Only $1.

"Last summer," said Miss Hill, "we sent $15 to a farmer in Iowa so he could make the trip. He spent less than a dollar of it. His wife packed enough food to last the entire journey and he picked up rides. If there were only more people as interested in learning about economics as that farmer was, we'd be able to start pulling the country out of its difficulties."

Miss Hill is now on a tour of the East, Middle West and South, telling groups about the institute, trying to work up enthusiasm for it. She has just ended a brief stay in Washington, where she talked with persons who hope to attend this year.

Shop Holding Sale on Brazil, Cashew Nuts

Toppers in Fetching Models Placed on Display at Capital Store.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FROM THE DARK jungles of South America come the Brazil nuts. From the Malabar Coast of India come the cashews. And both Brazils and cashews may be found—especially priced today—at a large local nut shop. The manager of this "nutdom" has an amazing knowledge about all the tasty tidbits he displays. Of the Brazil nuts he said:

"These are found in pods shaped like coconuts and each pod contains about 20 or 30 nuts. The average weight for the pods I believe is about 5 pounds. They grow on towering trees, that sometimes reach a height of 100 feet. The natives who gather them always wait until calm, quiet days, for the breezes send these heavy pods crashing to the ground like canonballs. As a matter of fact they've been known to kill men in this manner."

The cashew nut, he explained, grows in a bluish gray shell which in turn grows out of a pear-shaped fruit. The shell itself is extremely tough and requires considerable ingenuity to open properly.

Since both cashews and Brazils come from such far corners of the world it seems amazing that they are free from a stale rancid taste. This fact, the manager said, is due to the expert attention and care given them during shipping.

So, now that you know the family background and environment of the cashews and Brazils just step right up and say hello to them today while they're especially priced.

Toppers in Fetching Models.

The business woman who appreciates the value of always looking fresh and just out of a band box will be bound to greet the "Roney Toppers" enthusiastically. And so will the traveler who likes to cram a lot in a small suitcase.

Let's start with just an ordinary "topper." It's approximately half of a blouse, goes on under your jacket, and fits like a small vestee. The "Roney toppers" are a little different. They are especially styled with a scarf-like collar which may be worn any number of ways to give either high or low neck effect.

The fetching models displayed in a local store come in silk seersucker and flat crepes and in vivid plaids, or pastels.

A Confection That's Different.

If you like big crispy nuts, toothsome figs and golden molasses made rich with butter, you'll be sure to fall for a certain confection made by a local candy artist.

She obtained her recipe from her grandmother, who in turn got it from hers, so you see, it's been passed down from one generation to the other and regarded almost as a family heirloom.

And, indeed, that's about what it is. Imagine owning a recipe which makes absolutely perfect candy, which is quite infallible, and which no one eles has access to. She's lucky! But so are we! For a very conservative cost we may order this delicacy by merely calling such and such a number. And, all those whose Lenten sweet tooth is yearning for a sugary bite have a treat in store if they send for some of this candy.

Men simply love it. Why? Well, who knows why men like what! Possibly because it's different. Probably because it reminds them of candy "grandmother used to make."

The shop will mail out orders for gifts if addresses and cards are sent. Remember, this delicacy will make an ideal remembrance, not only for Easter, but for birthdays, and bon voyage greetings.

It is put up in an attractive pound and half-pound boxes and made fresh every day.

Hats Made to Order.

Some women simply can't find a hat to suit them. If they try a Breton sailor it's about as becoming as the washtub. A smart "pillbox" looks like a misfitting soup bowl. And a beret gives them the style of a pancake.

But hearken, ye unfortunates. Mme. Marsi is in town today and Mme. Marsi knows her hats! She owns an exclusive hat shop in Vienna and has a clientele that sounds like a roster from the Almanac de Gotha.

She's in the hat department of a downtown store helping just a lot of unfortunates find exactly the hat that suits them. She does this by making them a hat right on their head. Imagine it. But you should see her work. First, you see a huge awkward hat form. Then you see a kind of brimless cap, and then, presto! there's an Easter bonnet brimming over with chic.

If you are one of those poor unfortunates who can't, simply can't find a hat, then here are truly good tidings of great joy.

2,700 B. C. Relics Found.

Remains of iron implements and clear glass used 2,700 years B. C., have been reported unearthed from ancient Sumerian ruins by Dr. Henri Frankfort, of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The iron was a fragment of a blade still incased in a bronze handle. It was found at Tell Asmar, one of the neighboring cities of Ur in the southern section of Mesopotamia.

What TODAY Means

"Aries."

IF APRIL 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

You may be thrown in contact on this date with a person you know has a quick temper, and you will show good judgment to do nothing that will arouse it. In answering questions it might be well to remember "the retort courteous" will prevent a reply discourteous and prevent a disagreeable argument. It will be tactful to comply with any reasonable request made by a member of your family or a friend, if it is possible to do so.

If inclined to feel hurt by someone you hold in high regard, having forgotten something affecting you, just remember you probably have at times suffered from your memory letting slip a date, event or matter, so console yourself with the thought it was unintentional.

In any social gathering on this date be careful not to let your mind "wool gather," which may cause some one present to comment unkindly on later as a lack of proper attention by you. Married and engaged couples, as well as those hoping to win some one's heart and hand, will do well to remember intimacy is no excuse for rudeness or rough horseplay.

If a woman and April 13 is your birthday, overcome any tendency to regard nearly everything in a frivolous light or manner if you hope to succeed. You have the aptitude required to achieve worth-while things if you will seriously apply yourself and do not permit social affairs to interfere with business. You have it in your own power to gain through love unlimited happiness. You should meet with a great deal of success in the regulation of domestic affairs. Chemistry, work of a hygienic nature, stenography, bookkeeping, as well as teaching, are among the lines of activity in which you should do well.

The child born on April 13 when it leaves high school, very probably will have definite ideas of its own regarding what it wishes to do and any strong opposition on your part may be a mistake.

If a man and April 13 is your natal day, safeguard your own interests. Do not depend on others to advance your cause. Medicine, law, art, architecture, engineering, as well as chemical research work, may offer both interesting as well as lucrative employment.

Successful people born on April 13:

Physician Tells How Diabetes Signs Appear

Warns Lot of Insulin Must Be Taken Despite Early Treatments.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FEW of us can forget the hopeless picture presented by diabetic children before the discovery of insulin scarcely more than a dozen years ago. The prospect was not a pleasing one. In spite of the efforts of the physician and the parents, these children literally starved to death.

And then came the discovery of insulin, a precious gift to suffering humanity. It offered afflicted children the right to live, to be happy, to play, and to develop into normal men and women. There are but few cases that will not respond to careful dietetic management and the appropriate use of insulin.

Any child who has excessive thirst, a voracious appetite, and profuse excretion of urine should be examined for the presence of diabetes. In many cases the condition will appear suddenly. There is a loss of weight, and parents will usually notice an increase in irritability, disturbed sleep, spells of anger, or impatience, and, in spite of the best parental control, many will break over the dietetic boundaries.

Insulin Reactions Risky.

Even though recognized and treated early, the symptoms will generally increase for a time and a large amount of insulin will be required. After a few years, however, if wisely managed, the disease will steady down so that in young adult life a smaller amount of insulin is required.

It is not always necessary to keep the child entirely sugar-free, as to do so would require too frequent insulin injections or doses so large that an insulin reaction might occur. Rather than run the risk of insulin reactions it is often wiser to permit the blood sugar to remain at a level a trifle higher than normal.

During the period of adolescence—and in many children this begins as early as 12 or 13 years of age—strict adherence to a diet is difficult. Although most of these children understand their status thoroughly, yet with the enlargement of the spirit of adventure and of freedom they are inclined to break away from the rigid diet. They will do this occasionally even though they know the consequences. Gradually wisdom comes and they are just as anxious as anyone to control such accidents as coma and the reaction that follows an overdose of insulin. An intelligent child, beyond the age of 5 or 6, can be taught to follow a diet and to weigh his food.

The psychological attitude of diabetic children is interesting. Although at first they may feel somewhat handicapped, most of them regain confidence as they study their own cases and gain the upper hand.

Hudson, Twenty-first and C streets northwest, for her recipe for spring favorite, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Philip Tarr, Lanham, Md., for her recipe for spring bouquet salad.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Dorothy Nalley, 371 Charles street, Winchester, Va., for her recipe for pineapple and strawberry salad; to Mrs. George Canalle, Winchester, Va., for her recipe for lettuce and cress salad with Roquefort dressing; to Mrs. E. H. Miller, 1321 Buchanan street northwest, for her recipe for frozen cheese salad, and to Mrs. Grace Plummer, 1210 Minnesota avenue northeast, for her recipe for jellied vegetable spring salad.

Rose and Thistle Salad.

- 6 medium-sized tomatoes
- 6 lettuce leaves
- 6 stalks celery
- ⅛ pound Roquefort cheese
- 6 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon chopped pimiento
- Red button radishes
- Spring onions

Peel and chill tomatoes. Cut each from top nearly down to bottom into six sections. Partly fill with diced celery, top with Roquefort dressing, sprinkle with pimiento and encircle the whole with radish roses and onion thistles placed alternately.

Roquefort dressing: Beat cheese, mayonnaise and lemon juice thoroughly.

Thistles: Cut onions into 2½-inch lengths. Stand them on end and cut downward several times nearly to bottom, like a paintbrush. Leave roses and thistles in cold water an hour or more, to open and curl before serving.

Spring Favorite.

- 1 fresh pineapple
- 2 carrots
- French salad dressing
- Cream cheese or cottage cheese
- Watercress

Cut the pineapple lengthwise, leaving some of the stem ends on each section. Take out center part and cube. Grate carrots and add enough cheese to form this into small balls. Roll balls in grated carrot that has not been mixed with cheese.

Place carrot cheese balls and cubed pineapple in the pineapple shells which have been placed on the salad plates. Place watercress on each side of the pineapple shell. Serve with French salad dressing.

French Salad Dressing.

1-3 cup mild vinegar and lemon juice (little more than half lemon juice)

- 1 cup salad oil
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon paprika

Mix ingredients and beat thoroughly. Place in refrigerator and shake well before using.

Spring Bouquet Salad.

- 1 large new green cabbage
- 2 small crisp carrots
- 9 radishes
- Russian dressing

Russian Dressing.

- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 1 hard cooked egg (chopped)
- 2 tablespoons chili sauce
- 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon chives
- 2 tablespoons chopped nuts

Select a large, green, crisp cabbage. Pick off the outer leaves, wash and dry thoroughly. With a sharp knife hollow out the cabbage until you have an attractive bowl with the outer leaves standing out as little frills. Use about half of the center cabbage and shred it finely. Wash and dry the carrots and six of the radishes and shred them, using a medium vegetable shredder. Combine with cabbage. Combine the dressing in the order given. Mix lightly with salad, fill the cabbage bowl and garnish with the remaining radishes, cut into roses.

Pineapple and Strawberry Salad.

- 1 small fresh pineapple
- 1 tablespoon chopped mint leaves
- 1½ cups fresh strawberries

Peel pineapple and remove eyes. Cut in slices and then in cubes. Chill. Wash, hull and chill the strawberries. Combine the fruit and arrange on a bed of mint. Sprinkle with the mint and serve with honey dressing.

Honey Dressing.

- 3 tablespoons salad oil
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 tablespoon of lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon salt

Beat together the salad oil, honey, lemon juice and salt until well blended. Use at once.

Lettuce and Cress Salad With Roquefort Dressing.

- 1 head lettuce
- 2 bunches cress
- 1 green pepper
- 1 canned pimiento
- Bunch of radishes

Shred head of lettuce coarsely and arrange it with watercress, half and half on individual plates. Pick over the cress and cut off coarse stems. Wash and chill before serving. Pile lightly in center of salad plates. Surround with the shredded lettuce. Sprinkle cress with diced pimiento and lettuce with chopped green pepper and garnish with radish rose. Carefully spoon over dressing and serve at once.

Dressing.

Rub a deep narrow bowl with a cut kernel of garlic, place in it ¼ pound of Roquefort cheese crumbled, ½ teaspoon powdered mustard, ¼ teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Work to paste and add ¾ cup of oil and ¼ cup cider vinegar. Beat with rotary egg beater until smooth.

OBJECT— Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

On her eighteenth birthday, Katrina Harman learns that she has lost her fortune and that Tazewell Bronson, whom she loves, also loves her, but has no intention of marrying anyone. Ill-advisedly, she lets him pay for some frocks she has ordered and gives him her I. O. U. for them. She can not repay him and is determined not to see him again, although he tries to continue his attentions. After a wearying search, she gets a job as a waitress. One day she is called to serve a luncheon party and finds that it is Tazewell who is entertaining. In her perturbation, she drops a tray on the frock of his guest and humiliated leaves the restaurant. Before she does so, the proprietor tells her Tazewell wants to see her. She refuses to see him. At home in her boarding house, she is talking to Ann Graham when a note comes from Mrs. Fremys-Dillon asking to see her. Katrina had applied for a position as her companion, but had been rejected; now the place is open again and Katrina is to come at once. Mrs. Fremys-Dillon spends the first hour reciting the trials she endured at the hands of her former companions.

"TO my unutterable amazement the sweet-faced Loula Sharpe, in her offended vanity, actually accused me of not knowing what I was talking about," Mrs. Fremys-Dillon continued. "She said I wasn't half as smart as I thought I was; that other people knew a thing or two and that she understood and pronounced French quite as well, if not better than I. Have you ever heard of such downright ignorance and impudence? I certainly never have and it cost this companion her job, for I ordered her to pack her things and go."

"And she left at once, I presume," concluded Trina, wondering why Mrs. Fremys-Dillon was honoring her, a comparative stranger, with all these confidences.

"No, not at once," said the "confider." "Not until after she'd staged a regular exhibition right here in this room. The vulgarian . . . that's what she turned out to be, a vulgarian . . . had the temerity to call me an opinated hypochondriac, sick nowhere but in the head . . . just note the commonness of her phraseology. You can imagine how it made me shiver.

"But to pass on to the next companion, Mamie Udell. She came to me highly indorsed by the Rollstone Employment Agency. And she started off fairly well. But, unfortunately, she drank. Yes, the second day I smelled Scotch whisky on her breath and spoke about it, since that is an odor I can not abide. After that she continued to drink, though she disguised the liquor smell with mints. I know this because I got the odor of peppermints every time the woman came near me, and on the fourth day the most terrible thing happened . . ."

Trina watched the "semi-invalid" fortify herself with deeper and deeper inhalations from the Lalique bottle and inquired: "What was this terrible thing if . . . if you care to tell me?"

Had Been Drinking.

"I intend to tell you." And in a voice dramatically lowered, "Mamie Udell all but poisoned me. With a disinfecting solution of carbolic acid. She'd just returned from her afternoon outing drunk, you see. So irresponsibly drunk that instead of giving me my before-dinner tonic . . . I'd dismissed Miss Purvis then and it was the companion's duty to give me the tonic . . . she brought in from the bathroom the carbolic solution which was about the same color as the tonic. And I'd—I'd burned my lips and tongue before I discovered the difference."

"How horrible—and dangerous!" exclaimed Katrina.

"Wasn't it? Just suppose I hadn't discovered the mistake . . . in time! Think of my narrow escape from death at the hands of this supposedly 'settled' woman!

"All of which brings me back to you, child. Because of these shocking experiences with older companions I've decided, as I wrote you, to give you, and youth, a chance . . . provided you can assure, convince me indeed . . . in the event I engage you . . . that courting and boy friends will not distract you from your duties to me . . . and provided you will promise me, on your word of honor, not to marry within, let us say, at least a year. I abominate changing companions. Now can you, in conscience, give me this assurance, make me this promise? Think well before you answer."

Trina thought "well." And long. She thought about Tazewell Bronson, the one and only boy friend for whom she'd ever even been tempted to care and on whom she'd bestowed — or rather, squandered, yes, looking back "squandered" was the verb—all her love.

She thought about their courtship. About the grand, after-graduation "whirl," so thrillingly begun and so abruptly terminated on that night of nights when all her joys had seemed to come to such a sudden and breath-taking end.

And, lastly, Katrina recalled her meeting with Taz in the Blue Moon Restaurant that very same day, scarcely two hours before. But could it have been just two hours since she'd gazed into Tazewell's astonished eyes and then dropped the luncheon tray, spilling hors d'oeuvres on his sister's dress?

Money-as-a-substitute-for-love! Wasn't that what he'd been determined to force upon her? Otherwise why had he deliberately gone upstairs and waited in Paul Doremus's private office for the restaurateur to take her to him?

Well, for once he'd waited in vain, this flirtatious rich man's son, accustomed to having girls at his beck and call and to getting his way in everything.

Again that warning of Elena, her boarding-school chum, flashed into Trina's mind. The laughing and yet not jesting advice to beware of the charmer, the love-maker who no girl seemed able to resist. But just to prove to him and to herself her own "immunity" hadn't she, though love-struck, refused absolutely and consistently to succumb, only to find later on—in those "off-guard" moments at the Club Miramar—that she, too, like all the rest, had fallen victim to his resistless line, as Ellie had described it.

Victim that she was, however, she'd had the courage and the pride to leave him waiting in that private office of the restaurant while she'd returned to her room and begun another fruitless search of those eternal help wanted ads. Then, in her extremity, when she was all frantic about her joblessness, had come the summons to rush to the Ritz Carlton. And here she was now, at the Ritz, she, the ex-waitress, in this luxurious bedroom, athrill with the expectancy of lining up another job. One much, much-better-paying, too, than the place forfeited on Taz Bronson's account.

Answer Wanted.

Katrina, "thinking" on, glanced at her "summoner," the semi-invalid who, now affecting a becoming Madam Recamier sofa pose, was again sniffing at her smelling salts. Sniffing, also doing some reflecting on her own account as she adjusted her lorgnette, always more of an ornament than a necessity, trained inquisitive eyes on Trina and said:

"I told you to ponder your answer. That's true. But you're taking such a frightfully long time to . . . to respond to my question that I'm wondering if . . . if you aren't encumbered with some sentimental tie or attachment that stands between you and the position I have to offer. It isn't your fault if such is the case. Don't think I blame you."

"Yes, any 18-year-old girl might . . . would indeed be likely to have an interfering love affair . . . or affairs. In my first note I reminded you that 'youth would be served,' didn't I?"

Katrina nodded, which was all she was permitted to do, and Mrs. Fremys-Dillon continued:

"I also wrote, as I distinctly remember, that no girl, unless she was one out of a hundred, could be expected to have the stamina, poise, steadiness and devotion to duty that I require in a companion. You recall that, too, I suppose."

"Perfectly. What's more, I saw your point, disappointed, crestfallen as I was over not getting the job-as-companion. At the same time . . . you may think it strange but I do hope you won't think it conceited of me . . . notwithstanding my youth, I felt deep down that I possessed those qualities you mentioned, those you thought I lacked."

"Then you figured you really were that rare exception, 'the hundredth girl'?"

Ordinary Sheet Has a Life Span Of 250 Washings

The life span of the ordinary sheet is 250 washings.

This is just one of the facts proven by a recent investigation conducted by the United States Institute for Textile Research.

Experiments were made on sheets that were used and laundered daily in hotel service and some sheets that were laundered continuously without use. Those not in use were good for 364 washings.

It was also discovered that sheets change their size, growing shorter and wider. As they lose about 8 per cent, or 5 inches, in length, they gain about 6 per cent, or 4 inches, in width. This is due to the method of ironing the sheets from selvage to selvage.

After six weeks' use the average sheet grows slightly thicker and from then on diminishes slightly. This thinning out is more conspicuous on the inner portions which lose about 30 per cent as contrasted with 10 per cent loss in the outer portions.

Mirror Buttons Appear.

Plain velvet blouses are fastened with colored square mirror buttons to tone. The blouses are to be worn with tailored suits.

Woman Editor Says Advertising's 'Bunk' Antagonizes Women

Mrs. Anna Richardson Warns A. A. A. A. Delegates of Adverse Propaganda Caused by 'Silliness;' Brain Trusters in D. C. Also Blamed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—The faces of some of the advertising agency men attending the A. A. A. A. convention here were red today after they had listened to a talk by Mrs. Anne Steese Richardson, associate editor of Woman's Home Companion.

First warning that if any of her listeners were sensitive he should take a walk around the block while she was speaking, Mrs. Richardson told them what was the matter with some of their copy, so far as woman readers were concerned.

Pleading in behalf of convincing advertising, Mrs. Richardson told of a recent tour of the country during which she interviewed thousands of women on their reactions to advertising, and in which she found there had been built up in some quarters a strong propaganda against advertising. She said some "brain trusters" in Washington and the Consumers Research, Inc., were principally to blame.

Antagonism Encountered.

"In the federated and unfederated clubs, in the League of Women Voters, in the American Association of University Women, and in the American Home Economics Association, I met the bitterest antagonism to advertising," Mrs. Richardson said. "Time and again I felt as if I were beating my bare fists against the stone wall of prejudice.

"The propaganda was started three years ago by the United States Government and Drug Bureau in Washington, in its entirely just and sincere desire to strengthen the regulation of foods, drugs and cosmetics. Then came the Consumers Research, Inc., of Washington, with its bulletins, published ostensibly to inform consumers on adulterated foods, drugs and cosmetics, but more directly to increase the sales of books written by its founders, such as '100,000,000 Guinea Pigs,' 'Partners in Plunder' and 'Skin Deep.'

Mrs. Richardson said propaganda against advertising also is being carried on by the American Home Economics Association.

"All in all, this sort of propaganda has reached and thoroughly permeated organized women to the number of 6,000,000." She said the advertising business is given no representation on the programs of these women.

Appeal Discussed.

Discussing the type of advertising that appeals to women and the kind that doesn't, Mrs. Richardson said:

"So let us discuss advertising that women do not like. Some of it is bad, unconvincing. Some of it is merely out-dated. Remember, the tastes of women in advertising change as in hats. Under our outmoded advertising falls the testimonial of the movie star and of the woman who is rich and socially prominent. But women do like group testimonials. By this I mean the photographs and the letters from women like themselves, homemakers of moderate means, everyday friendly people such as you find in the advertising of the laundry association.

"Another out-dated type of advertising is the cartoon. It may amuse the children, and give dad a laugh, but mother does not like to be caricatured, even though she knows she looks that way.

"You have sold cakes of soap by the million, jars of cold cream and dentifrice in equally large quantities by exploiting the 'skin men love to touch' and the 'lips they like to kiss.' May I suggest you lay off this type of advertising? Women have suddenly developed a peeve on advertising that smacks of sex appeal. Perhaps they have gone clean minded along with the motion producers. Perhaps the tab-

House Advertising Stressed at Meeting

W. C. McKeehan Visions New Opportunities.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—A great opportunity for advertising service exists in the field of housing, William C. McKeehan, jr., of J. Walter Thompson Co., told the A. A. A. A. convention here today.

Describing the Federal housing program, Mr. McKeehan said that there are 15,000,000 houses in need of repair and that 60 per cent of the people live in homes below minimum standards.

"The building industry has not been represented to the consumer on a comparable basis with other products," the speaker said. He pointed out that the building industry fell off 90 per cent during the depression, as compared with a 20 per cent drop in the consumer industries.

"If the building industry is stimulated a great deal can be done to lick the depression," he said. The Government, he added, had asked the A. A. A. A. to assist in advertising home loans.

"For the first time," he added, "the Government has said to the people, 'buy things for the home.'"

Mr. McKeehan predicted that the pre-fabricated home would be popular in five or ten years.

Lace Gowns Predominate At Ad Dinner

Predictions of Spring Styles Borne Out at White Sulphur.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—Lace, which designers and stylists have been predicting would be the material for formal gowns this spring, made an important showing last night at a dinner given in the terrace dining room of the Greenbrier for women guests at the eighteenth annual meeting of th American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Mrs. Arthur Kudner, attractive brunette wife of the retiring chairman of the association's board, had chosen white lace, made on the new fluent lines, which somehow manage to look as picturesqque while the wearer is walking as while she is standing.

While Mrs. Kudner was dining with the women in the terrace room, Mr. Kudner attended a stag dinner for members of the association in the Greenbrier auditorium. Although he retired yesterday as chairman of the board he is now a member of the board-at-large. Mr. Kudner is president of Erwin Wasey and Co., of New York.

Lace Predominates.

Other lace gowns noted at the dinner last night were those worn by Mrs. Guy Chester Smith, Mrs. G. Lynn Sumner, and Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson.

Mrs. Smith, whose husband was yesterday made a member-at-large of the association's board and who is representing Brooke, Smith and French Inc., of Detroit, at the meeting, wore pinkish beige lace combined with matching chiffon. Lace in a small, dainty pattern made the deep full flounce on the chiffon skirt and also formed the cowl-necked yoke of the chiffon bodice. As Mrs. Smith came from the movies to join the bridge players late in the evening she wore over her gown a full length wrap of black velvet, with ermine stole.

Mrs. G. Lynn Sumner, wife of the head of the G. Lynn Sumner Advertising Co. of New York, had on one of the most unusual costumes at the dinner last night. The lines

Cocktail Parties Precede Brilliant Event at White Snlphur.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—The climax of the social side of the eighteenth annual meeting of the American Association of Advertising Agencies came tonight when a formal dinner was held in the auditorium of the Greenbrier for members, their wives and guests. About 275 attended.

Preceding the dinner, which included an elaborate program with Charles F. Kettering, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, as main speaker, were numerous private cocktail parties, as well as a formal reception.

Among the guests were Chester H. Lang, of the General Electric Corporation in Schenectady, N. Y.; O. C. Head, of the Audit Bureau of Circulation of Chicago; Clare Maxwell, of the publication, Life, and Victor Whitlock, of the United States News, Washington.

Later in the evening there was dancing in the ballroom. The majority of the men wore black ties, but the women's costumes were decidedly formal. One of the most attractive gowns was the imported white crepe worn by Mrs. Roy Durstine, wife of the vice president and general manager of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., of New York. Her dress was designed along simple form-fitting lines in front, but in back a peacock train with stripes of satin woven into the white crepe spread behind the wearer as she walked. With this stunning Paris model, Mrs. Durstine wore orchids and purple sandals.

Mrs. Kudner, whose husband is president of Erwin Wasey & Co., of New York, was beautifully

Rain Dampens Ardor Of Ad Group Golfers

Arthur W. Kohler's 89-19-70 Score Tops Small Field of Hardy Souls Spurning Salons for Seepy Links at White Sulphur Springs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—Most of the 70 entrants in today's A. A. A. A. golf tournament preferred to stay on the alkaline side of the clubhouse doors, and scores were posted by less than two dozen hardy linksmen, who found the course more saturated than the market.

They may have smiled when he stood on the first tee, but Arthur W. Kohler, of Philadelphia, got enough lift with his niblick to card an 89, 19—70 for the low net of the day. J. W. Foley stroked several putts that were good to the last drop and posted an 84 that stood up for low gross.

The afternoon's downpour resulted in postponement until tomorrow morning of the formal prize competition. Awards of the various trophies will be made tomorrow afternoon following the pause that refreshes. And they will be made without anyone clipping a coupon or seeing his dealer immediately.

No Prizes Offered.

With no prizes at stake, today's contestants had an eye to the soggy ground and an ear to the future. They tried to be nonchalant while testing their new, more durable, more economical, 1936 model, streamline swings, but there were few who did not concede that when better shots are made someone else will make them.

When it came to slicing, four out of five had it and none took much stock in saving the surface to save all. The contact men for a change liked the layout, but they didn't get the right copy of a swing of honey-like smoothness. They seemed to have neglected to ask the man who owns one.

Scores soared above the century mark as the harsh irritants of the sand traps took their toll, but out of the 57 varieties there were several who gave evidence that they should be in the running tomorrow, even though the field will be considerably stronger then.

General Motors Head Acts as Own Redcap

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12. — Charles F. (Boss) Kettering, famous inventor and vice president of General Motors, prefers to carry his own grips. He did it when he came to the Greenbrier Hotel here to address the A. A. A. A. convention. The habit is so strong with him that Mrs. Kettering gave him a porter's cap last Christmas. He wasn't wearing the cap.

Getchell Paper Reveals Secret Of Advertising

Delegates to Convention Are Told of Necessity of Creating Ideas.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—Some inside stories of how advertising campaigns came into being were sent to the A. A. A. A. convention here yesterday by J. Stirling Getchell, president of J. Stirling Getchell, Inc. Mr. Getchell was unable to be present and his paper was read by William Blees, of his organization.

Mr. Getchell cited specific instances. He told of how a new automobile model was introduced simultaneously with that of a competitor and advantage taken of the competitor's preliminary build-up. He told of deliberately wrecking automobiles to provide advertising copy. He explained how his agency discovered that one great factor in selling gasoline was attractive filling stations.

"Today, I believe the technique of advertising parallels very closely the business of producing movies or editing a magazine," Mr. Getchell said. "We all deal with the same common denominator—the public."

"Success in publishing concerns itself with finding out what a given group of people want to read, and supplying that demand. A publisher reflects the taste of his readers. A theater reflects the taste of its patrons. Success in advertising is dictated by this same ability to sense the public pulse. We are interpreters of mass thinking. Our work must be tuned to the tempo of the times.

"It seems to me that we have made tremendous progress in the past ten years. Advertisements today, in my opinion, are more uniformly good. The peaks and valleys have disappeared.

"Simple sincerity and honest enthusiasm make people buy."

Advertising Termed Vital to Continuance Of Recovery in U. S.

Arthur Kudner, Chairman of A. A. A. A.'s Board, Sounds Optimistic Note at Group's Convention at White Sulphur.

By Felix Bruner.
Post Staff Correspondent.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—America is started toward recovery and advertising is necessary to keep the movement going in that direction, Arthur Kudner, president of Erwin, Wasey & Co. and chairman of the board of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, told members of the A. A. A. A. in their convention here today.

"You have heard it said with increasing frequency lately that the progress of recovery is up to business," he said. "And those of us who have had the privilege of watching the commercial process at work know that a great variety of business depends in critical measure upon advertising."

Mr. Kudner recalled that at the convention last year "the matters foremost in mind were the enfeebled pulse of business and the dubious condition of the country."

Bewilderment, foreboding, fear, hung like a pall upon our gathering in Washington, so that for some of us our meeting there last year served less as an instrument of inspiration and encouragement than as an augury of worse to come.

"On Way to Recovery."

"The terrible things we feared a year ago have not happened. Neither the country nor the advertising business has gone to the dogs. As for the first, whatever you or I may think as to the helps or hinderances of governmental policy, the evidences are that we are started on our way to recovery, that we made the turn in April, 1933. The indices show that from the lows of two years ago commodity prices have risen from 60 to 79 per cent, cost of living from 128 to 139; business volume, from 59 to 89; stock prices, from 50 to 101; bond prices, from 64 to 84; bank deposits, net demand, from $13,000,000,000 to $19,000,000,000; excess bank reserves from zero to $2,000,000,000; farm parity ratio, from 49 to 84. There are some dark spots in the picture, of course. Not all the factors are good. But the net is good. If the philosophy is right, that it is better to travel hopefully than to arrive, what more do we want?

"The terrible things have not happened," he continued. "And I repeat again, for the emphasis I believe it deserves, that our central responsibility, the core and kernel of our interest, must properly be fixed and focused not on transient anxieties, but instead on how each in our own strength and all in our collective strength can enhance and enlarge the usefulness of the work in which we deal—advertising, advertising which sells goods, advertising which pays its way, advertising which earns a profit by the service it performs."

Advertising Emphasized.

After reviewing the progress of advertising in the last quarter-century, he said:

"America is started toward recovery. You have heard it said with increasing frequency lately that the progress of that recovery is up to business. And those of us who have had the privilege of watching the commercial process at work know that a great variety of business depends in critical measure upon advertising."

"I hear it often said," he continued, "that as advertising men we stand in the position of interpreters between industry and the public. We must not forget that this is a relationship which works both ways. We need to interpret, perhaps first of all, the public to the manufacturer so that he will be willing to revise his thinking on advertising where necessary, and publish advertising which fits the Masses Depending On It for News of Progress, Says Durstine.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—The only way much of the news of scientific progress that makes for a real "more abundant life" will reach millions of people is through advertising, Roy S. Durstine, first president and general manager of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., told members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies here today.

"Every period of our business experience, I suppose, has been full of problems and responsibilities for those of us who are in agency work," he said. "There have been depressions before. There have been times before when it was difficult to get and develop and service and hold accounts. There have been times before when Washington was a puzzle and a question mark, and when Dr. Wiley was the Tugwell of his day.

Good Example Seen.

"But perhaps the fact which makes our lives so full and varied and exciting in the poignant moments through which we are now passing is that never before have all these vicissitudes hit us at the same time. The African dodger who gives you three shots at his head for a nickel is counting on the fact that he will have to dodge only one baseball at a time. If all the customers would up and let fly at once, his problem would be intensified.

"It did me a lot of good about a year ago to visit Vienna and to see how the people of that glamorous and gallant city were facing the fact that a piece of money which used to represent $1,000 is now worth exactly 5 cents.

"Oh, yes," they said, "the situation is hopeless, but it isn't serious. Maybe ours isn't even hopeless.

"But we have our problems and they seem pretty big to us, and we

'Honest Ad' Lauded By Mrs. Meloney

Tribute Written by Her Late Husband Read at Meeting.

Special Dispatch to The Post

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—Delegates to the A. A. A. A. convention here cheered today when Mrs. William Brown Meloney, newspaper magazine editor, read the following, entitled "The Last Magic," written by her late husband, William Brown Meloney.

"I sing the song of the Ad—the honest Ad.

"I am, myself, an honest Ad. I pay my way wherever I go. I am the high chamberlain of cleanliness; the arch enemy of disease. I am the destroyer of hovels; the light of dark places. I kiss the hue of health into the cheeks of babes. I smooth the path of old age. I fire the homing instincts in the breasts of men, and I turn their thoughts to love. I make women desire homes. I am the builder of homes—the guardian of their inhabitants. I make the gutter-gazers look up at the stars. I am the torch of emulation, the reporter of progress, the spur of genius; the bread of its dreams. I am the sign of success. I am success. I speak in the tongues of all Christendom. I am universal. I move mountains. I make deserts burgeon in vines and golden wheat, in towns, in great cities. I plume sea skies and fret rivers, and I harry deep waters with traffic. I am the spirit of commerce—the touchstone of industry. I rob labor of drudgery. I renew faith in better things. I shall pass with man's final thought. I am the world's last magic. The honest Ad."

loids have left too little to the imagination, or perhaps it is just because the majority of women who are the purchasing agents for their families have reached the age when they realize, alas, that no man is interested in touching their skin, however smooth, or their lips, however enticing.

"Much of the medical supply advertising is in poor taste and often ridiculous. In their desire to pique interest and curiosity, copywriters go to absurd extreme. Perhaps many of you have seen the page ad of a certain show in the December magazines. A beautiful bride from head to ankle. A photograph of a young and bewitching girl in a bridal gown and this text:

"Beautiful blonde, 21, everyone is saying Mrs. John Bruce Hamilton makes a lovely bride. Everything about her shows years of careful grooming and attention. Her fingertips are faultless, her hair is lustrous, her brows perfect, her complexion the envy of beholders, her figure gorgeous.

"Yet, as she proudly rests her satin sleeve on the muscular Hamilton arm a secret remorse mars her happiness. Her thoughts are in her shoes. She is so ashamed of her feet. And they hurt, too. For inside her bright new slippers lurk poor misshapen feet with twisted toes, aching arches and ugly, calloused heels.

"Hamilton doesn't know yet."

"What kind of guy is Hamilton?" Mrs. Richardson asked. "Didn't he ever take her for a swim?"

Cites Toothbrush Ad.

"Look at another bride in a December ad. Leaving the church in lovely array, on the arm of the bridegroom, who looks like a figure from a theater program. And what do you think troubles this lovely bride? On their honeymoon she and her husband discovered they both used the wrong kind of toothbrush.

"Well, all I've got to say is this: 'If a bridal couple have nothing better to do or discuss on their wedding night than toothbrushes, they are out of luck.'

"You may think this is funny. Well, I consider it just rotten advertising copy, the sort that makes a woman laugh, but not buy a new toothbrush.

"And now for the advertising that women like.

"They like pictures. You owe that change of taste to the movies. Visual advertising, as well as visual education, is popular. Why read about China when you can see a travelogue?

"Women like color; in fact, they have gone mad about it. Women want beauty in advertising pages. The less they have in their homes and the more drab their lives, the more beauty they want in advertising. They like to dream that their homes, their frocks, their dressing tables and their complexions may some day be as lovely as the pictures you paint in your advertising. The woman who doesn't even own an evening frock likes to visualize herself leading groups of overdressed (or underdressed) guests into the kitchen to see her new electric refrigerator, or down into the spotless cellar to view her oil burner.

"Women are interested in what their children like. Their natural curiosity of boys makes them habitual coupon cutters. They want to see what lies behind the coupon in magazine advertising, and a boy can almost always wangle a stamp or a dime out of mother to satisfy his curiosity.

"Just remember—there are some 20,000,000 mothers in the United States."

temper and tendency of the times. And we need now, I believe, to interpret to the public the manufacturer as well as his wares. I know from my own experience, as I believe you know from yours, that the consciously unscrupulous advertiser is a rarity, that the advertisers with whom we deal are sincere and honest people, anxious to please the public, anxious to play fair with their employes, anxious properly to guard the interests of the shareholders in their enterprise.

"It may not sell goods to say all of these things in advertising, but on the timely occasion it may sell something more: the right to survival of our own and of general business; and in that selling we shall go a long way on the right road if we make what the advertiser is doing interesting to the public, and if we make the telling of his story convincing and sincere.

A Glimpse of The Future.

"And now, as against the future. I never think of the future but I think of a favorite remark by C. F. Kettering. 'I am most interested in the future,' he said, 'because from now on I have to do all my living there.' All right, then, let us look ahead into that future, and see how we may most constructively function in the time ahead. We must not be intimidated by that future because we are fearful of what seem to be present facts. Facts encumber some men. They tyrannize over them. They quench in them every spark of that light by which humanity has found its way forward from the dark. So let us not be enslaved by what appear to be present facts, but by unaffrighted understanding let us master them—fit them in their places; let us seek through them to the principle, remembering that the last fact may change all that has gone before.

"That is the latest fact — it is growing strong—and we shall do well to recall the latest fact when the tide of doubt flows high. There is a time for doubt, of course; but there is likewise a time for faith. On doubt, I suspect we are somewhat over our quota, for I believe the very makings of the new prosperity we shall know are in the adversities of today.

Huge Purchasing Power.

"I base that belief on the driving power in the American character that has made this Nation the wonder and the envy of the world. Think of it, we have barely 7 per cent of the world's people. Yet this little group in the United States has more purchasing power than all Europe combined. It has created and owns more than half the world's wealth. It has produced, in the bracket of 159 years since 1776, three times as much wealth as the whole world has been able to produce in the 100 centuries that went before.

"From 6 per cent of the world's acreage our people harvest more than half the world's foodstuffs. Sixty per cent of all the minerals are extracted in America. Half the communication facilities, nearly half the railways and electrical energy, have been developed and are in use here. Individual transportation is high-lighted in the production of 92 per cent of the world's motor car output, which is operated on 600,000 miles of paved highways.

Our 7 per cent of the world's people consumes half the world's coffee, half of its tin, half of its rubber one-fourth of its sugar, three-fourths of its silk, one-third of its coal, two-thirds of its crude petroleum. It spent in 1933 more than $3,000,000,000 on education, more than the total spent by all other countries. Nowhere are there such creature comforts, nowhere such facilities and opportunities for advancement for the common man. Share the wealth? We've been doing that for years. In what other nation, in what other time, can you find anything comparable to our millions of depositiors in savings banks and building and loan associations, our 65,000,000 life insurance policies, our millions of security holders, our 60 per cent of farms unencumbered, and our 55 per cent of freeholders of urban homes?

Reinforcing Future Security.

"The wealth and the reliance and the genius of our country are not to be truly calculated either in the Capitol or the exchange. They repose and they endure and flourish in the courage and vitality of our people. However much you may be impressed or appalled by the titanic spendings from Washington, by the audacious legislation in effect or in prospect, do not look to these for the real security of the future of this land. That security is the special charge not of a few, but of all the unafraid and inventive and resourceful and serviceable among us, and it will remain, as it always has been, guarded by their devoted care.

gowned in grayish blue lace, made with drop shoulders and neckline, and a slim skirt which gained fullness at the bottom through ruffles.

Mrs. E. J. Owens, of New York, wore a picturesque frock of turquoise blue bengaline taffeta with silver and blue flowers perched on one shoulder of the drop neckline. This was outlined with turquoise velvet ribbon. The skirt was at least 10 yards wide at the bottom. Mrs. Owen's husband is with Erwin Wasey & Co., of New York.

Mrs. E. O. Perrin, wife of a representative of McCann-Erickson, Inc., of New York, was strikingly lovely in green crepe.

Mrs. J. M. Dawson, whose husband is with Tracy-Locke-Dawson, of New York, wore black chiffon with rhinestone clips as the only ornament. A note of contrast was her brilliant green sandals.

Mrs. W. C. D'Arcy, wife of the head of the D'Arcy Advertising Co. of St. Louis, had chosen black lace with a train and a fluffy capelet effect.

Mrs. G. Lynn Sumner appeared at this dinner in a smart navy blue net dress, made on tailored lines, with pique belt and big white pique revers. Her husband is head of the New York company which bears his name.

Among the guests of members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies were Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Thompson, of the Western Electric Co. of New York. Mrs. Thompson wore a handsome gown of wine-colored crepe, shot through with silver threads.

Mrs. Winthrop Hoyt, whose husband is representing the Charles W. Hoyt Co., of New York, at this meeting, had chosen a gay black and rose print in a carnation pattern. The skirt was slinky to the knees and then billowed into considerable fullness.

Prints were much in vogue at the dinner. Mrs. D. C. Hight, whose husband is with McCann-Erickson, Inc., in Detroit, wore a good-looking printed crepe in vivid hues.

One of the most striking dresses of the evening was the rose red taffeta worn by Mrs. Frederick R. Gamble, whose husband is executive secretary of the association. A big bow extended across the front of the bodice neckline and the skirt had the fashionable width at the bottom.

Mrs. Guy C. Smith, of Detroit, had chosen a black lace gown with a frilly tulle capelet and a full flounce at the bottom of the skirt.

have our responsibilities, which we have no desire to escape.

"We have a responsibility to the people within our own organizations. Frank Braucher congratulated us yesterday on the fact that we reduced our salaries and lowered or abolished our dividends before we cut personnel. And when cuts came, in many cases, they were on a graduating basis.

"What about our responsibility to our clients today and in the future which, so far as we can foresee it, means the next sixty or ninety days?

"Never, I believe has it been so important for us to deal with our clients without fear and with honest convictions and sincerity and courage. Backbones are easy to keep stiff in boom times, but it is harder to keep from being a 'yes' man when the pressure on the back of the neck gets heavy. But to stand firm when a client tries us out with a cock-eyed proposal or when he wants to dilute a recommendation until it is foredoomed to failure is a greater responsibility now than it ever was.

"Whether it looks like it or not, the country's thinking and buying habits, its attitude toward values and spending and luxuries and drinking, and housekeeping and taxes, is as different today from ten years ago as Germany is from pre-Hitler days. Russia isn't the only country that has had a revolution.

Responsibilities Stressed.

"What about our responsibility to each other and to our other competitors? If this were a convention of bankers or doctors you would see a faint but recognizable likeness in manner and dress and expression. But we are all sizes and ages. We don't even look alike.

"Maybe some day all of our competitors will call us up to ask us about a man before they offer him four times what we are paying him. It might save them money. Maybe some day they will realize that their funny new business letters which promise the earth with a fence around it are just as funny to our clients as they are to us. Maybe some day they will see that the agencies which stay in business longest and make the most money over the greatest period are the ones that always and without exception, in prospect calls and in chats with publishers, invariably give their competitors a break.

"Most important of all, to the public is our greatest responsibility. If you don't believe that advertising is bringing the public a higher standard of living than it could enjoy and bringing it more economically than with any other form of selling, by all means go home and dissolve your agency and get yourself appointed the local representative of consumers research.

"When a prominent big shot in the Department of Agriculture is holding up two full-page newspaper advertisements and saying that as much would be sold if the whole thing were abolished, this is no time for anybody in the advertising business unless he knows in his heart of hearts that no other method of selling ever devised or even proposed could tell so many people so quickly and at so little cost the news of what scientists have discovered in laboratories—of what technical men in less spectacular but just as effective workrooms have learned to make life happier and more convenient, and —yes—more bountiful and more beautiful for the millions of our countrymen. That is the "abundant life" of which we have heard so much. And you must know now that the only way this news will ever reach the mass of Americans is by advertising."

Publishers Compare Notes on Eighteenth A. A. A. A. Convention

Frank Braucher, vice president of the Crowell Publishing Co., and president of the Periodical Publishing Association; R. E. Rindfuss, executive secretary of the Periodical Publishing Association, and J. E. Smith, assistant to the vice president of the McCall Co., were interested guests at the eighteenth annual convention of the A. A. A. A. at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Convention Joy Yields to Woe As Skies Weep

Delegates Who Anticipated Outdoor Sports Seek Solace in Cards.

Special to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—When it rained it poured here today and 400-odd guests to the A. A. A. A. convention and their families kept snugly indoors, well protected from the unseasonable damp of an irregular April. The lobbies and halls of the hotel took on the appearance of the saloons of a transatlantic liner as most of the guests reconciled themselves to a day of chatting and indoor recreation.

White Sulphur is essentially an out-of doors resort and the convention program called for golf, tennis, archery and horse-back riding through the pleasant bridle paths of these wooded hills. But only a few of the hardier devotees of a sport that was designed to be played in fog and mists ventured out to wade through a few holes' play on the golf course. The rest were content to leave their clubs with the baggage labels still on them. It added not a whit, however, to their pleasure to contemplate the prospect of returning to their urban offices and face the ill-disguised chortling of their less fortunate colleagues who had seen them off to the Southland with envious eyes but a few hours before.

Most dismayed of all those who spent the day peering hopefully out the windows searching for any indication of a break in the weather was the hotel press agent. Having occupied himself for weeks previous with sending out gay booklets extolling the beauties of holding a convention in White Sulphur he now felt very much like a magician who fails to find the rabbit in the hat.

"Most unusual weather," he was heard to mutter to himself as he avoided the eyes of the guests. No dissenting voice was heard.

Bridge Diverts Guests While Delegates Work

But Gambling Rendezvous Discovered Near Ad Convention Headquarters Causes Women to Desert Conventional Contract to Woo Lady Luck.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—When the time arrived last night for the ladies' Bridge tournament in the lounge of the Greenbrier, part of the program arranged for guests at the annual meeting of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, only enough players for two tables could be rounded up.

After an active day a good many of the women preferred relaxing at the movies to concentrating on three spades or five diamonds. And then there were a few daring souls who had discovered a gambling rendezvous not too far from White Sulphur. Exciting games of chance lured them away from dignified contract.

But those who did play in the lounge had a jolly informal time, chatting back and forth, refusing to take the game with any great degree of seriousness. And, though they seemed entirely unconscious of the fact, they presented a miniature fashion show which might have caused any member of the haut couture to sigh with rapture.

Mrs. Dreyfuss in Silk.

There was Mrs. Leonard Dreyfuss, chairman of the ladies' committee, whose husband is representing the United Advertising Co. of New York at the meeting. She looked like something taken from a Paris style sheet in her black and white printed silk with the brand new scoop neckline in front, formed by allowing the material to stick out in a scoop-like arrangement on the chest.

The skirt clung to the figure in back, but in the front it had a narrow flange down the center, gathered a bit to give a harem skirt effect. The entire costume was 1906 in theme and brought back the hobble skirt silhouette, considered pretty wicked 30 years ago, but now accepted as quaint.

Members of Mrs. Dreyfuss' committee—Mrs. Frederic R. Gamble and Mrs. Shelley Tracy—also were at the bridge tables.

Mrs. Gamble, wife of the executive secretary of the association, looked far more like an adorable little girl than a young matron in a formal shirtwaist frock of deep brown net, made with short puffed sleeves small, round collar and a row of sparkling buttons marching bravely down the front. The skirt was slim and close fitting until it reached the knees, then, through intricate goring, it swirled and billowed around the wearer's feet.

Mrs. Tracy Wears Black.

Mrs. Tracy wore black crepe embroidered with small black sequins in dollar-sized dots scattered here and there over the plain bodice. A wide red sash encircled the waistline and the ends below the casual loop and knot on one side hung half way down the trailing skirt.

Another attractive costume glimpsed at the bridge tables was the black crepe dress worn by Mrs. William Reydell, whose husband is representing the Newell Emmett Co., of New York, at the meeting. Mrs. Reydell, whose beauty is the type usually described as flower-like, had posed a short gold sequin cape over her shoulders and had tucked two enormous gardenias in the base of the gown's V neckline in front.

The total effect was nothing short of dramatic. The little gold cape, by the way, was fashioned in three tiers, scalloped at the edges.

Two gold lame costumes were noted at the bridge party. Mrs. Joseph Katz, wife of the head of the Joseph Katz Co., of Baltimore, had on a severely tailored gold lame gown. Her sandals were also gold.

Mrs. R. M. Alderman, whose husband is with McCann Erickson, Inc., Cleveland, wore a long-sleeved, high-necked gold lame tunic with long black skirt and black pumps.

A.A.A.A. Thanks Post For Convention News

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—The Washington Post was officially thanked in resolutions adopted at the A. A. A. A. convention today for its coverage of the convention. The only other newspaper mentioned was the Charleston Gazette.

Resolutions also thanked the speakers from outside the organization and the National Broadcasting Co., which supplied entertainment at the concluding meeting tonight.

The convention sent its sympathy to William H. Jones, first president of A. A. A. A., who was prevented by illness from attending the convention. It was the first convention of the organization he has missed.

Dreyfuss, wife of the president of the United Advertising Agency, of New York, have discovered a common interest in bridge as their husbands attend sessions of the A. A. A. Wives Parade Fashions At Session of A. A. A. A.

Mrs. William D'Arcy Sports Black Chiffon With Trained Skirt; Mrs. Richards Wears Exotic Print; Mrs. Eckhardt Boasts Purple Crepe.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12.—Heads turned and admiring glances followed a tall, regal woman gowned simply and exquisitely in black chiffon as she strolled through the lounge of the Greenbrier last night. It was Mrs. William D'Arcy, of St. Louis, Mo., wife of the head of the D'Arcy Advertising Co.

Mr. D'Arcy, a member of the executive board of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, is representing his company at the association's eighteenth annual meeting, now in session here.

Mrs. D'Arcy's softly waved white hair made an attractive frame for her youthful skin, which a subdeb might well envy, and contrasted strikingly with the unrelieved black of her gown. She had chosen this costume, with its trained skirt and rather high-necked bodice, for a dinner in the terrace dining room held exclusively for wives of members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

After the dinner Mrs. D'Arcy declined the ladies' bridge tournament in favor of movies in the ballroom.

Mrs. Fletcher D. Richards, of Greenwich, Conn., was another who preferred movies to contract. As tall, slender, and graceful as a mannequin, Mrs. Richards was gowned in a vivid print with exotic flowers spread over its surface. As she walked from the terrace dining room through the lounge to the ballroom she wore an amusing little knitted cape over her shoulders. The cape, a cream-colored, hip-length affair, gave her a rather demure appearance, but when it was removed the sophistication of her gown became apparent.

The vivid print was cut down almost to the waist in back. But in the front it was drawn close about the throat with a quaint drawstring arrangement. This gave the effect of shirring and brought the brilliant hues of the fabric close to Mrs. Richards' face, thus enhancing her own brilliant brunette coloring.

Her husband is representing the Campbell-Ewald Co. of New York at the meeting of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Mrs. Eckhardt Wears Blue.

Because of the extraordinary ripeness of her sun-tan, Mrs. Henry Eckhardt, wife of the president of Kenyon & Eckhardt, Inc., of New York, advertising firm, was one of the most distinguished looking persons at the dinner last night at the Greenbrier for wives of members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Mrs. Eckhardt's smooth golden-brown skin was set off to perfection by her crepe gown in an unusual bluish purple shade.

Similar in color was the formal crepe jacket ensemble worn by Mrs. Roy Durstine, whose husband is a vice president and general manager of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., New York.

Mrs. Winthrop Hoyt, of New York, was attired in a stunning green and white silk print with a jacket designed along 1840 lines and ornamented with row after row of fine shirring. Mrs. Hoyt is the wife of the Charles W. Hoyt Co.'s representative at the meeting of the association.

Deep and red cabbage roses were smashed against the base of the low back decolletage of Mrs. Ernest V. Alley's black chiffon gown. The skirt ended in a train which added to the picture effect of the costume. Mrs. Alley's husband is a partner in the firm of Richardson, Alley & Richards Co., of Boston.

Mrs. Stacy Page, wife of a vice president of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., of New York, wore silver lame with a silver fox fur draped about the shoulders.

Mrs. S. D. Fuson, whose husband is representing Erwin Wasey & Co., of New York, at the meeting, was beautifully gowned in orchid crepe.

Mrs. H. B. Humphrey, whose husband is head of the H. B. Humphrey Co., of Boston, looked stunning in a black costume.

of her black gown, touched with gold, were extremely simple from high neck and long tight sleeves to plain, floor length skirt. But the material was a miracle performed by some inspired fabric maker.

From a distance of only a few inches it appeared to be a crinkly crepe with gold dots embroidered in precise little rows set about a half inch apart. What looked like crepe, however, was in reality a gossamer lace divided into thousands of tiny squares. In the center of each square was a gold dot.

Crime Laxity Laid to D. C. Police Tests

Rep. Schulte Challenges Blanton to Waive Immunity.

Capt. Morgan Is Cleared of Intent to Accuse Salkeld.

Laxity in enforcement of criminal laws in the District was charged to the civil service method used in promotion of Metropolitan police by Representative William T. Schulte, Indiana member of the House Committee on Local Crime Investigation, in an address at the annual banquet of the Central Business Men's Association last night at the Lafayette Hotel.

Reviewing activities of his committee, Representative Schulte challenged Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Texas, to waive his congressional immunity in attacks on the work of the committee, citizens of Washington and particularly the local press. He characterized Blanton's statements on the floor of the House as a "cowardly and ungentlemanly" way of answering issues.

Representative Schulte declared "mental tests" may be all right in their place, but asserted a policeman's ability to answer correctly a question as to how long it would take a bird of a certain type to complete a flight between two given points was no way to decide whether he was entitled to promotion.

Little's Failure Cited.

He cited Lieut. George Little, of the Vice Squad, as an example of a capable officer who was denied promotion because he missed the answer to a problem as to the time it would take a fish to swim 20 feet in 5 feet of water.

"The merit system should be used in police promotions," he said. "A policeman's record should be the primary factor in considering his application for promotion."

"Under the civil service plan," he continued, "policemen have no incentive to make a record in the service."

As proof of his contention on the promotion method, Representative Schulte cited the decrease in felonies in the District in January and February after his committee had promised a change.

Morgan Is Absolved.

Capt. Joe Morgan, Fifth Precinct, was absolved by Representative Schulte of blame for the furore caused by his statement concerning the suspected "tip-off" in connection with a raid within the shadow of the Capitol some weeks ago.

The speaker said Capt. Morgan inadvertently made a hasty statement during "his session on the hot seat" before the committee. He expressed belief the captain had no intention of accusing Policeman Watson Salkeld of having tipped off the operator of the place raided. Capt. Morgan stated at the time that only he himself and Salkeld knew of the raiding plans.

Representative Schulte called upon all District business men to organize in order to have a voice in municipal affairs of Washington. He declared citizens of Washington were prone "to take" unjust criticism and scurrilous charges without striking back. He also declared the business men should not allow flagrant violations of the law.

After Brown's "Scalp."

The Representative stated he had evidence that certain persons were out to "scalp" Major Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Metropolitan Police; United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and Chief of Detectives W. S. Burke.

Theodore S. Grape, retiring president of the Central Business Men's Association, declared that organization is cooperating with other groups of business men in constant endeavor to make Washington a better place to live and do business.

"One of the most effective ways in which to accomplish this," he said, "is to avoid unjustified criticism of Congressional action affecting the District."

Joseph Blatt was elected president of the association. Directors elected were Theodore S. Grape, W. C. Woodward, H. Cahn, Charles Huff, Dr. George Schmitt, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Al Masters, Dr. Thomas Evans, Ashby Leeth, H. V. Keizer, J. Feldman and F. Levy.

Rich 80's Traced Here By Henry Justin Smith

Man Who Romanticized Newspaper Men Seeks Newspaper Files.

HENRY JUSTIN SMITH.

Henry Justin Smith, tall, thin, gray, came into The Post yesterday, looked up some historical material in the files, smoked a cigarette, and delivered himself, reluctantly, of an interview.

The author of "Deadlines" and "Josslyn," loved by newsmen as two of the best books ever written about their craft, is perhaps best known to the public as author, with Lloyd Lewis, of two histories of Chicago. He also is managing editor of the Chicago Daily News. He left Chicago several days ago and has been hiding out from newspapers and telephones ever since, chasing history along the picturesque bypaths of history-ridden Virginia.

Yesterday he and Mrs. Smith came to Washington still seeking history. For, again with Lloyd Lewis, the thin, nervous newspaperman is writing a book, this time about that lush period, the 1880's, when Chicago was rising out of its ruins into the midland capital of the Nation. He wanted some information and his first instinct was to head for a newspaper "morgue."

Puffing at his cigarette he talked about newspapermen who would be authors.

"The files of a newspaper give the historian the real lowdown, the details of a period. The historian has more and more to turn to the files to get the actual color of a period," Mr. Smith said.

"The files of a newspaper are just as much history as the first folio of Shakespeare," he said, adding, "in a sense."

You will find literature in the newspapers, the author of that romantic masterpiece, "Josslyn," said.

But he added that it is the newspaperman who writes his literature as news who comes the closest to writing real literature. When a reporter develops an "author complex," Mr. Smith said, then "he is finished, as a rule."

'Jean Le Blanc' Held for Word From Sec. Hull

Dapper Bandit Says He's Ready to Return for Canada Trial.

The man who has been called Washington's penthouse prisoner and its most dapper captive had a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday afternoon and announced himself ready and willing to go back to Montreal to face charges of robbing four banks.

But the commissioner decided to await extradition instructions of Secretary of State Cordell Hull. He ordered Alfred Jean des Rochers, 30, arrested last week in a fashionable Connecticut avenue penthouse, held without bail. Back to the District Jail went Des Rochers.

His pretty blonde wife, 26-year-old Vera Lee Dayton, who knew nothing about his past and about whom he had expressed considerable worry, did not attend the hearing. Des Rochers looked rather glum as he made his exit, escorted by detectives.

The complaint against him was signed by the second secretary of the Canadian Legation, Edgar D'Arcy Greer. It charged robbery.

A statement from the United States Immigration Service, introduced at the hearing, said Des Rochers, alias Jean Le Blanc, had been convicted in Los Angeles, Calif., of highway robbery in 1924. Sentenced for from five years to life then, according to the statement, he served a little more than six years and was released to be deported to Vancouver, B. C.

It is understood here that conviction on the charges he faces might mean life imprisonment for him.

Antismoke Bill Draws Protest Of Five Unions

Aimed to Remove Licensed Heating Plant Engineers, Groups Charge.

Charging that the "anti-smoke" bill was drafted to replace licensed heating plant engineers with unqualified persons, five unions yesterday filed 12 objections to the bill with Representative Jenckes, of Indiana, chairman of a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

The present law requires a licensed engineer for any plant having a forced feed to the boiler. The new law would require such an engineer only for boilers carrying more than 15 pounds pressure. This section in the bill, according to the statements of the unions, "constitutes a serious menace to every occupant of apartment houses, hotels and office buildings and over 90 per cent of the pupils and teachers of the public schools."

The letter to Representative Jenckes also adds that the unions are convinced that "collusion" exists between those who drafted the bill and an association of business property owners. The unions which joined in objections to the bill were the Hoisting, Portable and Shovel local, the Stationary Local, School Engineers Locals 102 and 104, and the Universal Craftsman Council of Engineers Council No. 22.

The letter also pointed out that the bill might relieve boilers of the inspections by the District boiler inspector and permit inspections by insurance companies to be substituted. Of the boilers in the District, 90 per cent are insured, according to the unions, and could take advantage of the law to evade District inspection.

Other objections were that no operating engineer must be appointed to the advisory board under the new law, that too much discretion is allowed the District government in setting up regulations, and that houses could be entered, under the antismoke provisions, without warrant at any time.

Desertions Win Divorces.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 12.—Divorces have been granted in the following cases in the circuit court here: Thelma Hudson Kidd against Althey Milbern Kidd and Vincent P. O'Reilly against Ruth Draper O'Reilly. Both suits were based on desertion charges.

Congress Is Asked to Approve Moving Capitol to Middle West

Representative Otha D. Wearin, Democratic farmer-editor of Iowa, yesterday put his tongue in his cheek and introduced a resolution proposing that the National Capitol be moved to the Middle West, Iowa, for instance.

The resolution, made up of a score of whereases, went further, however, and authorized the Secretary of the Treasury "to adequately compensate property owners of the District of Columbia as a result of residence therein."

The President would determine the compensation "upon a basis of hardships incurred by property owners" and would proceed at once to make plans for the transfer of the Capitol to a site to be designated by him.

Citing the proposed Senate increase of $3,477,215 in the District supply bill, Wearin called attention to a number of "hardships" incident to living in the National Capital:

Spendable income is only $918 per capita in Washington, as compared to $660 in the mid-Atlantic States, $464 in Iowa, and a national average of $486.

Low rents range from as little as $75 to $300 a month for two to four spacious rooms—10 or 12 feet square.

Property owners are "being taxed out of existence" as is indicated by the fact that in 1930 property worth $10,000 was taxed $153 in the District, $303 in Jersey City, and $231 in Cleveland.

Federal Government "donates only a paltry $5,700,000 to the overburdened taxpayers and business men of the District for the privilege of having the Federal city in their midst."

Property owners are "humiliated and handicapped by the presence of $303,000,000 worth of magnificent new Federal buildings."

They are forced "to tolerate" the Congressional Library, the National Museum, dozens of parks, et cetra.

Bus Service Wins Praise Of Roberts

Replacing of Anacostia-Congress Heights Trolleys Near.

Removal of Dangerous Traffic Situation Is Seen.

Orders of the Public Utilities Commission for substitution of bus service for the present Anacostia-Congress Heights street car line will remove a serious traffic hazard along the line, People's Counsel William A. Roberts declared last night.

General approval was voiced by Mr. Roberts, but he coupled that with criticism of the lack of direct communication with the heart of the business area on the new bus line. The line will operate along Constitution avenue, necessitating a short walk or transfer to get to the business section.

The commission's order is effective July 1. Five miles of track will be abandoned by it. Street cars now used on the line can be used to bolster service on other lines.

To Improve Service.

Service farther into Congress Heights than street cars now will give will be furnished by the new bus line. Also, instead of wandering through the city, the buses will go as directly and swiftly as possible to the Government triangle area and west to Twentieth street.

"Removal of car tracks," Mr. Roberts said, "will remove serious traffic hazards on the Anacostia Bridge and on Nichols avenue. The flexibility of bus operations will permit extensions into territory not now adequately served. Furthermore, great economies can be effected by this operation through use of lighter equipment in off-peak hours commensurate with the amount of traffic which is offered.

"The bus service substituted," he continued, "is not that recommended by me. It contacts Pennsylvania avenue only at Constitution avenue and there may be some question as to whether this is a sufficiently near approach to the uptown business district.

"It was my understanding that when this line was installed it would reach through that section of old Georgetown which will be without service after the Pennsylvania street car line is removed and give a connection to that part of Georgetown and Thirty-fifth street."

Program Completed.

These orders complete the commission's program of track changes. The next step is to issue orders for actual rerouting of cars over the new changes in track ordered. The commission's final move will be to issue orders on the general transportation system.

The bus line will start at Nichols avenue and Livingstone street, beyond the end of the present street car line. Its exact route will be:

North on Nichols avenue, across the Anacostia bridge, north on Eleventh street, west on Virginia avenue, north on Fourth street, west on E street, along Canal and C streets to Sixth street, north to Constitution avenue and west to a loop around Twentieth street, C street and Constitution avenue.

Regular rates of street car fare with free transfer privileges will apply to the new bus line.

Charts Show Crime Thriving in Slums

Ohio Expert Demonstrates at Social Gathering.

The influence of Cleveland's slum areas on crime, vice, delinquency and tuberculosis was described yesterday to the research committee of the Council of Social Agencies by Howard Whipple Green, secretary of the Cleveland Health Council.

He used overlay maps to show how the majority of murders occur in that section of the city where the popualtion lives in squalid shacks and tenements. Juvenile delinquency and tuberculosis deaths are highest in the same area, he demonstrated.

Lewis Merriam, chairman of the research committee, presided at the luncheon meeting, which was held at the Admiral tea house. He announced that Miss Agnes Leisy, statistician of the council, will take a five months' leave of absence to do investigations for the Governors' Committee on Unemployment Relief. Miss Leisy will leave for New York today to assume her new duties.

District to Buy Fire Apparatus

The District soon will buy three pieces of firefighting apparatus. Where they will be assigned for duty has not yet been determined. Bids submitted by the McCann Corporation, of Portland, Me., were accepted yesterday by the District Commissioners for two combination hose wagons and one 750-gallon pumping engine.

Several citizens associations have been waging campaigns for assignment of the new equipment in their territories. Fire Department officials said the questions had not been decided. One of the unsuccessful bidders complained to the NRA that the McCann bid was in violation of the code, but this was thrown out.

Officials Open Double Attack On D. C. Traffic

New Legislation Framed as 'Live and Let Live' Drive Starts.

Attack on Washington's traffic tangle were delivered on two flanks yesterday by District Commissioners.

A committee of six was appointed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to draft legislation for impounding of parked automobiles which obstruct traffic, for compulsory biennial inspection of automobiles and for a system of magistrates courts.

A slogan of "Live and Let Live" was adopted by another committee which will conduct a vigorous educational campaign to teach citizens to be more careful on highways.

The legislative committee is composed of George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, as chairman; Richmond B. Keech, Public Utilities Commissioner; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; H. Winship Wheatley, president of the Disrtict Bar Association; Wallace B. Robins, chairman of the traffic committee of the Board of Trade, and George W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Assocations.

The educational committee decided also to organize in May and June a highway life guard of pedestrians and motorists, who will encourage saneness in driving and walking.

Windshield stickers will be made to put on automobiles, and buttons with the same insigna will be made for pedestrians to wear. Distribution of 100,000 each of these is contemplated.

Commissioner Hazen said yesterday he hoped to raise a $5,000 fund from private contributions to finance the campaign. Speeches in schools, churches and organizations are being planned by a sub-committee.

Bank Cave-in Hurts Gardens, Blocks Street

Weakened by steady rains, several thousand cubic yards of earth tore loose from an 80-foot bluff on the Rock Creek and Potomac parkway yesterday, carrying with it a part of the garden of Frank J. Hogan, prominent attorney. Several other gardens also were damaged.

The landslide was great enough to compel the closing of the parkway to traffic from Twenty-second and P streets to Massachusetts avenue. It may be weeks until the dirt can be removed and the road reopened, said C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks.

To attempt to clear away the debris before the earth has dried out would be to invite more slides, Finnan said, explaining that the deposited dirt is useful as a prop for the disintegrating bank.

A small summer house, containing a table and several chairs, and a hedge in Mr. Hogan's garden were carried away as the top of the bluff crashed down with a roar. Several small trees were uprooted. The Hogan residence is at 2320 Massachusetts avenue.

Fire Department Harmony Sought

Officers Unit Opens Ranks to Uniform Men.

Fire Department officials are seeking to end disputes between the organized uniform force and the organized officers by revival of the old Firemen's Association of the District, it was learned yesterday.

The Officers' Association of the department has taken the first step by opening its ranks to uniform men and changing its name to that of the former Firemen's Association. Fire Department officials hope that the City Firefighters Association at some future date will amalgamate with the revamped officers' body, now the Firemen's Association.

Officers of the reorganized officers' body are Battalion Chief T. B. Stanton, president; Battalion Chief S. T. Porter, vice president; Sergt. R. E. Hunt, secretary, and Capt. H. A. Chapman, treasurer.

City's Planners Conduct Study Of Pylon Sites

Commission Due to Decide Today Whether Traffic Would Be Impeded.

Members of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, led by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, yesterday inspected dummy pylons in the downtown triangle. Today they will decide whether the pylons, which are to be built of stone, would constitute a traffic menace.

Before leaving on the inspection tour, the commission adopted a resolution inviting Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury Department, to appoint a member of his office to serve on the commission's coordinating committee.

The supervising architect was taken to task by the planners last February because the Treasury let the contract for construction of the ornamental pylons and kiosks without consulting them.

At the closing session this morning, the commission also will discuss observations made yesterday at the abandoned Sixteenth street reservoir and the Tuberculosis Hospital grounds. It has been proposed to convert both of these sites into park and playground areas.

So much opposition developed to restoration of the old Georgetown house once occupied by Francis Scott Key that the commission postponed until next month a decision on whether to request PWA funds for this project.

A resolution was adopted asking the District commissioners to make a study of the Pennsylvania avenue bridge in relation to its approaches.

The planning body voted to send exhibits of the Mall, Union Square and other developments now under way to the California Pacific International Exposition which will open in San Diego next month.

Lumber Mill Ordered To Reinstate 8 Here

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday found the Langdon Mill Lumber of Washington guilty of interfering with the organization of employes and ordered the reinstatement of about eight employes who were discharged in May, 1934.

The board declared that the men were discharged because they were agitating for raises in pay. Noncompliance with the reinstatement order will result in the case being turned over to the compliance division of the NRA for action.

Realty Quiz May Become Prosecutor

Sabath Warns of Action if Illegal Deals Are Revealed.

Reorganizations Aired at Session Before House Group.

Criminal prosecution was threatened yesterday by Representative Adolph J. Sabath, chairman of the House Committee which is investigating mortgage foreclosures in the District, if there are any illegal transactions disclosed.

"I want to say that if there are any criminal acts disclosed, that the committee is going to see that they are prosecuted."

His threat came after W. Bissell Thomas, an attorney, accused the District Supreme Court of having entered a collusive foreclosure in the Wardman Park Hotel case.

On behalf of a client, Thomas had entered a foreclosure suit against the hotel, a few days before a similar suit was entered by the corporate trustee of the first motgage.

Asked whether he viewed the second suit as collusive, Thomas replied: "Yes, I do." The court had allowed the second suit to stand.

Angered at Inference.

Joseph Low, who represented minority bond interests in the refinancing of the Mayflower Hotel, became angered when Representative Francis Culkin, of New York, inferred that he had not acted in good faith in some of the refinancing operations of the Mayflower and Wardman Park Hotel refinancings.

"If you think that," Low shouted, "I will withdraw from the case."

"In that event, I think it would be desirable for you to do so," Culkin replied.

The reorganization of the Mayflower Hotel, is was disclosed, had cost in the neighborhood of $500,000, while that of the National Press Club Building was comparatively inexpensive.

Lawrence B. Campbell, trustee for the Press Building, said his compensation was $5,000 a year, while the reorganization committee received no fees.

Low estimated that the value of his services in the Mayflower case was $35,000. At the height of the case, he said, he was representing $1,200,000 in bonds. He based his claim on the compensation due him for resisting claims of protective committees.

George E. Sullivan, a prominent attorney, told the committee he had resigned as a co-receiver of the La Salle Apartments, when he could not agree with Edward J. Colloday and Enoch A. Chase on rent concession given to the Dulin & Martin Co.

Agreement Approved.

The company had offered $7,500 as payment of a $36,000 claim, he said. This agreement, he said, was approved by the District Supreme Court. At the time of the compromise on the rent due, he said, negotiations were under way to lease it to the Government for $70,000 a year. The commercial rental value of the property was valued at $26,000 a year by H. Clifford Bangs, a real estate man.

Walter B. Guy, an attorney, related the details of the Shoreham Hotel reorganization. Bondholders, he said, have been given new bonds bearing a lower interest rate.

Harry M. Bralove, a local builder, testified that he had purchased $100,000 of the Shoreham notes at 20 to 47 cents on the dollar.

In exchange for the equity he received, Bralove testified, he canceled a mechanics' lien in the amount of $270,000. The equity in the hotel is subject to a $4,000,000 indebtedness.

Justices of the Court of Appeals and the District Supreme Court will be called today to submit recommendations for legislation to guide future reorganizations.

New Pictures and Stage Bills Open Film Week With Three Known Aces on View

New Van Dine Story Leads on Screen at Fox

'Spices' Revue on Stage; Earle Has Ace Bill; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE CASINO MURDER CASE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by S. S. Van Dine, adapted to the screen by Frances Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf, featuring Paul Lukas, Alison Skipworth, Donald Cook, Ted Healy, Isabel Jewell, Leslie Fenton, Eric Blore, Charles Sellon, Arthur Byron, Rosalind Russell and Louise Fazenda. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Reviewed Friday night.

S. S. Van Dine may be said to be growing more and more cryptic in the fashioning of his mysterious fictions that provide so popular a source of cinematic melodrama.

Anyone who is able to discern the final outcome of "The Casino Murder Case"—without already having read the book, of course—is entitled to laudations running high into the superlatives.

This major screen feature at Loew's Fox this week is an enigma that bases its baffling developments upon the strange uses to which extraordinary poisons are put. Major characters in the yarn drop off with alarming frequency and suddenness for no apparent reason. Philo Vance, needless to say, has his hands and mind full most of the time; so do Sergt. Heath, Lynn Llewellyn, his sister, Doris, and all the rest who are so vitally concerned in this inexplicable—until the last minute or two of the final reel—epidemic of homicide, violent death and personal and family disaster.

A Little Too Baffling.

Last evening I gathered from scattered comments of those sitting around me that "The Casino Murder Case" perhaps carries the matter of befuddlement of the cash customer just a little too far. After all, one likes to have an occasional glimmering, at least, of what is going on and what it is all about.

But Mr Van Dine has always been one of the most mysterious of the mystery writers, and if complete confusion of the lay mind is the goal toward which he is striving, then "The Casino Murder Case" is the best thing he has done.

At any rate, it is particularly well executed—except for the important item of Sergt. Heath, one of the pivotal figures in all of the Philo Vance stories. It seems to me that Ted Healy is as poor a selection for this role, so long made notable by Eugene Pallette, as could possibly have been made.

Paul Lukas, on the other hand, strikes these ancient eyes and ears as being one of the happiest of all the choices for the role of Philo Vance. This is a part that has been played, in turn, and for various producing companies, by William Powell, Basil Rathbone and Warren William. With his suavity, unfailing surety in both line and action, poise and perfected technique, Mr. Lukas seems to me to be one of the best Vances of the lot.

How this strange tale comes out you will never learn from this department. It is no legitimate function of a casual review to destroy all future interest, suspense and climacteric excitement for expectant audiences by exploding the secrets of a mystery's plot.

Cast Excellently Chosen.

It will suffice to say that in addition to those already named, Alison Skipworth, Donald Cook, Purnell Pratt, Arthur Byron, Rosalind Russell, Louise Fazenda, Charles Sellon, Isabel Jewell and the numerous others recited in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks, give fine accounts of themselves. The production is one of M-G-M's better efforts in the way of scenic investiture.

The "Spices of 1935" stage revue, providing the sum total of the living entertainment at the Fox this week, is admirably named. "Spices" is right. Indeed, I do not recall any previous occasion upon which quite the degree of daring has been indulged in in a picture house as signalized the presentation of this miniature "Folies Bergere" gaucherie last night.

Nudity is not necessarily objectionable, but in temples of the celluloid drama dedicated to the entertainment of mixed and family audiences it is apt to be a trifle startling. Discreetly lighted, artistically staged and devoid of any salacious implications, "Spices of 1935" reveals the intimate contours of the undraped feminine figure beyond anything ever seen in a Washington picture house within the memory of one who has been here since they started.

Came the Dawn!

The particular stars of this frank and unembarrassed exposition of pulchritude are Count Berni Vici, a violinist of note, who presides over a female orchestra that approaches close to the superior excellence of Phil Spitalny's; Garner, Wolf and Hakins, three zanies well known to the Capital, since at least two-thirds of them were born here; Bob Carney, master of ceremonies, singer, dancer, raconteur and comedian of parts; Isabel Dawn, a gorgeous blonde, who will surprise the life out of any unwary spectator who has no thought in his mind that she is a second Evelyn Law; Lester Harding, barytone; De Conti and Romini, dancers who are unhampered by apparel, and stunning lot of "line girls."

The revue is the best staged and most artistic, in the tolerant view, of the season.

Prof. Phil Lampkin's overture and a new issue of the elaborated Fox Movietone News complete a bill that strikes a new note of sophistication in its assumption of what Metropolitan audiences enjoy.

And last night's enjoyed it, make no mistake about that!

Soon to Make American Debut

This attractive and slightly plaintive young woman is Wendy Barrie, popular British screen player, who will soon make her debut in the American cinema opposite Spencer Tracy in the Fox production of "It's a Small World." Miss Barrie is an actress whose reputation has preceded her to this country and one who loses nothing by the distinguished implications of her name—not the Wendy so much as the Barrie. Sir James Matthew Barrie is not an unknown quantity in the theater of fantasy, imagination and charm.

Earle

"CAR 99." Paramount picturization of a story by Karl Detzer, adapted to the screen by Mr. Detzer and C. Gardner Sullivan, featuring Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan, Sir Guy Standing and Frank Craven, with William Frawley, Dean Jagger, Eddie Dunn and Russell Hopton. Directed by Charles Barton under the productional supervision of Bayard Veiller. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

Decidedly good is the Earle bill this week, both stage and screen.

Gracie Barrie remains a second week, to sing your favorite torch-songs, and Eddie Peabody runs the gamut in melodies and instruments, and with a goodly sprinkling of tap-dancing and nonsense in the remaining two acts, the stage is well represented.

On the screen, "Car 99" proves a surprisingly exciting story which combines all the elements of your favorite crime "thriller" with the added virtues of deft handling, humorous viewpoint and unostentatiously smooth acting.

Young Ross Martin (Fred MacMurray) is part of the graduating class of the Michigan State Police. He's proud to have won his shield and he's proud to be a part of the efficient radio patrol which is so thoroughly trained and so cleverly operated that it has made the State practically crime-proof.

Useless Admonition.

"Keep away from women," is the final admonition of Training Sergeant Barrel (William Frawley) to his graduating class, but Ross Martin has no intention of keeping away from Mary Adams, telephone operator at Crow River. He is just getting up courage enough to ask Mary to marry him when trouble descends upon the State in the form of Prof. Anthony (Sir Guy Standing) and his well organized and reckless gang of bank robbers and gangsters, whose multifarious and daring activities break into both Ross Martin's romance and career.

There is nothing melodramatic in "Car 99"; neither are the boys who patrol the highways gifted with any supernatural ability or powers of deduction. They are just lads who like their job and, to use Ross Martin's words, "work all day and all night with every eighth night off—all for ninety bucks a month!"

They don't always get their man, and sometimes the efficient radio system fails; sometimes they are killed in the line of duty and sometimes they get a break—as Ross Martin did. It's exciting and human with an undercurrent of casual masculine humor which is vastly refreshing.

Sir Guy Is Outstanding.

Sir Guy Standing, as the erudite leader of a gang of crooks who murmurs disgustedly when he discovers that their $100,000 bank haul is all marked money: "No wonder people lose faith in banks!" turns in a performance of polished perfection. Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan, Frank Craven, William Frawley, Marina Schubert and Dean Jaggers, with a large and excellent cast, are all unassumingly and nicely fitted to their roles.

Lew Duthers, Jean and Joan open the stage bill with a bit of excellent tapping. They work hard, fast and rhythmically. Cass, Mack, Owen and Topsy do rough, tough and rowdyish tumbling with a minimum of effort and a maximum of applause. If you remember them from last year, you'll find their antics just as irrepressibly funny as ever.

Gracie Does Her Bit.

Gracie Barrie sings "You're a Builder-Upper," "The Words Are in My Heart," "Whose Honey Are You?" (dedicated to Freddie Clark—ooh, Freddie!), and as a gracious encore, the wistfully tuneful "Every Day I'll Fall in Love All Over Again With You."

Eddie Peabody, as temperamentally effervescent as ever, plays everything from "Speak to Me of Love," on the violin, to "Poet and Peasant Overture" on the banjo, interspersed with dashes of song, dance and an odd instrument or two.

Freddie Clark's overture (Bert Granoff is on his postgraduate course, girls!), the Universal Newsreel and a comedy entitled "Wig Wag," amusing only in its double entendre, complete the program.

RKO-Keith's

"STAR OF MIDNIGHT." RKO-Radio Pictures filmization of the Arthur Somers Roche novel, adapted by Howard J. Green, Anthony Veiller and Edward Kaufman, starring William Powell and Ginger Rogers, with Paul Kelly, Gene Lockhart, Ralph Morgan, Leslie Fenton, J. Farrell Macdonald and Russell Hopton. Directed by Stephen Roberts. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

This is far from being another "Thin Man," in spite of having William Powell, a mystery, and as many cocktails as its hilarious predecessor.

However, it has some good points of its own—those being the aforementioned William Powell, that pretty-as-a-picture and nice little comedienne, Ginger Rogers, Gene Lockhart (the Broadway Uncle Sid of "Ah Wilderness"), a number of laughs, at least one scene of suspense and excitement, and—we saved him till last for emphasis—Paul Kelly, who does the little he has to do as Kinland so simply and well it seems like considerable.

The trouble with "Star of Midnight" is that it is not only too involved for us to keep straight (that often happens), but it is unable to straighten even itself out plausibly.

Another Van Dine?

A lady in Chicago disappears. A lady in New York disappears. A reporter in New York is killed. A lot of people are suspected of a lot of things. Group A follows Group B around because Group B is following Group C, and so on.

Smooth playing, tasteful backgrounds, and that part of the dialogue which clicks (not all of it does) lift the picture considerably above the run-of-the-mine murder mystery. The scene in which you meet the lady with a face that doesn't move when she talks will haunt your dreams and the rest of it is designed for humor, not horror. You'll like it better if you're not one of those who expect deductors to be honest about clews.

The best of the subsidiaries is a novel sportsreel, "Topnotchers," with views of champions in various sports for those who like that, and the amusing dialogue of Easy Aces for those who like to laugh.

Other items on the program are the Pathe News and a return engagement of a Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck adventure; also a mystery, "The Dogknaper," which is still fun the second time.

Palace

"MISSISSIPPI." Paramount picturization of a story by Booth Tarkington, adapted to the screen by Herbert Fields and Claude Binyon, featuring Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields and Joan Bennett, with Queenie Smith, Gail Patrick, Claude Gillingwater and John Miljan. Music and lyrics by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Ol' Man River and the showboat form one of the most fascinating combinations in the modern cinema for quaint and entertaining drama replete with crinoline and music.

And when Bing Crosby is added to do the warbling, W. C. Fields to the comedy and Joan Bennett to the charming and unsophisticated love interest, there is something going in the way of entertainment.

That admixture of talents is "Mississippi," and the extent to which it achieves the heights may be judged by the fact that yesterday the picture opened its second week.

There may be some disappointment in the part presented Mr. Crosby. He seems to be out of place even masquerading as "Col. Steele, the Singing Killer." His acting is better than ever and his singing—well, his singing is quite unlike anyone else's. You will not be disappointed by his rendering of "Soon," "Down By the River," "It's Easy to Remember," and, especially, his extraordinary version of "Suwanee River."

A Fields' Field Day.

The real star of "Mississippi" is W. C. Fields, whose ready tongue and exceptional ability to make the truth extremely elastic keep the picture moving from one Fields spasm to another with whatever transpires in between just an interlude between laughs. He has never been funnier or more effective than as the "commodore" of the showboat.

Joan Bennett is delightful love interest for Mr. Crosby, who finally comes around to her after his engagement with Gail Patrick is smashed by Claude Gillingwater, an irascible Southern general. John Miljan and Queenie Smith have important supporting roles.

The cartoon, "Mickey's Service Station;" the Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Nerve Control;" the first of the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, "Buried Loot," and the Metrotone News round out the bill.

Metropolitan

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP." Paramount picturization of the story by Harry Leon Wilson, adapted to the screen by Walter DeLeon and Harlan Thompson, featuring Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles, ZaSu Pitts, Roland Young and Leila Hyams. Directed by Leo McCarey. Reviewed (second week, return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

It is fitting and proper that "Ruggles of Red Gap" should enter its third week along the main stem, for not this season has so completely satisfying a comedy-drama held forth on a local screen.

Not only has this well-known tale been adapted to the cinema with great human interest and truthfulness but the several parts have been assigned to actors of proved merit. Of Charles Laughton, Charlie Ruggles, ZaSu Pitts and all the rest one expects creditable performances, yet here even the most sanguine hopes are exceeded by actual performance.

Mr. Laughton, in the title role, is superb, giving a characterization of the transplanted English gentleman's gentleman which is topped by nothing in his notable career. Indeed, his reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address is alone worth a trip to the theater.

The supporting cast is uniformly excellent, and practically all of them rise to new heights in this picture.

The auxiliary subjects are "Life on the Farm," with Paramount's pet chimpanzee, and the combined releases of the Universal and Paramount News reels.

Columbia

"LIFE BEGINS AT 40." Fox picturization of the book by Walter B. Pitkin, adapted to the screen by Lamar Trotti, starring Will Rogers, with Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, George Barbier, Jane Darwell, "Slim" Summerville, Sterling Holloway, Charles Sellon, Thomas Beck and Roger Imhoff. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Whatever Walter B. Pitkin may have written under the title of "Life Begins at 40" is not, in reference to the picture which returned yesterday to Loew's Columbia Theater, of any great import, since that picture stars the inimitable Will Rogers. For that matter, little else counts but the fact that here is another Rogers opus with the same homely brand of entertainment as was advanced in "David Harum," "Judge Priest" and "The County Chairman."

Here Mr. Rogers is a country editor—in short, a sort of editorial Judge Priest, C. C. (meaning, county chairman!)—who in his own calm and ingratiating manner abets the course of true love, clears a tainted reputation, and crusades for kindliness and good friendship.

In this one, as in his former pictures, the Rogers role is the dominant one, with all the others rotating around it. Young love is depicted by Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell, with Jane Darwell acting as Rogers' main foil. The villainy of the piece is handled by George Barbier and Roger Imhoff. "Slim" Summerville has a choice part as the whittler, a role that is an excellent follow-up of the unforgettable Juror No. 12 in "Judge Priest," played by Francis Ford.

"Donkey Baseball," described by Pete Smith, keeps up the program's hilarity with a description of baseball played astride the long-eared quadrupeds. "Treasure Blue" presents Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly and Athur Housman in a reasonably amusing farce. A release of the Metrotone News rounds out the program.

District Supply Bill Conference Is Sped

Action on Motorist Bill Also Is Pushed.

Chairman Clarence Cannon, of the House District Appropriations subcommittee, said last night that he would submit the names of the House conferees on the District supply bill to the Speaker early next week, probably Monday. A meeting with the Senate conferees will follow shortly.

Asked what he thought of the $3,477,215 increase made in the bill by the Senate, Cannon said: "I don't know yet. The committee hasn't met yet to consider the amendments."

Cannon will lead the House conferees, which may include all five members of the sub-committee in view of the size of the Senate delegation. A meeting also will be held early next week between the Senate and House conferees on the motorists' financial responsibility bill, which was amended by the House.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Vincent Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, head of the House conferees, discussed the matter yesterday and decided to hold the conference on Monday or Tuesday.

Sonata Recital By Carol Dore Proves Delight

Art of Felicia Rybier at Piano as Accompanist Also Entertains.

Sonata recitals may sound formidable when talked about, but the program, consisting of three sonatas, presented by Felicia Rybier, pianist, and Carol Dore, violinist, last night in the Washington Club, was not that. It was entertaining, despite the studious approach of the artists.

Miss Dore, a Baltimore artist who was making her Washington debut, plays for absolute solidity. By doing so she achieves brilliance, even at the expense frequently of sonority. This characteristic was revealed in the Grieg G Major Sonata, which offered in its romantic style many melodies that might be sung more. But the violinist's precision gave more than adequate treatment to the classical Mozart Sonata, No. 17, in A major, and her decisiveness gave definite form to the climactic number on the program, the Cesar Franck Sonata in A major.

Miss Rybier, who is widely known in Washington as a concert pianist and teacher, furnished an excellent complement for Miss Dore's music. Their interpretations matched, as the pianist accounted for her score with no less firmness and confidence than did the violinist.

While both artists, in their zeal for faithfulness to score, were academic, their sonatas proved entertaining, because they were as careful about contrasts as they were about technical hurdles. They made the Franck work particularly colorful and interesting for this reason. Not satisfied by a mere reading of the difficult score, they removed the veil of vagueness which some artists apparently feel interprets Franck's mysticism.

Seventy-five persons heard the recital.

Utility Stocks Pegging Denied

Spikes Rumor Stabilization Fund Has Been Used to Fix Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday scotched rumors widely circulated in the Capital that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund has been used to peg utility security prices.

In a one-minute telephone conversation with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, the Treasury head flatly denied that the fund had been used for that purpose

"I just talked with the Secretary of the Treasury," Rayburn said as the committee reassembled for the afternoon hearing on the utility holding company bill "He said if he had done this it would have been a violation of the law—and of course he didn't do it."

Replies to Attack.

The question came up at the morning session when Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, asked Solicitor Dozier Devane of the Federal Power Commission if there was any truth to the rumor about the use of the stabilization fund. Devane said he knew nothing of it, and Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, suggested it would be a violation of the law.

Rayburn shortly thereafter reached the Treasury chief by telephone. His report of the denial was received without comment by the committee.

At the request of Rayburn, Devane presented counter arguments to charges of utilities spokesmen that their stocks had been depressed because of the Roosevelt utility policy and the bill to abolish holding companies in 1940. He unfolded detailed charts designed to show that the utilities securities toboggan was in February, 1933, before President Roosevelt took office.

Rayburn's Statement.

Replying painstakingly to point after point made against the bill, Devane testified the securities of the 25 principal utility holding companies had a total market value of $19,245,157,757 at the 1929 high sale point, only $2,879,034,949 bid price on February 28, 1933, but a $2,285,015,979 closing price April 9, this year. At the same time, ten principal independent operating companies' securities dropped from $3,880,067,352 in 1929 to $1,298,846,243 on the 1933 date and to $1,275,807,806 this week, he said.

Rayburn, in his second formal statement since the hearings opened, emphasized there was shown a shrinkage of more than $16,000,000,000, or 85 per cent in the value of the 25 companies' securities "before Franklin D. Roosevelt became President."

Oil Negotiation Broken in Orient

Basis for Continuation in Japan Isn't Found.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 13 (Saturday).—Negotiations between the Japanese government and American and British oil companies seeking a basis for foreign companies to continue business in Japan proper broke down today without an agreement.

Manchukuo has already begun enforcement of an oil monopoly which will completely eliminate American and British firms as distributors and retailers. A Tokyo newspaper said the Japanese government considers the step an experiment and its results will be watched with a view to extending the system to the empire.

Snake Who Liked His Whisky Wins Prize for Walton Liar

Frog Given Up for Drink, Serpent Offered Two More, Says Angler.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—Have you heard the one about the angler, the bullfrog and the rattlesnake.

Chester McCarty, of Portland, Ore., told it today to best a score of piscatorial prevaricators and win first prize in the liars division of the Izaak Walton League.

McCarty was fishing in the Deschutes River. Luck was bad. He tried many baits without success. Off in the brush, he sighted a fat bullfrog. That, he decided, was the answer to an angler's prayer. He bent to grasp the frog. Quickly he jerked his hand away. The frog was in the rattlesnake's jaws!

So McCarty whipped out his trusty whisky bottle. He poured a slug into the reptile's mouth. The delighted serpent dropped the frog. McCarty picked it up, went back to the stream, placed it on his hook and fished away. Five minutes later there was a gentle tapping at his boot. He glanced down. The rattlesnake—he insisted—had brought him two more frogs.

The tall tale earned McCarty a shellacked minnow.

Dr. George M. Oppermann, Buffalo, N. Y., got a can of sardines for second place. He claimed he and a companion were casting from a flat rock. A bellicose pickerel bit—but, with a terrific lurch, pulled hook, line, sinker and bobber from the fisherman's hands. It was t-h-a-t long, but it got away. The doctor and his friend, disconsolate, walked off. An hour later they returned to the rock. And there—you can believe it or not—was the hook, line, sinker and bobber. The pickerel had brought them back.

Robert Engels, Gary, Ind., placed third. He took a setter on a fishing expedition. The dog cornered a 3-pound trout in a rocky nook. Engels took the fish home to his bathtub. Every mealtime thereafter the trout leaped out of the tub, wriggled across the floor and ate from its master's hand.

It got so that wherever Engels went the trout—like Mary's little lamb—would follow him. Finally the inevitable occurred. Engels went down to the lake with the trout slithering along at his heels. But the fish ventured too close, fell into the water and drowned.

The judges wiped their tear-stained cheeks and handed Engels a check for $5,000.

It was drawn on the Useless National Bank.

Prayer Called Only Power to Hold Off War

Federal Church Group Appeals to World for Peace Action.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 12.—An appeal to the Christian people of all nations to join in a "world concert of prayer" was issued today by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, with the collaboration of the three leading international agencies of Protestantism.

Describing the present as an "ominous hour when the specter of war again haunts the world," the call urges the churches, beginning on Palm Sunday, to pray for peace in every service of public worship, and to continue this practice "as long as the threat of war remains." Recalling the suffering of Christ commemorated in Holy Week, the messages declares that "the world for which He died seems ready to crucify Him afresh," and expresses the judgment that only the spiritual power which can be released by a united and world-wide fellowship of prayer "is adequate to stay the currents of selfish nationalism and bring peace to a disordered world."

The appeal is signed by the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, chairman of the American section of the Universal Christian Council; the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill, president of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, and Dr. John R. Mott, chairman of the International Missionary Council.

In a statement interpreting the significance of the step that has been taken, Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches, said:

"The appeal is being made not only to the churches of this country but also to all the Protestant bodies of Europe and of Asia. Because of their membership in the Universal Christian Council, the Eastern Orthodox churches are also comprehended in the invitation. Virtually all the non-Roman churches of the world will be included and since his holiness, the pope, has independently summoned Roman Catholics to prayer, the movement of prayer for peace is expected to embrace Christendom as a whole."

Among the religious bodies to which the appeal has been sent are the Evangelical Free Church Council of Great Britain, the Church of England, the French Protestant Federation, the German Evangelical Church, the Confessional Synod in Germany (made up of the protesting pastors), the Synod of the Waldensian Churches of Italy, the National Christian Council of Japan, and the National Christian Council of China.

According to the announcement made by the office of the Federal Council of Churches, the "world concert of prayer" may continue for several months and if so a series of concrete suggestions for prayer and intercession will be issued at the beginning of each month.

PWA Is Illegal, Three Accused Of Fraud Aver

Defendants in Irrigation Project Deal Argue Rights in Court.

Three men, indicted in connection with an alleged conspiracy to mulct the Government out of $400,000 in connection with a Willacy County, Tex., PWA irrigation project, yesterday launched an attack on the indictment in the District Supreme Court. After lengthy arguments Justice Jesse C. Adkins said he would take the case under advisement and make known his decision in a few days.

The three, Harry W. Cole, Leonard C. Hammond and James P. Barry, contended the linking of their names with four others in the alleged conspiracy was not legally correct.

Through their attorney, George P. Hoover, they alleged the entire structure of the NRA and the PWA was unconstitutional and void and for those reasons no indictment based on the legality of the two agencies could be sustained.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly countered with the assertion that the two bureaus were emergency ones, and were set up to combat the depression. He stressed the fact that if the seven men had been permitted to proceed with a revamping of the Willacy County plans and specifications, the cost to the Government would have mounted $400,000.

William A. Harding, Frank P. McElwrath, Perry A. Welty and Charles R. Oldberg were the others named in the indictment. Olberg recently lost an attempt to have the indictment, as to him, held invalid when Justice James M. Proctor held that the jury that returned the presentment had been lawfully constituted.

Attempt to 'Fix' Bowie Race Seen in Poisoning of Two Horses

Burke to Get Final Test On Mound

Southpaw Faces Albany Today in Last Effort Before Race Starts.

Poor Condition of Field Causes Harris to Bench Manush.

THE Nats kept their one-game winning streak intact yesterday with the help of the rain that washed out the schedule game with the Phillies. Today, they compete in cheaper company, meeting their Albany farmhands at Griffith Stadium in their last local appearance before launching the pennant campaign on Tuesday.

Encouraged by an even break in the two games with the Dodgers here, Manager Bucky Harris ordered his men out to the park yesterday for a workout under the stands, which afforded the only dry area in the stadium. Despite the cramped quarters, the athletes were able to unlimber their muscles and retain the physical edge they have acquired.

Manager Harris will keep Heinie Manush on the bench again today for the third consecutive game. Harris is unwilling to risk injury to Manush in the treacherous footing in left field at Griffith Stadium where recent rains have made a quagmire of the turf.

Backward in Hitting.

Manuch, who has been among the most backward of the Nats' htiters during the spring campaign, has appeared at bat only once against enemy pitching in the past week, but Harris nevertheless is taking no chances that his best slugger might aggravate a leg injury which troubled him last year.

On Sunday, when the Nats play at Newark, Manush will accompany the team and take his reular place in the batting order if the Newark outfield is dry.

Bob Burke will take the mound today against the Albany club if the weather man makes good on his promise to abate the rain before 3:00 p. m. The game will be Burke's final test to determine his fitness for a starting role in the Nats' opening series against the Athletics.

Hack Wilson With Albany.

With the Albany club will be four former Nats—Pitchers Ray Prim and Ed Chapman, Second Baseman Bobby Reeves, and First Baseman Pete Susko. The main threat of Albany, however, will be Hack Wilson, former home-run king of the National League, who is now trying to make good in the International.

Manager Bucky Harris yesterday revised his plans for the opening series with the Athletics starting Tuesday. Originally he had planned to start Earl Whitehill in the opener and follow with Burke, also a southpaw, but at the present writing he hopes to give the A's a change of pitching diet by working a right-hander in the second game.

Irving Hadley is Harris' tentative choice to follow Whitehill, but in the event that Hadley is not deemed fit when he rejoins his teammates tomorrow, Monte Weaver or Ed Linke will get the assignment.

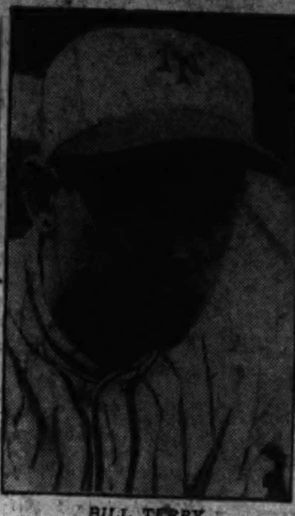
Reese of Georgia Tech Upsets Hall at Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., April 12 (AP).—Billy Reese, captain of the Georgia Tech tennis team, sprang the first upset of the Atlanta invitation tennis tournament today by defeating Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., nationally ranking No. 16, 6-3, 6-3, in a quarter-finals match.

Tomorrow he will face Wilmer Allison, ranking No. 1 and top seeded player of the tournament here. Allison today turned back Malon Courts, of Atlanta, 6-2, 7-5.

Berkeley Bell, of New York, dropped Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 6-4, 6-4. Bryan Grant, Atlanta star, defeated Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Chattanooga.

1936 His Last?



BILL TERRY.

Bill Terry Hints He Will Quit After 1936

'Getting Too Old,' Avers Manager of Giants; Legs Weakening.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.—Memphis Bill Terry, who has been playing baseball for more than half of his 37 years, professes to feel the first pangs of old age and hinted rather broadly today that his active playing days may end with the 1936 season.

Complaining about the weather, which caused cancellation of a game the Giants were supposed to play here with the Cleveland Indians and which has cost his Giants more than $8,000 in exhibition game receipts, Terry said today he is "getting too old for the game."

He expects to go through 150 games this season, however, he said, and "then go through next season. After that, well——."

In Game 20 Years.

He's been hitting at a lively enough clip, the Giants' manager said, but 20 years of baseball playing have taken a lot out of his legs.

Both Terry and Walter Johnson, manager of the Cleveland tean, that the experts have picked to oppose the Giants in the Worlds Series, were well enough satisfied with their ball clubs. Terry said if the club comes along as he thinks it should "we'll be so far out in front at the end of the season that there won't be any race to it."

He prefaced this observation, however, with the less optimistic assertion that "we may not win the pennant but we're going to give somebody a battle."

"Dick Bartell has been the making of our team," he said. "He is just what we have needed. George Davis and Hank Leiber, a couple of powerful hitters, will help us no end in the outfield. Hughie Critz and Travis Jackson are looking great and Gus Mancuso, our veteran catcher, who was ill last year, has recovered and is in fine condition. Our pitchers are not worrying us, either."

Johnson Optimistic.

Johnson said that despite the psychological effect of being "put on the spot" by the experts who picked his Indians to win the pennant he was optimistic about his team's chances of doing just that. "We have a winning ball club this year and as soon as Billy Knickerbocker joins us we'll be set."

Knickerbocker, an outstanding shortstop, is recuperating in a New Orleans hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis, but is expected to join the club in about a month. Pending his return to the line-up, the Indians will use Roy Hughes, a rookie from New Orleans.

Little Men Like Bitsy Grant Help Teams Lure the Crowds

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The U. S. Lawn Tennis Association has finally come up with a brilliant notion resulting in placing a tennis player by the name of Bitsy Grant on the American Davis Cup Team. Grant will play against Mexico, China and South America. It is quite possible that he will then be left off the team that will play in the European finals, in which case these congratulations will be withdrawn with great rapidity.

The U. S. L. T. A. works in a most mysterious way, its wonders to perform. Bitsy Grant belongs on any man's tennis team, not only because he is a great tennis player but also because he is so small, spry, active and indefatigable that he goes into practically every match with at least 15 points a game in his favor, particularly if there is a large gallery present.

Grant is so small that he embarrasses his opponents near to death in the course of a match. Before it has gone very far, all the ladies in the stands are clucking their tongues in sympathy for the poor little fellow who is being made to run all over the court by some big bully. There are audible sighs when Bitsy misses a shot or is outmaneuvered and more or less of a stony silence when his opponent aces him. Pretty soon the opponent begins to blush and it is all up with him.

Bryant M. Grant, jr., comes from Atlanta, Ga., a city which has sent out some great players of games into the world. He stands a fraction over 5 feet, in his tennis shoes, and at one time or another he has beaten every tennis giant against whom he has played. He has beaten Ellsworth Vines (and that in the national championships at Forest Hills, two years ago), Lester Stofen and Frank Shields, every one of them over 6 feet tall.

After he beat Vines in the national championship, he lost to Lester Stoefen. I saw both matches. Stoefen, 6-feet-4, was a very unhappy man while on the courts with Bitsy. I thought his victory over the little man was a great feat, because Grant and the gallery had the tall, loping man simply fussed to death for a while.

If I had any kind of a team I would always want some kind of a little man on it, because the little men get all the sympathy in this world, and sympathy is worth a stroke a hole anywhere. The toughest thing to combat is that top-dog feeling. Everyone roots for the little man, cheers his success and deplores that of his opponent. The very saying, "A good big man will beat a good little man," is a handicap for the big man to overcome. he ought to win.

And if the little man ever gets him on the run, every effort he makes to win makes him look

Baer to Meet Braddock In June

Bout Probably Will Be Held in Garden Bowl, Johnston Says.

Announcement Climax to Series of Plans, Counter-Plans.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden's boxing promoter, announced tonight he had definitely selected Jimmy Braddock, Jersey City veteran, to meet Max Baer in a heavyweight championship bout here in June.

Baer already is under contract to the Garden for a title defense and Braddock has agreed to the terms, Johnston announced. He will seek formal approval for the match at the New York State Athletic Commission's next meeting, on Tuesday.

This will be a formality, for the commission already has designated Braddock as the No. 1 heavyweight challenger so far as this State is concerned.

Date Is Undecided.

Johnston said he had not yet definitely decided upon the date, but it probably will be the middle of June in the Garden's Long Island Bowl.

Braddock's elevation to the rank of a fullfledged, bonafied challenger climaxes a series of incidents, all of them operating to the Jerseyman's advantage.

Disgusted with his own performancees in the ring, Braddock retired about two years ago and planned to hang up his gloves forever. But when John Henry Lewis, Phoenix, Ariz., Negro light heavyweight invaded the East, the Garden summoned Braddock to give him his first test. A terrific right-hand puncher, Braddock nailed the Negro in an early round, floored him, and then went on to win an easy decision.

Carnera Withdrew.

That upset won him a place in the Garden's heavyweight elimination tournament, in which Primo Carnera, Art Lasky and Ray Impellittiere also were entered. Carnera defeated Impellittiere but then withdrew from the tournament in a huff when it became known that the Garden hoped to toss Schmeling against Baer in a title fight here in June. Braddock gave Lacky a bad beating in 15 rounds and automatically was declared winner of the tournament.

That led the State Athletic Commission to name him No. 1 challenger. The Solons backed up that nomination by declaring it would not approve a Schmeling-Baer fight until Schmeling first had met Braddock.

Idea Abandoned.

The Garden, for a time, considered the possibility of taking the Baer-Schmeling bout to some other State but that project had to be abandoned when Schmeling evinced no desire whatever of fighting in this country again.

That left Braddock as the sole remaining available opponent for Baer.

When he steps into the ring with Baer, it will mark Braddock's second bid for a championship. He qualified to meet Tommy Loughran, then king of the light-heavyweights, for the 175-pound diadem in 1929 and took a beating and a boxing lesson for his pains.

Favorites in Finals at Pinehurst

Charlotte Glutting Meets Estelle Lawson for North-South Title.

By the United Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 12.—Charlotte Glutting, East Orange, N. J., and Estelle Lawson, Chapel Hill, N. C., who rated first and second places, respectively, in qualifying competition Tuesday, won the right today to battle for the 1935 women's North-South golf championship.

Miss Glutting triumphed, 3 and 1, in semifinals today over Helen Waring, Pinehurst, who kept coming back doggedly to even the match four times. They were within one hole of each other throughout, until the seventeenth.

An even tighter match was seen between Miss Lawson and Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass. Each made the first nine holes in 40 strokes, and they fought neck and neck through the home stretch until Miss Lawson gained a 2-up advantage on the seventeenth. Stymied on the thirteenth and fifteenth, Miss Verry knocked in her opponent's ball both times.

Lous Is Victor By 3-Round Knockout

17,000 Watch Negro Stop Lazer With Terrific Assault on Chin.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Joe Louis, Detroit's candidate for a shot at Max Baer's world heavyweight championship, devoted less than three rounds to scoring a technical knockout over Roy Lazer, of Paterson, N. J., tonight in the Chicago Stadium.

Louis, after crashing a left hook to the chin that knocked Lazer flat for the count of nine in the third round, smothered him with right and left smashes to the chin that bounced Lazer on the floor again for the nine count. When Lazer staggered to his feet, Louis cooly measured him with a couple of lefts to the head and knocked him flat with a terrific right to the chin to register his fourteenth knockout in 18 professional battles.

Baer Sees Bout.

The result was no surprise to 17,626 spectators who paid $42,187.80 to witness the fight.

After coasting in the first round, Louis battered the features of Lazer to a bloody smear in the second, employing short lefts and rights to score as he pleased. He was unable to maneuver Lazer into position for a knockout wallop, however, until the third round.

With Max Baer himself watching from the ringside, Louis finally caught up with Lazer in the third.

Louis weighed 196½ to 192 for Lazer.

Buddy Baer, kid brother of the world heavyweight champion, knocked out Corn Griffin, rugged Columbus, Ga., veteran, in the second round of a four-rounder on preliminary card.

Bradley Appeals In 20-Year Suit

Seeks $75,000 for Loss of His Four Horses.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 12.—Twenty years after high winds blew an express car from railroad tracks here, killing four of his horses, Col. E. R. Bradley, Lexington, Ky., owner and breeder, still is seeking $75,000 damages.

He appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday from action of a lower court at Nashville in dismissing his suit against the Adams Express Co.

The accident occurred on July 7, 1915. Bradley filed suit in 1917. The action was dismissed in 1932. W. C. Devereaux, United States meteorologist here, testified in the trial that 38 persons lost their lives in the storm that caused $500,000 damage in downtown Cincinnati.

Crookedness Rules the Races For One Day of Fun and Fancy

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, April 12.—For entering a kangaroo in the city-sponsored "crookedest horse race" to be run here tomorrow, Harry M Westfall, president of the Seattle park board, was denounced today by Mayor Charles Smith and the board of stewards for "crooked tactics."

"It is not so much that I resent your entering a kangaroo," the mayor wrote Westfall, "but we understand you named him Horsefeathers with the idea of deceiving the judge, Basil Gray, who was appointed by yourself. I happen to know Mr Gray is blind. This was scarcely ethical."

The "ringbone derby" of the park board has 40 horses entered, all more than 12 years old. It will be run at Woodland Park tomorrow. The first horse across the line loses, but the third nag to stagger in wins a keg of beer.

"There is no excuse for this derby," President Westfall said, "but the park board is doing its duty in seeking to entertain the citizenry. The only publicity anyone will get out of it will be unfavorable.

"The city council's entry, 'Deficit,' is a good animal, but I understand they are training him on pork chops and swiss cheese, so Deficit is likely to be wiped out."

Handicapping the horses is a fearful problem, the stewards said, but some jockeys will carry opened umbrellas, wear rubber boots, knapsacks and the like.

The King County Humane Society today blocked the idea of using a cannon to start the race, so an old-time school bell was found. The weather was fine today for the final workouts, but the track and horses were terrible.

Jim Flynn Dies at 55; Once K. O.'d Dempsey

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—The game heart of Fireman Jim Flynn that carried him through more than 100 bruising ring battles, including a knockout victory over Jack Dempsey, stopped beating today.

The 55-year-old fireman, fighter and in recent years bartender, christened Andrew Chiariglione at Hoboken, N. J., December 24, 1879, breathed his last at the City Receiving Hospital.

A heart attack struck him down last night, but true to the tradition he helped mold in the ring from 1901 to 1923, he refused to quit. An hour before he died Fireman Jim smiled weakly and gasped:

"I'm groggy, but I'm not out. You won't have to throw in the towel."

Fought Ring's Great.

But Flynn was mistaken, as he was all too often in the declining years of a career that took him into the fistic marts against Jack Johnson, Tommy Burns, Billy Papke, Sam Langford, Gunboat Smith, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Luther McCarty and many others.

Flynn already was on the way down when he met Jack Dempsey at Salt Lake City in 1917. Two years later Jack was to become world's champion and one of the greatest. Flynn always said he was lucky in stopping the Manassa Mauler in the first round.

"Well, it was this way," he used to say. "I hit him with one, two. The right nailed his chin. But just put it down that I didn't exactly knock Dempsey out. He just forgot to duck."

Jim was a railroad fireman, living in Pueblo, Colo., when he first started fighting around 1900. The ring records disagree on the time, place and some of the results of his bouts and Flynn couldn't exactly remember himself, as he flipped the foam off mugs of beer here and talked of his encounters.

He had his first chance at the world's heavyweight title in 1906 at Naud Junction, at that time an outlying district of Los Angeles, when he met Tommy Burns. Burns scored a technical knockout in the fifteenth round after a savage battle.

Stopped by Johnson.

Six years later he tried it again, meeting Jack Johnson on July 4, 1912, in Las Vegas, N. Mex. The bout was stopped after nine rounds and Johnson was awarded a technical knockout.

Twice he battled Billy Papke, the former middleweight champion of the world, and both encounters were ten-round no-decision affairs. These took place in Los Angeles in 1909. A year later he met Sam Langford here. The first bout was a no-decision affair, but the Negro knocked him out in ten rounds later that season.

Gunboat Smith stopped Flynn in five rounds in New York, August 8, 1913, but when they met two years later in Cincinnati, the bout went ten rounds without a decision.

Didn't Take Dive, Dempsey Asserts

By the United Press.

New York, April 12.—Jack Dempsey straightened out the records tonight for Fireman Jim Flynn, who died today at Los Angeles and takes to his grave the only knockout ever scored against the old man mauler.

"I've been quoted in the past as saying that I took a dive against the Fireman back in 1917," Dempsey said. "But I didn't take a dive and I never have said that I did. It was a clean knockout.

"The Fireman was game, tough and experienced. He clipped me in the first round with the first punch he tossed, as I recall it. And they lugged me away from there feet foremost.

"I squared it a year later, in 1918, in equally short time. I started that year by belting Homer Smith out in one round, then got the Fireman in one, and also about a dozen other guys—and went on to the title the next year."

Dixie Howell Will Escape Operation

Still in Serious Condition; Special Nurses Kept at Bedside.

By the Associated Press.

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 12.—Dixie Howell, injured rookie with the Detroit Tigers' baseball team and former football star at the University of Alabama, will not have to undergo an operation of his face, his physician announced tonight.

The athlete was still considered to be in a serious condition, but sufficient improvement was shown today to dispel fears that he would have to submit to surgery. Dr. John W. Devine, the physician, said he was well pleased with Howell's response to treatment. Nevertheless, Dr. Devine said Howell was still too ill to have visitors and that he is not yet out of danger of complications. Special nurses were kept on duty at his hospital bed.

The All-America football player was felled by a sizzling drive off the bat of Johnny Mize, Cincinnati Reds' first baseman, during batting practice here yesterday.

Hadley Tests Arm; Is Fit, He Asserts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 12.—Irving (Bump) Hadley pitched five innings for the Chattanooga Lookouts against the Minneapolis Millers today and expressed satisfaction with his arm, despite the score of 5 to 1 against him when he left the game.

Hadley, who has been conditioning himself here preparatory to rejoining the Washington Club, was not handicapped by the soreness in his pitching arm which marked his Biloxi stay.

On a day that was the coldest of a long siege of cold afternoons, Hadley allowed only one run, a homer by Johnny Gill, in the first four innings. In the fifth he ran into a storm of base hits, including two singles, a triple and a homer. Chattanooga lost the game, 9-7.

Lunn Reaches Mason-Dixon Golf Finals

Wins, 1 Up, When Allen's Putt Fails; Topping Also Survives.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 12.—Dick Lunn, former District champion from Washington, today waded into the finals of the annual Mason and Dixon golf championship on the Old White course here by pouring a 15-foot putt into the fifteenth cup in the midst of a heavy downpour.

The putt gave Lunn a birdie deuce and squared his semi-final match with Frank Allen, last year's Georgetown prep captain, who eventually lost, 1 up, by three-putting the eighteenth green.

Lunn meets Dan Topping, defending champion, and medalist from

Plot Is Hinted And Probe Ordered

Sudden Illness of Hows Chances, Canterboy Arouse Suspicions.

Both Are Late Scratches; Boston Brook Wins; Odds Fluctuate.

By Walter Haight.

AN ATTEMPT of a gang to "fix" the fifth race at Bowie yesterday is believed to have caused the poisoning of two valuable horses and will result in an investigation by racing stewards. Hows Chances, the property of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, and Canterboy, owned by J. E. Smallman, were found writhing in pain in their stalls yesterday morning. These horses, leading contenders in the graded handicap, class "C," the day's feature race, were reported to have been in normal condition when bedded the night before.

Dr. William P. Collins, Washington veterinarian, who remained at Bowie last night in an effort to save the life of Hows Chances, said there was little doubt in his mind that the horses had been given injections of the same poison. The symptoms were identical, he said.

Stewards Assure Probe.

While Bowie stewards said there was no definite proof the horses had been tampered with, they asserted they would investigate the possibility.

Trainer George Alexandra, in charge of Canterboy, said yesterday: "Canterboy was in fine shape last night. He was frolicking about his stall and gave every indication that he would run well. This morning he was a very sick horse."

Neither horse was eliminated from the race at the usual morning "scratch" hour and their names were printed in position on the official program. The majority of those present did not know that Hows Chances and Canterboy would not run until the scratch sign was placed beside their numbers on the approximate odds board.

Odds Fluctuate.

The betting on the race was the cause of much comment among the "regulars." Sang Froid, which most price-makers installed as the favorite before Hows Chances and Canterboy were scratched, showed at 3-5 on the morning line before the wagering began. A concerted play began on Boston Brook and Sang Froid's quotation rose to 9-5. However, Sang Froid's odds dropped to 7-5 with the horses on the track and to 6-5 on the final "run-down." He was quoted at 1.30 to 1 on the official "equivalents" on the charts.

There has been talk of "fixers" among the horsemen for the past few days. One trainer, who saddled a winner last Wednesday, on being informed that the man to whom he had talked at the stable in the morning was a racketeer, did not leave his barn until the horse was led to the paddock for the race. It was rumored at the track today that a losing favorite on Thursday had been tampered with.

The fifth race was won by Boston Brook in a thrilling nose finish with Sang Froid, the favorite. Only four horses went to the post after the scratching of Hows Chances, Canterboy and High Torque. The last-named was a normal scratch, Trainer P. M. Walker reported.

The finish was one of the closest ever witnessed in Maryland and backers of Sang Froid booed for more than five minutes. Boston Brook had the lead from the start and tired in the stretch. Many believed Sang Froid's closing rush had earned the verdict.

The other starters in the race were Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's derby candidate, Wayward Son, and Robert Stone's Chief Mourner. Neither figured seriously in the running.

The highest price of the short history of the Maryland daily double was recorded when $361.30 was paid to each holder of the combination ticket. The winning "double horses" were Pekin, in the first race, and Miss Firefly in the third race. Both were outsiders in the individual betting, Pekin paying $30.20 and Miss Firefly, $11.60.

Evening Chimes Beaten.

The opener, a 6-furlong sprint for cheap horses, saw the defeat of Evening Chimes, George Watson in the saddle, managed to lose to Pekin, a $30.20 proposition, by a nose margin. Arctic Lad, the early pace setter, was third. Evening Chimes broke in the first flight and Watson appeared to pull the horse back to last place. In the stretch Evening Chimes came up with a rush, but too late to dislodge Pekin, the property of Mrs. Dan Christmas, of Upper Marlboro. Of course, Watson may have met with a minor accident.

Jockey Earl Porter and Advocate Junior were beaten in the second race. Lucky Turn was the hottest kind of a paddock tip and Lucky Turn was the winner. Porter ran the legs off Advocate Junior and at the far turn had a lead of some 15 lengths. He was riding faster than the horse was running. In the stretch, the colt was staggering from the grind and fell easy prey to Lucky Turn's closing rush. The winning mutuel was $5.60.

Watson made no mistakes in the third race. He rated Miss Firefly along, while Clear Knight and Romola ran each other into the ground and then drew out to withstand the closing bids of Dona Dulcin and Pretty Wise. Miss Firefly, conditioned at this track, paid a $11.60 mutuel. Pretty Wise was the failing favorite.

Dancing Doll made a show of her field in the fourth race, merely waiting for Zay to quit before taking command and coasting to the wire. Basquine moved up to be third in the field of five. Pollard rode the winner, which proved something of a relief to the favorite players despite a $3.60 mutuel.

Ahmed and Coucci proved the winning combination in the sixth, a gallop of a mile and a furlong. Inferno Lad, favorite over the winner, lost the purse by three parts of a length while saving second money from Flaxen by four lengths. Apprentice Lindberg tried to ease back with Inferno Lad in the first quarter mile, then shot his mount into several lengths' lead, running Standout into submission. However, the 7-year-old gelding did not have enough left to cope with the well-timed move of Coucci astride Ahmed, which returned $7.80.

Infilee came from last position to win the seventh race by five lengths from Tristrap. Hidden Lore was third in the field of eight. The winner paid $9.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEKIN, $30.20, $17.10, $6.20; EVENING CHIMES, $3.30, $2.60; ARCTIC LAND, $7.30.

PEKIN bettered his position steadily after the opening furlong, wore the leaders down when reaching the home stretch, then continued strongly under stout handling and just lasted long enough. EVENING CHIMES, permitted to drop out of contention after breaking forwardly, circled her field and closed full of run after losing considerable ground. ARCTIC LAND showed good speed in the footing to race VERITAS into submission, saved ground, and held on well when put to a drive. BEAU GOVANS finished stoutly under weak handling. EDYTH M. could not stay after going a half-mile. FLOWER TIME weakened badly after making a bold effort midway of the turn. VERITAS stopped.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08½. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCKY TURN, $5.60, $3.10, $2.50; ADVOCATE JUNIOR, $3.00, $2.30; VOLGADALE, $2.70.

LUCKY TURN, badly outpaced for the first six furlongs, worked her way into contention when reaching the final elbow, closed courageously after being straightened into the home stretch, and was up in the last 15 yards. ADVOCATE, JR. sprinted into a commanding lead while under steadying restraint, was kept in the better footing, but stopped suddenly during the closing furlong. VOLGADALE went into a contending position in the first flight when leaving the back stretch, and came courageously for the final drive after being inclined to bear to the inside during the final drive. HARD CHASE passed tiring horses. EMPLOYMENT had no mishaps. STREET GUIDE was done early.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:40. Winner, W. C. Winfrey's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FIREFLY, $11.60, $5.50, $4.30; DONA DULCIN, $9.70, $3.90; PRETTY WISE, $2.90.

MISS FIREFLY, suited by the footing and, going forwardly in the early racing, responded willingly when reaching the home stretch, wore CLEAR KNIGHT down and held DONA DULCIN safe. Latter moved up resolutely to engage the pace-makers when entering the home stretch, but could not stay with the winner when the real issue came. PRETTY WISE was under stout pressure throughout and had no excuses. FOREIGN LADY broke slowly and could never reach a contending position. O'NEILL went evenly. CLEAR KNIGHT and ROMOLA raced themselves into submission setting the early pace and they both stopped badly.

THE DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races) PAID—$361.30.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. The Laurel. Purse, $800; allowances. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:14½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING DOLL, $3.60, $2.60, $2.10; OUR MAE, $3.40, $2.50; BASQUINE, $3.10.

DANCING DOLL, showing good ability in the footing, raced ZAY into submission to gain command midway of the turn, shook off a stout effort from OUR MAE and came out smartly during the closing furlong to win with much in reserve. OUR MAE moved up fast rounding the turn, but could not threaten after reaching the home stretch. BASQUINE saved ground for the entire journey, but could not reach the two leaders in the closing issue. ZAY displayed high speed in the footing for a half-mile, then stopped. DALMATIA was held perfectly safe.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Graded Handicap, class "C." Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:45½. Winner, H. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOSTON BROOK, $6.40, $3.20; SANG FROID, $2.90; CHIEF MOURNER. (No show mutuels sold).

BOSTON BROOK, showing partiality to the footing, went into command at once, raced in his best form under strong handling, saved ground to open up a winning lead when reaching the home stretch, but weakened fast nearing the finish and barely lasted long enough. SANG FROID, kept under pressure to force the pace in the early racing, lost ground entering the home stretch, but closed resolutely under punishment, and was going much the fastest at the end. CHIEF MOURNER went stoutly for five furlongs and held on well. WAYWARD SON was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:14. Off at 5:14½. Winner, P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AHMED, $7.80, $4.30, $3.00; INFERNO LAD, $3.70, $2.60; FLAXEN, $2.80.

AHMED, placed under pressure after reaching the back stretch, challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch, responded to punishment, and came willingly to wear INFERNO LAD down during the closing sixteenth. INFERNO LAD, full of run, and hard held while setting the pace, shook off STANDOUT, then held on gamely when put to a hard drive in the closing stages. FLAXEN saved a lot of ground in the last half-mile, but could not make up any ground on the leaders during the closing drive. OLAMAY was never able to threaten. STANDOUT faltered badly when placed to a drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:47. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFILEE, $9.60, $4.20, $3.10; TRISTRAP, $3.00, $2.80; HIDDEN LORE, $5.20.

INFILEE, slow to settle in her stride and badly outrun for the first six furlongs, moved up strongly when approaching the home stretch, swung to the outside of the leaders, wore HIDDEN LORE down and drew away rapidly. TRISTRAP, rated back of TWIDGETS in the early racing, went up on the inside at the final turn, struck deep footing, then weakened all during the final drive. HIDDEN LORE went to the outside leaders entering the home stretch to gain a slight lead, but faltered in the closing drive. POST BRIGADE was unable to engage the leaders. McDONALD H. was held safe. TWIDGETS stopped in the last three furlongs.

Brooklyn Club Overlooked Malone

Dodgers Stopped Pitcher's Sale to Yanks, Then Suffered Lapse.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The facts in the alleged mysterious waiving of Pitcher Pat Malone out of the National League have been explained by a club official of the old circuit who declined to permit use of his name inasmuch as the waiver procedure is always of an exceedingly private nature.

According to this man, the Cubs first asked for waivers on Malone September 10, 1934. The Reds, Braves and Dodgers held him up at that time. Then followed his trade to the Cardinals. On October 29 the Cardinals asked for waivers on the pitcher, with Brooklyn alone claiming him. The proffer then was withdrawn. However, on December 17 the St. Louis club again asked for waivers and this time they went through.

The natural conclusion is that the Brooklyn club, which claims to have held up on Pat in October, overlooked the last waivers in some manner and the Cardinals, as a result, were free to sell him to the Yankees.

County School Teams Postpone Encounters

The scheduled game between Gaithersburg and Poolesville was postponed yesterday on account of the wet grounds. Silver Spring High, now Montgomery Blair, will not play Charlotte Hall tomorrow, as previously scheduled, as the scarlet fever epidemic quarantine in the Leonardtown school is still in effect.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase will move up its scheduled encounter with Eastern to probably next Friday instead of early in May.

Blossom Volley Ball Tourney Slated Today

A dozen teams from five Eastern States will compete in an all-day program of volley ball at the Central Y. M. C. A. today in the fourth annual Cherry Blossom Volley Ball Tournament conducted by the association.

The following Y. M. C. A. teams are entered: North Branch of Philadelphia, York, Pa.; Roanoke, Va.; two teams from Richmond, Va.; Jamaica, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y.; two teams from Baltimore; Greensboro, N. C., and two teams from Washington.

First Round.

Washington Reds vs. Jamaica.
Roanoke vs. Richmond.
Philadelphia vs. Richmond Blues.
Washington vs. Baltimore Reds.
(Other teams drew byes.)

Takoma Tigers Practice.

The New Takoma Tigers will hold practice this afternoon and tomorrow on their new diamond at Blair road and Peabody street. They also wish to cancel their game tomorrow with the Liberty Nationals, due to weather conditions and lack of practice.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Bowie Race Track, April 12.

The muddy track and some ragged riding is my alibi for having only one winner. Ahmed finally got home to save the system players from a shutout with a $7.80 mutuel. Evening Chimes and Advocate Junior were two that should not have lost, and I join the booers in saying that I believe that Sang Froid won from Boston Brook. I'm taking the angle and everything into consideration, but I still think Sang Froid won. But, of course, I picked the horse that was ruled second. Evening Chimes was allowed to drift back to last when he should have been making a front-running effort. At that, this one was beaten only a nose, but that was enough to spoil the daily doubles for most of the customers. Jockey Earl Porter aided in the defeat of Advocate Junior. Instead of rating the horse, he thought he was delivering air mail. He did not take note of the fact that the nearest horse to him was some 15 lengths behind. He just rode and rode and Advocate Junior was not a mechanical horse, so he quit. Anyway, Bennings, Inc., can only pick them. We can't ride them.

BILL.

First race—Blue Zip has a lot of speed now, according to Clocker Mike's workout reports. Doesn't want more opposition than this, however. Starogan and General Lejuene for the other awards. The last named would be a cinch if at tops. Clocker Mike has Oneill as his special.

Second race—Sisowen gets the call over this group of sprinters, despite the appearance of Acautaw. The first named gets a 13-pound shift in the weights and I'm stringing along. Hogan's Fox might have won here the other day with racing room in the stretch. Dangerous even in this company.

Third race—Seabiscuit ran a good race here the first time out after having a rough trip in the early part. Provided Jockey Horn misses trouble, I expect to visit the pay-off window. Patsey Begone for the place and Pollywee for the show. Mike likes the last named. The shift in riders may work miracles.

Fourth race—Wise Duke was something of a juvenile king in Florida. Picks up 12 pounds, but I can't see him missing with these. Victorious Ann's last was a beaut. A factor here. Winter Sport races well and may be close.

Fifth race—Lynx Eye demonstrated that he is at his best in his lone race here. Clocker Mike reports that he has been working briskly and I'm going to gamble on his chances. Dogmata, winner of the Inaugural Handicap, and Evergold for the other money places.

Sixth race—Motley might have won the other day but for some poor handling. Linberg is slated to ride today and that's some improvement. Alladin's Dream and Dancing Cloud for the rest. Saint Kitts has a fighting chance but seems outclassed.

Seventh race—Axentea barely missed taking a purse the other day. Takes off weight here and I'm stringing along. Maddening is the one to beat. Twidgets to show. The last named was run into the ground yesterday.

Good Harvest To Race for Vanderbilt

Buys Horse on Eve of Today's $5,000 Race at Bowie Track.

ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT will have two horses instead of one in the $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, today's feature at Bowie. The youthful millionare purchased Good Harvest, from the B. B. Stable yesterday at private terms, and the horse will run coupled with Dogmata, winner of the Inaugural Handicap.

The latest addition to the cerise and white forces was a successful campaigner in Florida last winter and has won two races at the Prince Georges County course.

A small, but speedy field has been named overnight for the Southern Maryland. Besides the Vanderbilt pair, the Shandon Farm has entered two stars in Evergold, recent winner, and Dust Girl. Lynx Eye, the property of George Robertson, and St. Moritz, owned by Whitey Abel, owner, trainer and jockey, are the others slated to compete.

While slow time must be accepted due to the heavy condition of the track, the competition should be keen. Only horses that go well on an off track have been entered.

Today will be the last chance for Maryland turf followers to play the daily double until the horses move into Pimlico. The racing scene shifts to Havre de Grace on Monday and that track has decided not to include the combination wager.

Bowie officials expect the daily double to surpass all records for total play today.

Horses Seek Middleburg Laurels

Turf in Fair Condition for Fifteenth Annual Meeting Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEESBURG, Va., April 12.—Everything is in readiness for the fifteenth spring race meet of the Middleburg Hunt, which will be held on the Glenwood race course tomorrow afternoon. All day long vans have lumbered in, bringing blue bloods of the equine world.

Prize steeplechasers munched their oats this evening on the Sands estate, awaiting the call of the bugle tomorrow. Stable boys rubbed down and bandaged legs and did other necessary things to make their charges fit and fine for the morrow.

Stabling accommodations on the grounds have been filled and many private stables near the course are housing the thoroughbreds.

Turf Is Drained.

In spite of the continued rains, the grounds are reported by officials to be in a fair condition. The rolling turf of the course prevents much sogginess, while in lower places the ground has been properly drained. While the going will be heavy, the conditions are said by horsemen to be generally good.

With fair weather tomorrow the races promise to be a success. Large crowds of sporting Easterners are expected to be present and many informal parties have been arranged for the visitors.

The first race, the Sunny Bank, 1¼-mile turf race, will be called at 1:30. Graham Grant's Omarcou is scratched in this race. Late today no scratches had been made in the feature event, the Middleburg Hunt Cup, a 4-mile timber race, which is the second number on the program.

Eight Are Listed.

Eight of the top steeplechasers of the country are listed in this race. They are Northwood Stable's Indigo, Mrs. George Eustis' Charioteer, Mrs. Vadim Makaroff's Gigolo, Mrs. Simon Patterson's Career, Flying Horse Farm's The Prophet, Paul Mellon's Chatterplay, Alvin Untermeyer's Bagatelle and C. E. Perkins' Leguna Secca.

Other scratches announced are Mrs. Lewis A. Parks' Walnut Creek in the William Skinner Memorial, a 2½-mile timber race; Mrs. Norman Whitehouse's Seth Stranger, and John E. Hughes' Main Roe in the Rose Hill, a 3-mile timber race; Graham Grant's Long Prince in the Loudoun Plate, a 2-mile brush race, and Mrs. Paul Mellon's Bad Boy, Paul Mellon's Catalano and J. E. Ryan's Aughrim Boy in the Three Oaks, a mile flat race.

The Loudoun County Hospital will benefit from the admission, which is $1, except for landowners who hold tickets. Judges are Fletcher Harper, Amory Carhart and W. H. Lipscomb.

Archery Tournament To Be Staged Sunday

Washington will be the scene of a big-scale archery tournament Sunday when teams belonging to the Old Dominion Archery Association engage in what is to be known as the York Round Challenge Cup competition. Shooting will start at 10 a. m. on the Potomac Park archery course. Among those to participate will be Dr. John C. Baldwin, champion of Maryland, and a member of the Oriole Archers of Baltimore.

'Best Card of Year' Booked to Lure District Ring Fans Monday

Jannazzo Foe Of Furr in Feature

All But One Preliminary Boxer Main-Eventer in Own Right.

By Bill McCormick.

CONVINCED by the record crowd drawn to the O'Mahoney-Dusek wrestling bout last Thursday night that new attendance highs may be reached if the public is given outstanding attractions, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn have arranged perhaps the best boxing card of the current indoor season for the Auditorium Monday night.

The 34-round card is topped by a 10-round encounter between the world's ninth and tenth ranking welterweights—Izzy Jannazzo and Phil Furr, respectively—which, in itself, is enough to make any fight show. Not satisfied that the Furr-Jannazzo bout itself will serve to attract the turnout on which they are banking, Turner and Ahearn have arranged a preliminary card consisting of four six-round bouts in which every boxer but one is a main-eventer in his own right.

Rose to Tenth Spot.

Furr's career here has been that of the typical home-town boxer who almost invariably is a prophet without honor in his own stamping grounds. Unnoticed and generally considered an "overexalted preliminary boy" by the local wiseacres, Furr all the time was scoring victories here that earned him the tenth ranking by a national ring publication which keeps an ear to the ground in the mecca of all boxers—New York.

Had Furr been punching out his victories in New York, instead of here, it is entirely possible, even probable, that he would now outrank his opponent of tomorrow night, who acquired his ninth ranking by performing right under the noses of those who rank pugs in Gotham.

Most Are Newcomers.

Most of the main-event performers on the preliminary card are newcomers to local rings. Joe Teems, who fights Pete Powell in a featherweight affair, is a Greek from Florida, who boasts victories over Eddie Burl, Charley Von Reedon, Tony Lopez and Jimmy Reed. Teems has appeared in top bouts throughout Florida and the South for quite a few years. Powell is a main eventer in Norfolk and other Virginia fight centers.

Jimmy Wade, another newcomer, will work against the only fighter on the card who has not fought in a main event—one LeRoy Zinkham, from Baltimore. Zinkham is a knockout artist who consistently has refused to advance out of the preliminary class, preferring to continue his campaigning where the pickings are easier. Wade, who has been imported from Miami, has fought many top bouts in Florida, knocking out such as Andy Callahan and winning on points from Andy Snyder, Snooks Campbell and the likes.

Miller in Debut.

Baby Miller, another Florida featherweight new to Washington fans, will make his debut here against one Phil Baker, of Philadelphia. Miller, a Cuban-Seminole, has defeated Lopez, Guzeman, Chino Alvarez and Moon Mullins, among others, in main events. In his last fight in Florida he handily trounced Johnny Lucas in a 15-round war which set a new high for action in Tampa. Baker, who is no relation to the accordion player, is a member of the famous Boo Boo Hoff stable, who has been fighting featured bouts in such centers as Scranton and the smaller Philadelphia clubs.

In the remaining six, Roy Manley will clash with Pete Bevans in a welterweight snarl which generally is being classed as a local natural.

Dick Lunn Gains Dixie Golf Finals

Greenwich, Conn., in tomorrow's 36-hole final. Topping today carded a fine 72 while eliminating Howard Tryon, of Elmira, N. Y., 5 and 4. His round, however, was completed before the heavy rain swept over the links.

Allen Leads at Turn.

After battling on even terms for eight holes, Lunn lost the ninth to Allan's par 4 and made the turn with a one-hole deficit. Allen added the tenth with another par 4, but lost the twelfth to Lunn's standard 5.

The deluge hit them at that point, but both carded pars on each of the two next holes to set the stage for Lunn's decisive birdie. Lunn went 1 up on the long seventeenth, where Allen lost a stroke in a parallel water hazard.

Lunn's iron shot missed the green on the 140-yard eighteenth, and he required a 4, 1 over par. With a chance to square the match, Allen three-putted, his last effort of some 3 feet rimming the cup.

Wood Delays Boat Record Attempt

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 12 (AP).—Unable to make a proper step adjustment of Miss America X, Gar Wood today indefinitely postponed further efforts to better his own world's motorboat speed record of 124.91 miles an hour.

His decision was reached after mechanics sent the 38-fooot boat across Indian Creek on what Wood described as an unsatisfactory run.

He said one adjustment to the step, which has consumed the last several days, did not permit thhe craft properly to ride the surface.

Accordingly he ordered the boat put back into its cradle and instructed mechanics to continue experimenting with step adjustments in an effort to increase the speed.

Go to Detroit

Wood said he would have to leave here to be in Detroit on April 18 and that he would make no more official attempts to break his record until after he returns, possibly the latter part of next week or the first of the following week.

He recently was clocked at 119 miles an hour over an officially measured mile course and since then has been making various adjustments with the boat in an effort to step up the speed.

Offensive Football Discussed By Coaches in Conclave Here

By Lewis F. Atchison.

IN an atmosphere charged with flying lateral, forward and backward passes, a group of more than 100 coaches last night heard Andy Kerr, of Colgate, anr grid instructors from Catholic University, Georgetown and George Washington, discuss the various phases of offensive play.

The discussions were held in the School of Music at Catholic University, where the final session will be held this morning, beginning at 9 o'clock.

Kerr, final speaker on the program, started out with single wing formations, shifted over into double-wings, reversed his field and ran back to spinners, half-spinners and reverse plays, and was just getting around to his pet topic—lateral passes—when the final whistle blew. His drive was checked on the 1-yard line with victory in sight, but not to be daunted, ambitious Andy will resume his talk in the morning.

Jack Hagerty, of Georgetown, heaved a score of figurative passes, describing their flight with long, sweeping arcs on theb lackboard, in one of thee vening's most interesting talks. Hagerty covered passing from every conceivablea ngle.

Jim Pixlee, of George Washington, delved into the intracacies of line play and disclosed many valuable points of information for his audience. "Dutch" Bergman, of Catholic University, pointed out the advantages of Notre Dame's system in an interesting discourse.

Among the coachesp resent were Gus Tabell and "Butch" Slaughter, of Virginia; Charley Haven, Western Maryland; Tex Tilson, Washington and Lee; Earl Tilson, V. P. I.; Glen Thistlethwaite, Richmond; Jack Bowman, and members of all local coaching staffs.

Ruth-Like Ballyhoo Is Turned on Gehrig

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—With genuine flourish and obvious enthusiasm, Lou Gehrig today took over the role of "spotlight man" for the Yankees after playing the part of strong, silent understudy to Babe Ruth for ten years.

To emphasize the development, the "iron man" of baseball worked out briskly with the one-time "man mauler" of the ring, Jack Dempsey, at Antie McGovern's gymnasium, which was wired for sound especially for the occasion and gave off echoes of Ruthian ballyhoo. There were no knockdowns.

To make it official, the Yankees subsequently disclosed Manager Joe McCarthy has appointed Gehrig team captain for the 1935 season. This was significant, because there has been no captain on the club since Babe Ruth held the job, only to be deprived of it by the late Miller Huggins "for the good of the service."

Improved Ball Club.

To celebrate, Columbia Lou promptly exercised the prerogatives of his new office and responsibility. He smiled broadly as the boys gathered around, took a deep breath, squared his tremendous shoulders, and boomed:

"The Yankees, for various and good reasons, are a greatly improved ball club. We figure to regain the American League pennant. But for a lot of tough breaks we might have beaten the Tigers last year. We will have more speed, plenty of power and we will get better pitching than Detroit. It looks like a good race, probably a close one, but we have the best team in the league, all things considered."

This was one of the longest non-stop statements Gehrig had ever issued, in addition to being the most dramatic. The boys have taken Gehrig and his exploits for granted for so long that it was all a bit sudden. It was necessary to readjust the focus. The man who has long since passed Ruth, insofar as his performances on the field and his power at bat are concerned, was shedding his inferiority complex, so to speak, and doing a complete job of it.

Warms to Subject.

Gehrig warmed to his subject. He paid tribute to Ruth but suggested the Yankees would not be handicapped, defensively, by having the speedy George Selkirk in right field. He emphasized the comebacks of Tony Lazzeri and Bill Dickey as big factors in the Yankee outlook. He dwelt on the speediness of youngsters like Rolfe, Crosetti, Hill, Walker and Selkirk.

"Pitching? Why, we will have so much good pitching it may be a bit embarrassing," laughed Lou. "Sure, I know Detroit has Rowe and Bridges while Cleveland has a flock of fine right-handers, but we will beat them to the punch."

Gehrig hopes to hit 50 or more home runs this year—for the first time—but says this "all depends on the breaks." He led both major leagues with 49 last season. He agrees with Connie Mack that Hal Trosky, the slugging young first baseman of the Indians, may be his closest rival for the home-run crown.

Capt. Gehrig expects to play 154 games, the full schedule. He hasn't missed a championship game since 1925. His all-time "iron man" record now includes 1,504 consecutive contests.

Lenore Kight Keeps Tank Honors

Rawl's Bid for Sweep Is Futile; Medica Sets More Records.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Lenore Kight, of the Carnegie Library Club Team, Homestead, Pa., blasted Katherine Rawls' dream of a grand slam in the women's national indoor swimming championships tonight by retaining her title in the 220-yard free style. Miss Rawls, winner of three titles, finished third behind Mary Lou Petty, of the Washington A. C., Seattle.

Miss Kight, who hasn't been shut out in national competition since she came up to the top in 1932, won by a yard and a half over the long-course Lake Shore A. C. pool. Her time was 2:35.5, a tenth of a second slower than her own championship record.

Miss Rawls, the tiny Miami star and all-around champion of the swimming world, followed the winner closely for the first 150 yards, lost valuable space with two slow turns and was just beaten out of second place by Miss Petty's brilliant finish. June Burr, of Miami, was fourth.

Two more world's free-style records were bettered by Jack Medica, University of Washington star, who breaks them with much abandon. He clipped eight-tenths of a second off the accepted world mark in the 200 meters by swimming it in 2:07.2 and kept right on to better the 220-yard free style by 1.1 seconds in 2:07.9. Johnny Weissmuller set the marks he bettered in 1927.

Wrestler Grabs "Mike' To End All Hostilities

Philadelphia, April 12 (AP).—Chief Little Wolf of California was awarded a victory over George Zaharias, of Pueblo, Colo., in 19 minutes 19 seconds of their wrestling bout tonight at the arena after some disorder when both grapplers fell through the ropes.

Zaharias refused to call it quits on the referee's decision against him and made for the Indian, but the latter picked up the announcer's microphone and threatened to "bean" his victim, thus ending all hostilities. Little Wolf weighed 216, Zaharias 238.

Pitt and L. S. U. Fives Will Battle Tonight

Atlantic City, N. J., April 12 (AP).—Louisiana State, winner of the Southeastern Conference basket ball title, and Pittsburgh will meet here tomorrow night in their intersectional battle.

Baltimoreans To Meet D. C. Tankmen

Arrangements Under Way for Meet Next Week at Shoreham.

ARRANGEMENTS were under way yesterday for an inter-city all-star men's swimming meet between the pick of Washington's sharks and the fastest-stroking paddlers from Baltimore. The meet will be held a week from tonight in the Shoreham's Venetian Pool.

Picking up the threads of a none-too-kindly rivalry, born several years ago when Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore put up a loving cup for annual summer competition between picked Washington and Baltimore teams, the meet will resume where the Jackson meet left off last year at the Maryland Club Gardens Pool when Washington's representatives came through with a narrow victory.

Winners, Runners-Up

The members of the Washington team probably will be chosen from the winners and runners-up of the recent District indoor championships. Buddy Hodgson, new District 50-yard free-style champ, will face a tough proposition in his specialty against Homan Kinsley, Baltimore Y. M. C. A. flash, but looms a favorite in the high diving, second only to Johnnie Broaddus, high-soaring champion of the District.

Stewart Fitzhugh, record-breaking back-stroke champion from Central High School, will need all his mark-shattering prowess against Frank Cummings, of Baltimore, who is reported to have covered the 100-yard distance in the sparkling time of 1.09 1-5.

Farber Is Threat.

Ernie Boggs and Bob Jordan in the 220 face tough opposition in the furlong from Brent Farber, of Calvert Hall School, Baltimore, three times a winner over Jordan, runner-up by a hand to Boggs for the District title.

Dyer Ghormley appears to be a promising point-winner in the breast-stroke, while the 200-yard free-style relay and 300-yard medley are nothing but toss-ups at this writing.

Joe LaSalle, 100-yard District champ, trails on the short end of the odds in the century against Kinsley. The meet should be one of the most colorful aquatic events of the indoor season, sharpened as it is by perennial inter-city rivalry.

Tech High to Oppose Episcopal Nine Today

Tech High's baseball team will open its season this afternoon against Episcopal High at Alexandria in the only local scholastic game of the day. Western's nine, loser to National Training School by a 7-to-4 margin recently, will make another stab for victory against Randolph-Macon Academy at the Virginia school.

Eastern Suburban, former Takoma-Silver Spring, tackles Charlotte Hall at Leonardtown, Md.

Western's interhigh golf champions face Central at Beaver Dam, while Tech and Roosevelt meet at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Georgetown A. C. Wants Game.

The Georgetown A. C. is seeking a game for tomorrow with a team having a diamond. Call West 2908-W after 6.

145 Tank Aces To Compete At Y.M.C.A.

Three States and District to Be Represented at Meet Today.

AN IMPRESSIVE field of 145 swimmers from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and the District will race for the Middle Atlantic Y. M. C. A. team championship this afternoon and tonight in the Shoreham Pool.

Standing out as the favorite on the basis of its reported strength this year as well as its championship won in last year's meet, the Wilmington (Del.) "Y" is clearly the team which Washington's strong team and those from Norristown, Pa.; York, Pa.; Baltimore, West Chester, Pa., and Lancaster, Pa., must throttle to keep from running off with its second straight win.

The Washington association, tied for high point total in the District A. A. U. championships, is a healthy contender with such worthies among its ranks as Ernie Boggs, record-breaking 220-yard District titleholder; Bill Marmion, District outdoor back-stroke champion; Knox Moncure, breast-stroker extraordinary, and Paul Wilson and Jim Orme, able back-strokers.

Strong Medley Relays.

Washington's medley relay teams of Orme, Moncure and Jim Mullady and Marmion, Wilson and Toulmin appear formidable and its free-style quartet of Boggs, Cohen, Toulmin and Mullady are two other reasons why the Wilmingtown crown may move to the Capital.

Coach Dallas Shirley's team was third in last year's meet, placing one point behind Norristown, the runner-up. Wilmington won with 30 points, Norristown scored 24 and Central "Y," 23.

The preliminary heats will be held at 2:30 p. m. and the finals at 8 p. m. Gold, silver and bronze medals are incentives for individual efforts while a plaque will be awarded the team champion for permanent possession. District A. A. U. officials will conduct the meet.

Little Men Help Teams Lure Fans

clumsier and more hopeless, and augments the picture of villain. The crowd isn't going to like him even if he does win. They are with the underdog, the frail-looking little fellow, and they aren't going to like the man who beats him.

Bitsy has another famous trick. He goes out after a ball. If he fails to reach it in time, like as not he is liable to go sprawling on his face, or back and go sliding along the clay or turf for yards. Now, a light, little man can do that many times and not get hurt, whereas a big man weighing around 180 pounds gets a good shaking up.

But how the gallery loves it when Bitsy does one of his college slides. You can hear the audible murmurs of sympathy go up on all sides—"Oh, the poor little fellow . . . Did you see him try for that . . . Oh, I hope he isn't hurt . . ." This doesn't do the opponent any good because in many cases, said opponent was that his shot was good and that Grant couldn't have reached it on ice skates.

And instead of being applauded and encouraged for his skill, he gets black looks and pursed mouths turned on him for making the poor, dear, sweet, exhausted little man fall down. Most of the time Grant means it, because there is no more indefatigable trier after a ball than Bitsy, but sometimes I think he turns it on for the sake of its unhealthy moral effect upon his opponent.

Yes, I would like a little man on my team, especially if he could play tennis the way Grant can. Because by no stretch of the imagination does Bitsy depend on his pint-size advantage to win. He is a great tennis analyist, a good shot maker, good enough to play his opponent's weakness, and a miraculous ball getter. Small, and light, he can scuttle over the court and make gets that look impossible from the stands.

The big men have it on him in stride, as far as court coverage goes, but it takes so much more out of them. And wherever I found that the opposing team had a big, tall, lanky player, you can bet I'd give them a dose of Bitsy, and maybe win that darned old Davis Cup.

Note—To kind friends, clients, etc., this department has no intention of quitting the newspaper business until requested to do so by his employers, or popular demand. Yesterday's piece saying farewell to literature in favor of manufacturing golf balls with caviar centers was the type of humor known as Ten Ton Irony. At least, it sank like that.

New York Racing Rules Amended

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 12.—The New York Jockey Club announced today that it had made two important amendments to the rules of racing and elected three new members to fill a trio of vacancies.

The rule limiting the price at which a horse could be entered in a claiming race to $2,000 was eliminated. An amendment allowing for rule changes in emergencies without the customary red tape was adopted.

The three new members are F. S. von Stade, Parker Corning, and Deering Howe. They replace E. D. Morgan, Raymond Belmont and William Astor Chandler.

Twins Will Play At Fort Hunt CCC Today

Barnett Expected to Hurl; Two Episcopal Teams to See Action.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 12.—Alexandria High School's baseball team will go to Fort Hunt tomorrow afternoon in quest of its third victory in as many starts. The Twins will oppose the Fort Hunt CCC nine, coached by Jack Watt, former Lee-Jackson High School mentor.

Lynn Barnett probably will start on the mound for the Twins.

Episcopal's track opener with Eastern High School, scheduled for this afternoon, was called off, due to inclement weather.

Two Episcopal High School teams are scheduled for action tomorrow afternoon, with the baseball team opposing Tech High School and the tennis team clashing with Johns Hopkins University's freshman. Both contests are to be played at Episcopal.

Wes Moore, former catcher on the local American Legion junior team, is holding down the backstopping post on the Washington and Lee High School team. In yesterday's game with Episcopal he threw out four runners attempting to steal second.

Bill Langford, manager of the Del Ray American nine, has ordered all candidates out for a lengthy drill at 10 a. m. tomorrow on the Del Ray diamond.

Dick Clift, former Alexandria High School and Roanoke College star, has been elected captain of the Eagles nine for the coming season. Clift won four major letters while in high school, and has played football and baseball in local independent circles during the last two years.

The Eagles will open their season Sunday at Fredericksburg against the White Oak A. C.

Silver Shares Lend Impetus To Stock Rise

U. S. Smelting and Cerro de Pasco Gain 3 Points Each.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Silver shares again dominated a quiet stock market today and were able to get a little responsive firmness from some other sections of the list.

Some of the silver shares were able to get ahead substantial fractions to as much as 3 points each. The best gainers, as in Thursday's dealings, were United States Smelting at 111, and Cerro de Pasco, at 50⅞, each up around 3 points. A number of other silver and nonferrous metal issues trailed along to rise around 1 to 2 points, including Howe Sound at 50⅞, Silver King at 12, Phelps-Dodge at 17, St. Joe Lead at 14¾, and Magma at 26½.

Among the secondary rail and utility loans a number of issues progressed 1 and 2 points and fractional advances were the rule. The highest grade bonds, however, were barely steady and United States Government obligations receded mildly.

Most important stock classifications gained moderately, and the Associated Press average for 60 stocks ended .5 of a point higher at 38.1. Turnover in the stock exchange was a little better than in the previous session, amounting to 840,210 shares.

Cotton Reacts, Then Rallies

Closing Prices Steady at Net Declines of 2 to 7 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Cotton reacted following recent advances, but after selling off about $1 a bale the market rallied on trade buying and covering. The close was very steady at net declines of 2 to 7 points.

Some stop orders were uncovered on the decline and, after their execution, offerings tapered off with closing quotations showing rallies of 12 to 16 points from the lowest on an increased demand from the trade and covering prompted by the firm grain market.

Exports today were 28,450 making 3,856,067 so far this season. Port receipts, 9,291. United States port stocks, 2,175,976.

Earnings of Some Commercial Banks Large Due to Profits on Sales of Long-Term Governments. Trading in Such Issues Becomes Common.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 12.—Earnings of commercial banks for the first quarter of this year display an unusual degree of variation as between individual institutions. While certain banks are displaying unexpectedly large earning power, as measured by the increase in their undivided profits after allowing for dividend payments, others reflect quite meager income in their condition statements at the end of the first quarter.

Thus, taking the two largest New York banks, one shows indicated earnings of 73 cents per per share for the first quarter of the year, while the other apparently earned less than 15 cents a share. Normally, the earning power of the two banks is not far apart on a per share basis.

It is evident that, with present extremely low interest rates, bank earnings can not be expected to make a brilliant showing. Furthermore, the banks are not expanding their loans, and only holdings of low-yielding government bonds have shown any material expansion. In fact, as Government and other high grade bonds with higher coupon rates are being refunded into those carrying a lower rate of interest, the trend of bank earnings should be definitely downward.

Profits on Governments Major Income Factor.

Closer inquiry reveals that the banks which reported relatively large earnings for the first quarter were able to do so chiefly through taking profits on their holdings of long-term Government bonds. One New York institution, which has enjoyed a substantial rise in its undivided profits account since the beginning of the year, attributes this entirely to sales of long-term Governments, which have risen to high premiums in the market. Of course, where profits are taken on investments held over a considerable period of time, the income is of an extraordinary nature and can not be expected to recur regularly.

However, bankers point out that the profits they have enjoyed on their Government bond portfolio is not always the result of the sale of higher-coupon issues held over any extended period of time. The tendency is growing for banks to trade regularly in long-term Governments, in order to increase their earnings through continuous turnover profits. It is pointed out that discrepancies are constantly arising between quotations of individual Government bond issues, furnishing an opportunity to profit by switches and exchanges without any material risk of loss to the bank. If the expected price change which would permit the taking of a profit does not materialize, then the bonds are simply held as investments.

The extent to which the commercial bank managements have become "price conscious" in their attitude toward the Government bond market, and the growth of trading proclivities among officers concerned with investing their institutions' funds in bonds, are among the remarkable phenomena to be observed in the financial district during the present abnormal cheap money era. One Government bond dealer, in fact, has prepared an elaborate booklet containing a number of charts showing price spreads over a period of time between various long-term Government bond issues. This is designed to guide trading operations of banks in the Government bond market, the theory being that when a price spread between any two issues becomes wider than usual profitable switching may be done.

Short-Term Issues For Long-Term Investment.

The head of one very conservative New York bank has expressed the current policy of many bank managements when he stated that his institution places its long-term investments, funds in short-term Governments, and its short-term funds in long-term Governments. He meant to imply by this cryptic statement that the banks are fearful that present low and declining interest rates may not last. Whenever interest rates rise again, long-term bond prices will naturally drop sharply. Metropolitan commercial banks, especially those that possess almost entirely demand deposits, do not feel justified in holding indefinitely a large portfolio of long-term Governments, even though their deposits are increasing, for fear that later a reversal in the trend of interest rates would involve them in a serious capital loss. Hence, the effort is being made to keep the main body of a bank's investments in Governments in issues of near-term maturity, so that higher interest rates could not cause more than a slight decline in price. Of course, as these mature, new short-terms are bought to replace them.

On the other hand, in order to bolster up bank earnings without material risk, a number of institutions are buying Government bonds of longer term on a trading basis. They do not put these long-term issues away as permanent investments, but switch them constantly. As the main price trend on Government bonds has been steadily upward into new high territory, such trading operations have been very profitable for many banks that have indulged in them to any great extent. There are evidences that such trading in long-term Governments on the part of banks is now on the increase.

National Income Up 13.9 Per Cent Over 1933 Total

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—National income in 1934 of 47,600,000,000 increased 13.9 per cent over the 1933 total, it was announced in a survey published today by the National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization sponsored by large corporations. National income, which is the net value of goods and services produced, was $377 per capita last year, an increase of $44 over the 1933 total, the board reported.

Although the conference board found that national income declined 42.7 per cent from 1929 to 1934, the cost of living dropped 20.6 per cent.

"The purchasing power of the national income produced in 1934 was, consequently, about 27 per cent below the pre-depression peak," the survey stated.

Dust and Day's News Lift Wheat Above $1 a Bushel in Pit Flurry

Maximum Gain Is 3½ Cents for the Day, With Closing 2½ Cents Up; May Contracts, $1.00½; Trade Reports and Dust Storms Factors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—Front page display of a Dun-Bradstreet report forecasting the sharpest business rise in 25 years went hand in hand today with dollar wheat. Following the prediction of forthcoming big mercantile expansion, speculative trading in grain, especially wheat, broadened out to a feverish extent, and prices shot skyward, showing a maximum new rise of 3½ cents and rivaling yesterday's sensational gain.

Not only was the old-time rural ideal of dollar-a-bushel for wheat attained but the market today surpassed that price, and in the final minute of trading reached $1.00½ for May contracts and $1.00¼ for September, the latter a new high price record for the season so far as that delivery is concerned.

More Dust Damage.

Further sensational crop damage reports from drought and dust regions of domestic wheat territory Southwest added momentum to the buying stampede. Steep fresh upturns of quotations on silver were also given much attention among grain traders.

Wheat closed buoyant 2⅜ to 3½ cents above yesterday's finish, May, 1.00⅜ to 1.00½; corn, 1 to 1¾ up; May, 88⅜ to 88½; oats, 1⅛ to 1⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

Conspicuous among late stimulating crop advices today was a dispatch from a widely known Chicago observer who, telegraphing at Pratt, Kans., said: "Wheat prospects are practically nothing west of a line from Concordia, Wilson, Otis and Offerle."

No Moisture Relief.

Indications that no moisture relief was in sight for arid sections of domestic wheat territory Southwest did much to prepare for the sudden outburst of speculative buying later. The fact that dust storms had subsided for the time being was not deemed significant as the day approached an end. A spark only was apparently needed to set the market aflame. Once started upward, prices never stopped soaring till the closing gong cleared the throng of excited traders from the pit.

Corn and oats followed wheat. Provisions went lower with hog values.

Silver, 68½ Cents, Continues Climb To New Heights

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—The bull market in silver metal rolled merrily along in the world's principal markets today. In the New York free market the price of silver bullion jumped 2¾ cents an ounce, to 68½ cents, the highest price since July, 1926. This was preceded by a similar rise in London, which carried the price there to the New York equivalent of 68.43 cents an ounce.

Today's rise narrowed the margin between the world price and the new price of 71.11 cents which the Treasury is paying American mines for newly produced metal.

The further rise in prices was said to have been inspired in part by the assertion of Senator Pittman, veteran leader of the silver bloc, that President Roosevelt proposes to lift the price in orderly fashion to its old statutory level of $1.29 an ounce.

Bonds Steady In All Groups; Utilities Gain

Abitibi 5s Rise 3¾; Domestic Corporation Issues in Demand.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Domestic corporation issues were in good demand on the bond market today and a steady to firm tone was the rule in all groups. U. S. Governments were a trifle lower.

Low-priced utilities and industrials were in particular demand as traders and investors sought to pick up individual issues that offered possibilities of price enhancement if and when the inflation bug begins to crawl around at a more rapid pace under the prodding of advancing silver prices and other stimulants.

Abitibi Paper & Power 5s were 3¾ higher at 34¼, International Paper & Power refunding 5s improved 3¼ at 66, and New Orleans Public Service 5s were 3 higher at 68.

Railroad loans were steady but advances were mostly off 1 point or less. U. S. Government obligations could do no better than hold their own and in some cases slipped back, but supporting orders held losses to extremely small fractions.

Relaxation of selling pressure against Italian 7s, which advanced 2½ points to 83¾, featured the foreign department.

ChesapeakeNet Is $7,333,045

Corporation's Surplus Rises $3,682,921 During Year.

Cleveland, April 12 (AP).—The Chesapeake Corporation reports a net income of $7,333,045.98 in 1934. The corporation listed $10,899,911 as the balance of its earned surplus account at the year's end, after paying common stock dividends of $2.50 a share. The paid-in surplus account showed a gain from $8,709,481 at the end of 1933 to $12,392,402 at the end of 1934.

Poor & Co., manufacturers of equipment for railroads, report net profits for 1934, after all charges and Federal income taxes, of $296,663, compared with a loss of $236,998 for the preceding year. This increase in earnings, according to Fred A. Poor, president of the company, was due to a gain of 88 per cent in net sales over the previous year, the 1934 total being $4,512,441. The increase in selling, administrative and royalty expenses which accompanied this increase in sales was 13 per cent.

Beatrice Creamery Co. and subsidiaries today reported net profits of $1,229,614 for the fiscal year ended February 28, equal after preferred dividends to $1.31 a share on 377,719 shares of common stock. Net sales for the year rose to $54,883,395, compared with $44,868,398 for the previous year, an increase of 22.3 per cent.

McKesson & Robbins sales for the first quarter amounted to $31,491,666 as against $32,888,718 for the same period in 1934, a decrease of 4.25 per cent. The decrease was entirely in liquor sales, which were abnormally high in 1934 on account of stocking of dealers' shelves immediately after repeal.

Technicolor, Inc., and its wholly-owned subsidiary reports for 1934 net loss of $282,608 after taxes, interest, depreciation and other charges against net loss of $249,396 in 1933.

New York Central Railroad Co. reports a net deficit of $1,227,322 for February, compared with $1,788,938 for the same month last year. For the first two months of the year there was net deficit of $1,904,984, against $2,548,334 in the like period last year.

Aluminum Up $8 on N.Y. Curb

A. O. Smith Co. Rises 4 Points; Utilities and Oils Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Rallying tendencies were extended in a number of sections of the curb list today, particularly specialties. Various metal shares added to their recent advances, while a number of utilities and oils recorded sizable improvement. Transfers approximated 151,000 shares compared with 176,000 Thursday.

Aluminum Co. of America staged a striking rise of some 8 points in a fairly active turnover. A. O. Smith & Co. closed 4 points higher and Wilson Jones was up half as much. Issues finishing fractions to around a point higher included American Gas & Electric, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Creole Petroleum, Electric Bond & Share and Sunshine Mining. Singer Mfg. and Meade Johnson were reactionary.

Fewer Lapsed Policies, Fidelity Mutual Says

Philadelphia, April 12.—The first quarter of 1935 continued to show improvement, not only in new business, but a decided decline in lapsed, surrender and termination of policies, said Walter LeMar Talbot, president of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, in a report of the company's condition.

New paid for life insurance increased to over $6,600,000 during the first quarter of 1935, while lapsed, surrender and termination of policies, other than from death, decreased $2,914,192 under the corresponding figure for 1934. This decline of 27.7 per cent in lapsed, surrendered and terminated business, is particularly significant when viewed with the increase in new paid business for the quarter. "I believe," said Mr. Talbot, "that it very clearly reflects the improved economic conditions of the life insurance buying public."

Colt Co. Probe Halted by Call Of President

Roosevelt Asks Delay Until Settlement of Labor Difficulties.

At the telephonic request of President Roosevelt, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday called off an immediate investigation of the Colt Firearms Corporation, pending the outcome of Administration efforts to settle labor differences with the plant.

Chairman Gerald P. Nye, of the Senate Munitions Committee, said he would insist on a sweeping public inquiry, however, if the settlement falls short of National Labor Board recommendations for Colt NRA compliance.

The NRA recently withdrew the company's Blue Eagle, on advice of the Labor Board, following alleged Colt violation of the recovery act's collective bargaining clause. But NRA officials failed to notify the War Department, which buys all of its machine guns from Colt. Army officials said they would continue to do business with the company, unless they received word from NRA.

Richberg Conducting Efforts.

Edwin S. Smith, of the National Labor Board, told the Munitions Committee it was the first instance he knew of in which NRA had failed to advise Government departments of Blue Eagle removal, members said. Chairman Nye had called an inquiry to investigate "failure of the Government to enforce the law against a munitions firm as it does against all others."

President Roosevelt told reporters he called Nye Thursday night and requested the inquiry be put off. He hoped, he said, for a settlement of the labor dispute, and believed the proposed investigation might make that difficult. The Munitions Committee went into executive session with Smith, and voted to postpone the hearing.

Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the NIRA board, had been invited to appear, and the President was said to have interfered at his instance. Richberg, rather than officials of the National Labor Board, is said to be conducting the latest Colt labor negotiations.

"The President seems assured that a settlement of the Colt Firearms Corporation-NRA controversy will be accomplished early next week," Senator Nye told reporters.

Associated Press dispatches from Hartford, Conn., however, quoted Samuel M. Stone, president of the Colt Co., as saying it was "news" to him that the strike was assured of settlement by Monday. No such word had been communicated to him, he said.

Nye Accuses Government.

At the Capitol, it was Senator Nye's contention that striking workmen at the Colt plant had been left practically without Government support even after NRA had removed the company's Blue Eagle. He said he wanted to find out why Richberg had failed to advise the War Department of the removal.

"While there can be no denying a strong relationship exists between munitions firms and certain departments of our Government, I can not believe that NRA and the Administration will tolerate favor in the administration of present recovery efforts," Senator Nye said.

Several members of the munitions committee, including Senator Walter George of Georgia, and Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, said they believed the dispute was an NRA and national labor board matter, and the munitions committee should not interfere.

On the Air Today

What is the history of a freak silver dollar? "Cartwheel," a "dramalogue" presented on WJSV at 8:45 p. m., covers 50 years of the dollar's life, its passing from hand to hand, then bringing about a conclusion that is as unexpected as ironic. "Cartwheel" dispenses with most of the conventional sound effects. There are 24 rapid sequences, involving 36 characters, played by a cast of 7.

The author, Vick Knight, has been in radio for many years, and launched experimental radio drama over WHK, Cleveland. This is his first script presented by Columbia network.

Correction—"Country Hi-Jinks," scheduled at 8:30 tonight, goes on WMAL instead of WRC as indicated in yesterday's column.

Local Notes.

Lewis Gardner Reynolds, custodian of the Lincoln House, has made an intensive study of the assassination of President Lincoln. Today, at 2, WRC, he'll give you a description of the shooting as nearly accurate as his reports permit.

Arch MacDonald wishes the Hot Stove League to know that they are welcome to come to the exhibition game between the Senators and Albany. Present membership cards at the gate.

Seems that Jim McGrath announces sitting at WRC and standing at WMAL. So, when he found himself standing up at WRC he told the public it was "Station WMAL—no, I mean WRC." If you can figure that one.

A great many releases from various sources have been received on the Harvard-Hawaii debate at 6 p. m. The subject, discussed by the two university teams, is "Resolved: That Hawaii be admitted to the Union as a State." Since this is not carried locally, your best bet should be WEAF, if you can get it.

Long Wins Tilt In Ansell Suit For $500,000

D. C. Court Ruling to Bring Libel Issue to Trial Next Winter.

Louisiana's embattled "Kingfish," Senator Huey P. Long, yesterday achieved his first court victory over Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, former Judge Advocate General of the Army, when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Supreme Court, ruled that Long's answer to the general's suit was complete.

Gen. Ansell is suing the Louisiana Senator for $500,000 for alleged libel. Long fought the case on technicalities and finally lost, in the United States Supreme Court, his attempt to establish senatorial immunity for the statements.

Following that, his attorneys filed an answer to the suit. Gen. Ansell then filed a demurrer to Long's answer, alleging that it was insufficient and that it should be stricken. Attorneys argued many hours early in the week, and Justice O'Donoghue yesterday suggested that the answer, in his mind, was quite enough.

Result is that the Long-Ansell feud will be aired in District Supreme Court some time next winter. The court calendar is crowded to the point where it will take seven or eight months to reach trial.

Electrician Halts Fire at Eastern

Overcomes Film Blaze at School Single-Handed.

An electrician single-handed halted a fire in the projection room of the Eastern High School assembly hall yesterday afternoon. The 2,000 students in the hall never knew there was a fire.

Flames suddenly shot up at about 3:30 p. m. while a film, "The Cyclone Kid," was being shown. A roll of film caught fire, probably from overheating, the electrician, Louis E. Nix, 33, of 1312 Maryland avenue northeast, said later.

Several students were with him. Nix grabbed the burning roll with his hands, swept it away from other inflammable films nearby, and sought to smother the fire on the floor. Flames seared his face and hands, but he got the blaze out before firemen arrived. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Union Oil Acts To List Issues Of $21,000,000

California Concern Asks Registration of Big Capital Security.

Another sizable capital issue was announced yesterday when the Union Oil Co. of California applied to the securities and exchange commission for registration under the 1933 securities act of $13,500,000 in debentures and 300,000 shares of capital stock to be reserved for conversion at prices aggregating about $7,500,000.

The company plans to use the proceeds of the sale of debentures to retire $13,463,000 5 per cent debentures which it expects to call for redemption June 1, at a price of 102 and accrued interest.

The proposed issue of securities consists of $6,000,000 of serial debentures due from 1936 to 1945, bearing interest rates of 1½ to 3¼ per cent; $7,500,000 of 12-year 4 per cent convertible debentures, and 300,000 shares of $25 par value capital stock.

Stock Issue Terms.

This stock is to be issued on conversion of the 12-year debentures at the conversion price of $25 in case of debentures converted on or before May 1, 1939, at $27.50 per share thereafter and until May 1, 1943, and at $30 a share thereafter and on or before May 1, 1947.

The principal underwriters of the issue are:

Dillon, Read & Co., of New York; William R. Staats Co., of Los Angeles; Blyth & Co., Inc., of San Francisco; Dean Witter & Co., of San Francisco; Pacific Co. of California, of Los Angeles, and Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, of New York.

According to the statement, "no firm commitment to take the issue has as yet been made. It is contemplated that, subject to market conditions, the underwriting group will, on or about April 25, 1935, enter into an underwriting agreement, subject to conditions specified therein, a copy of which will be submitted as an amendment to this registration statement."

Detroit Mass Meeting Is Set by Coughlin

Detroit, April 12 (AP).—The projected campaign of Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice to intensify its political action in State and national affairs will start April 24 with a mass meeting in Detroit. The meeting will be the first of a series of 12 State meetings which will be addressed by Father Coughlin and other speakers.

He said tonight that two United States Senators would speak at the Detroit rally, but that their names would not be revealed until shortly before the gathering. New York, Boston and Philadelphia are expected to be among the Eastern cities selected for the meetings.

Farmhand Hanged Praying, Singing

Dover, Del., April 12 (AP).—Potters field claimed John C. Morgan, 44, farmhand, whom Delaware hanged today for the slaying of Dominique J. Pierre.

Morgan turned to religion since his conviction and among his last words on the scaffold were "God bless you all. I'll meet you in Heaven." As he marched to his death, accompanied by a clergyman, he joined two women and a man in singing "Nearer My God to Thee."

Morgan confessed he killed Pierre and buried the body in the hope of getting possession of his farm. He also confessed to killing Frank Foster in West Dover in July, 1933. Pierre was slain last December 15. The jury recommended mercy for Morgan but the court imposed the death sentence because the crime was too "heinous."

It was Delaware's first execution since 1930 and the first in Kent County since 1891. Hundreds tried to gain admittance to the jail yard but ten policemen stood guard and only those with witness credentials were admitted.

Doctors Disclose Relief for Cancer

punctured by a dart thrown by a playmate. The fever cleared the infection and healed the eye without total loss of sight.

A man with bone cancer, who was given both X-rays and the artificial fever, recovered apparently completely and has been back at work for nine months with no sign of the cancer's return.

His cancer was a type regularly treated with X-rays and often so cured. The fever box, however, appeared to speed the relief.

A few animal cancer cases have been tried in the box, without results.

The theory of the physicians watching these new treatments is that the heat may aid the body to build up its own natural resistance to higher levels.

Marion Talley Weds Teacher In Secret Rites

Ex-Opera Star's March Marriage Bared; Couple Hollywood Bound.

By the Associated Press.

New City, N. Y., April 12.—A two-year-old romance between Marion Talley and Adolph Eckstrom, a New York City singing teacher, culminated in a secret wedding here last month.

The news leaked out today with the filing of the marriage license return at the county clerk's office.

The wedding, it was disclosed, was performed March 23 by the Rev. D. H. Gridley, pastor of the New York City Methodist Episcopal Church.

It was the second romance to reach the public for the golden-voiced soprano, who stormed the Metropolitan Opera stage from the Middle West nine years ago.

First Marriage Annulled.

Her first was her marriage to Michael Raucheisen, German pianist, in a similarly unheralded ceremony at White Plains, N. Y., in June, 1932. This marriage was annulled six months later in California.

No inkling of an impending marriage between Miss Talley and Eckstrom had been given even to Miss Talley's associates.

George Engels, her manager, said he had heard indirectly of a budding romance, but had heard nothing but belated reports of the wedding itself.

Miss Talley's friends said they understood the couple were en route to California, where the singer is under contract to produce a motion picture.

They left New York by automobile for Washington after the ceremony, they said, and intended to motor to the Pacific Coast via Southern States.

Teacher for Two Years.

Eckstrom has been Miss Talley's voice teacher for two years. Early this year the singer went to Hollywood and signed a contract with a film company. She returned early in March.

Mrs. Kate Bucnenau, town clerk of Clarkstown, New City, acknowledged she had been requested to keep the news quiet by Miss Talley herself.

Miss Talley made her Metropolitan debut in February, 1926, in the title role of "Lucia." The unanimous acclaim of critics and public catapulted her to an operatic success never before equaled by an American singer.

In March, 1929, she suddenly announced her decision to retire from the "Met," and returned to Kansas where she bought a farm to live "like all other farmers."

She is a native of Nevada, Mo., but came to the Metropolitan via Kansas City.

Reich Offer Seen As Peace Wedge

Moscow Observers Hail Bid to Join Accord.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 12.—News of Germany's offer to enter an Eastern nonagression pact was given great importance by foreign observers in Moscow tonight, who viewed it as possibly opening the way out of the acute situation which has been worrying Europe.

Official reaction was unobtainable, particularly since Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs, is en route to Geneva, and the foreign office was closed, this being a "free day" or day of rest.

The German reference to her willingness to enter the accord, even if other signatories "stipulate among themselves accords of reciprocal assistance," was taken as obviously meaning the new Franco-Soviet agreement.

Litvinoff was to discuss the understanding with Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, at Geneva and they planned to draw up a formal project and sign it in the near future, possibly during Laval's forthcoming visit to Moscow.

200 Post Carriers Will See 'Car 99'

Street Sales Boys Will Be Told About Comics.

Two hundred Washington Post sales boys will be guests of Jack J. Payette, general zone manager of Warner Brothers, tomorrow morning, to see the motion picture "Car 99," starring Fred MacMurra, Sir Guy Standing, William Frawley and Ann Sheridan, and the stage show which features Eddie Peabody, banjo artist; Cass, Mack Owen and Topsy, Lew Duthers, Jean and Joan and Gracie Barrie.

At a brief sales meeting earlier in the morning, the street sales boys will make plans better to acquaint purchasers of newspapers that The Washington Post now has exclusive rights to those four popular comics, "Dick Tracy," "The Gumps," "Winnie Winkle" and "Gasoline Alley." Officials of The Post circulation department will be in charge of the party.

Legal Advisers To Mooney Plan Late May Drive

New Court Clash Reveals Finerty and Walsh Called West.

By the Associated Press.

San Rafael, Calif., April 12.—Tom Mooney, grasping at a legal straw proffered by the United States Supreme Court, took back into the California courts today his long fight for freedom.

The ageing San Quentin convict, serving a life sentence for the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing, followed a hint from the highest tribunal by filing a habeas corpus petition in the Superior Court through his attorney, George Davis.

Judge Edward I. Butler indicated he may consider the petition at length before acting.

In reply to a request by Davis that the writ be made returnable between May 20 and 30, Judge Butler said:

"Why, Mr. Davis, you're assuming I am going to grant this petition."

Davis hastily declared he was making no such assumption and explained he had merely suggested the dates because at that time Frank P. Walsh, of New York, and John F. Finerty, of Washington, D. C., other attorneys for Mooney, could be present.

Judge Butler said he could not possibly give consideration to the petition, a 60,000-word document, until a trial in his court, which is scheduled to start Monday, is completed. He said the trial might last four days.

In the application for an order to free him, Mooney alleged he was convicted on perjured testimony and was imprisoned in violation of his rights under the United States Constitution, citing the fourteenth amendment prohibiting persons from being deprived of their rights without "due process of law."

It was much the same contention he had previously raised, except that the Mooney forces expressed confidence it would be viewed in a new light as a result of the United States Supreme Court's attitude that Mooney still has recourse in the State courts.

Mob Is Thwarted In Attack on Jail

Fails to Get Prisoner Suspected in Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Aberdeen, Miss., April 12.—Sheriff Joe T. Morgan said tonight that a mob of about 50 men tried in vain to take a Negro prisoner from his jail early today. The Negro, Sheriff Morgan said, was Jesse Freeman, accused of trying to attack a white woman at Tupelo, Miss.

The mob disarmed Night Policeman Rial and forced him to accompany them to the sheriff's residence about 1:15 a. m., Morgan said.

"They made me go to the jail with them," the sheriff asserted. "I didn't carry my pistol. They shouted threats and said they wanted to search the jail. I told them they couldn't do that.

"Then they fired two or three shots over my head and began trying to tear down the jail door. After about 45 minutes the mob began to disperse and I drove away. As I left they fired another shot above me."

Sheriff Morgan said he and other officers moved the Negro to another jail following this morning's incident.

Dust Farmers Plan to Exist On AAA Funds

Kansans Alone Will Draw $15,000,000 for Not Planting Wheat.

By the Associated Press.

Dodge City, Kans., April 12.—The wind-swept Southwest looked up through disappearing dust clouds today, counted crop losses of more than $30,000,000, and took as a cue the words of a jovial, grimy-faced Kansas wheat farmer.

"Me leave this country?" said Arthur Adams, of Ford County, Kans., as he looked over fields blown clean of wheat. He laughed and slapped his overalls from which a miniature dust storm arose.

"Lordy, no. No dust can drive me out."

Adams hasn't had a wheat crop in four years but looks forward for rain next month and, if moisture comes, expects to have a profitable corn crop.

"Stick-it-out" farmers predominated but some dissenters, numbering more than 100 families, already had disappeared from northwestern Oklahoma, Union County, New Mexico, and a patch of western Kansas.

Adams also sounded another note prevailing widely in the "duster country"—it centers in southeastern Colorado, western Kansas, northwestern Oklahoma, eastern New Mexico and the Texas panhandle.

"I've managed to live on Government wheat payments which total $2,100 this year," he said. "That pays taxes and buys beans to go with pork we raise. Nothing better than pork and beans to make a man happy."

"An old New Englander," he continued, "once told me 'you're always looking forward to the next year's crop. The present one always gets wiped out.'

"That ain't quite true. This country does raise crops. Back in '30 I raised 20,000 bushels of wheat. In '31 I got 27,000, 50 to an acre. That's some wheat and we'll raise it that way again."

State Senator Simon Fishman, of Greeley County, Kans., once known as "the wheat king" of his State, scoffed at those who predict the affected areas are turning slowly into a desert.

It Always Has Rained Again.

"It has been tough on all of us the last three years," he said, "but it will rain again as it has in the past.

"There will again be bountiful wheat crops and the East will be sending out photographers to take pictures of immense piles of wheat for which we have no elevator space."

R. S. Trumble, Ford County agent, declared the southwestern Kansas land has not been permanently damaged.

"It will come back," he asserted. "The farmers plan to stay and bring it back."

Millions Due in AAA Cash.

F. K. Reed, Federal crop statistician at Topeka, said western Kansas wheat farmers should receive in round numbers $15,000,000 this year in Government payments.

More millions are counted on by wheat farmers in the other affected States. Additional funds were sought to make possible a gigantic listing program, creating high furrows intended to toss the dust-laden winds upward and break them up.

The fact that the latest dust storm broke up without rain caused hardy residents to fear the choking clouds may return soon.

Dust Envelops Arizona.

Arizona, outside the hard-hit area, experienced dust today. Clouds rolled over Phoenix, which apparently came from New Mexico. Nogales, Ariz., residents clamped wet cloths over their noses.

Throughout the storm area schools reopened, stores resumed business and transportation difficulties were ironed out.

In each affected State, large areas were green and crop forecasts favorable.

In Kansas, for instance, Statistician Reed estimated that while 45 counties in the storm-drought area would produce considerably less wheat than last year, the other 60 counties would have a larger harvest.

Congressional Group Wins Promise of Aid

By the Associated Press.

Relief administration funds and labor yesterday were ordered released for dust-control projects in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator.

The order went to relief administartors in those States following conferences between Hopkins and a congressional delegation. At the same time a survey of damage caused by drought and dust in that area was projected by the Agriculture Department with a view to furthering its land-use program.

Hopkins said the relief administration would supply on application by the States 10 cents for each acre affected for tractor fuel. Previously, Kansas was allotted $250,000 for dust-control work, consisting mostly of strip plowing.

Sees Congressional Group.

The decision was made by Hopkins after conference with Representative Jones, of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; Senator Gore and Representatives Massingale, Ferguson and Johnson, all of Oklahoma; Senator Hatch and Representative Dempsey, both of New Mexico.

The survey of the dry and dust afflicted area will be conducted by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics preparatory to withdrawing arid areas of agricultural land from production. It is preliminary to conferences to be held on problems confronting people in the dust originating areas.

Vast Acreage Involved.

Plans already under consideration call for withdrawal of between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 acres now in production to use for grazing, forest plantings, recreation and wild life purposes.

Secretary Wallace said in a radio speech directed to the Izaak Walton League convention in Chicago that the dust storms are "only the most spectacular and awe-inspiring of the many significant warnings Nature is giving us" of the necessity of following a land-use program to avoid disaster.

H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Erosion Service, told the same convention "this is not a battle to be fought solely by the Government," adding that "the whole people must be aroused if we are not to lose it."

Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and administrator of the proposed land-use program, declared "it can not profit anybody if the fertile top-

BAKER.

Repeating the denial that serious inroads have been made on the merit system, Harry B. Mitchell, president, Civil Service Commission, told the Eastern State Regional Conference yesterday afternoon that more employes are within the classified service now than in 1932.

He also emphasized that steps are being taken to bring the alphabet agencies under the classified service, outlining several bills to that effect which are pending in Congress.

"Admittedly," Mr. Mitchell said, "there has been a very considerable increase in the Government service of employes who are not included under the competitive system. These are the people employed in the new agencies.

"There has been much criticism of Congress because it excluded these new agencies from the operation of the civil service laws. While there is some ground for this criticism, experience has indicated that in setting up new agencies where the details of the work to be done are more or less unknown, and where the necessary set-up to do that work is an undetermined quantity, I believe it is wise in such cases to allow latitude for the possible unknown necessity of the particular case."

Mr. Mitchell then used the railroad retirement board as an illustration of this point.

"Some time ago the President instructed the Civil Service Commission to make a survey of these new agencies so that he might determine just which ones it would be disarable to include within the competitive civil service system. * * * Some work has already been done.

"The agencies which are exempt from the civil service act and rules fall into three major classes. There is the class in which the language is permissive rather than mandatory, such as the AAA, for example, in which the statute states that the Secretary may make such appointments without regard to the civil service law and rules."

The TVA was cited as another class, in which the language of the statute reads. "The board shall." Then there are the establishments which were created under statutes which place the power of appointment in the President—"The President is hereby authorized to establish such agencies * * * and to appoint without regard to the provisions of the civil service lows * * *."

To clarify that situation and give the President authority to bring these agencies under the civil service laws when he deems it advisable several bills are now before Congress. The principal ones are:

The Logan bill which would bring all Governmental executive positions under the civil service law and rules and would require positive action on the part of the President to take them out.

A bill by Representative Ramspeck would give the President authority to place within the classified service any position or group of positions which may now or may hereafter be exempted.

A bill by Representative Sirovich is much more comprehensive and covers many features of the civil service. So far as bringing people into the civil service, Mr. Mitchell pointed out, it provides that immediately upon the passage of the act all positions within the Government, except those which are elective, shall be under the operation of the civil service law. The bill also provides for voluntary retirement and many other reforms which have been discussed at length in previous Federal Diary articles.

Art Without Activity?

For years we've heard the merry call
Of tennis courts along the Mall—
Of racquets, snowy balls and net,
Of rifled shots well served and met,
By players who with stout young hands
Danced nimble feet o'er chalk-

As here and yon the pellet flew—
Withal a pleasant scene to view.

Today we hear those courts are doomed
In high Art's interest, it's assumed.
Yet, be that true, we'd like to know
Just where these clerks henceforth must go,
When they feel tempted to cavort
Upon a netted chalk-lined court?
Can not some space be set apart
For humans in this scheme of Art?

the budget. As his reasons for that conclusion, he said:

1. Old age pensions would remove from the relief rolls all persons over 65.

2. Unemployment insurance would keep large numbers of others off relief by acting as a cushion to bolster purchasing power.

Mr. Roosevelt summarized his views on the bill when asked to reveal what he told Speaker Byrns and Chairman Doughton, House Ways and Means Committee, at a conference on his return from Florida.

Hill drew loud applause when he defended provisions for a system of supplemental compulsory old-age pensions, to be financed by pay roll taxes on employers and employes ultimately totaling 6 per cent.

"This title," he said, "is the most important thing in this bill. When you strike at this title you strike at the keystone of the arch of he social security program."

The provision in question, Hill declared, would authorize creation of a revolving fund likely to contain $32,000,000 by 1970.

Hill said the revolving fund could be used to finance Government borrowing and permit retirement of all outstanding Federal bonds, exempt from taxation.

"This would force that money into channels of business where it would be subject to income taxes," he said. "People who now have money in those tax-exempt bonds would not be so fortunate."

Townsend Champion Speaks.

Representative McGroarty (Democrat), of California, champion of the $200-a-month Townsend pension plan expected to be offered as a substitute for the Administration bill, entered the debate for the first time.

"How can we study this important bill in 20 hours?" he asked Hill. "The time is too short for my little brain. Would you ask me to vote for it without understanding it?"

"The gentleman is too modest," Hill responded.

Representative Treadway, Massachusetts, led a Republican assault on the measure, which he lambasted as a "lemon." He said the Democrats in their majority committee report intentionally failed to show any connection between old-age annuity taxes and benefits.

"They purposely omitted any reference to the connection between the two," he charged, "because they wanted to try to delude the Supreme Court. Personally, I think this attempt to delude the Supreme Court is rather childish."

L.S.U. Stages War Show For Benefit of Rosso

Baton Rouge, La., April 12 (U.P.).—While other colleges watched demonstrations against war, Louisiana State University blossomed out in full military regalia today to welcome Augusto Rosso, Italian Ambassador to the United States. Senator Huey Long presided with a flourish.

Long arrived in the middle of a military review of the school's 1,500 cadets, and took a place in the reviewing stand. Later he shunted aside Gov. O. K. Allen, the scheduled speaker, and delivered the address of welcome to the honored guest. The occasion was the diamond jubilee celebration at the university.

Donald F. Snow Begins Embezzlement Term

Thomaston, Me., April 12 (AP).—Donald F. Snow, of Washington, D. C., former Representative from Maine, voluntarily entered the Maine State Prison tonight to begin a two to four year term for embezzlement.

His surrender here followed upon a mandate returned by Maine's law court Wednesday overruling Snow's exceptions, based on a superior court trial a year ago and denying him a new trial. Snow was convicted of embezzling $471.75 from the estate of Mrs. Harriett A. Wentworth, of Bangor, of which he was executor.

Victory Looms For Tammany In Funds Fight

Lehman and Farley Expect Measure's Defeat in Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., April 12.—Although the New York Senate passed a congressional reapportionment bill tonight, Tammany apparently was emerging victorious in its fight against the reapportionment plans of Gov. Lehman and the Roosevelt Administration.

The Senate's favorable action on the congressional reapportionment bill generally was regarded as an empty gesture in the face of Tammany opposition. The Senate sent the bill over to the Assembly, where its defeat was freely predicted.

The vote in the upper house was 27 ayes to 20 noes. The Assembly will consider the bill tomorrow.

Postmaster General Farley and Gov. Lehman apparently had abandoned, for the time being, their efforts to swing the Tammany delegation in the lower house into line.

It was generally agreed that virtually nothing could save the congressional bill from the same crushing defeat that Tammany votes have twice administered to the Lehman-Farley legislative reapportionment bill in the Assembly.

Gov. Lehman said early tonight that he had no intention of holding the Legislature in session after its scheduled hour of adjournment, now fixed for noon tomorrow.

This was taken to mean he and his supporters in the national Administration had decided to withhold new efforts for reapportionment until a special session of the Legislature later this year, or possibly until the 1936 Legislature meets.

Tonight's Senate vote was according to party lines, except that one Democrat, Ogden J. Ross, of Rensselaer County, joined the Republicans in opposition.

Hitler Accepts Accord, Clears Way for Peace; Stresa Parley Jubilant

Berlin Notifies Simon Nation Is Ready to Join in Pact.

Paris Modifies League Protest

Germany Will Be Asked to Help Decide Future of Austria.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Stresa, April 12.—Germany told Britain, France and Italy today she is willing to take part in efforts to forestall war.

Specifically, she let it be known she would enter an eastern non-aggression pact—something she has heretofore rejected—even though other participants "stipulate among themselves accords of reciprocal assistance."

That was the glad news Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, took to Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France and Premier Benito Mussolini and Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Fulvio Suvich of Italy, gathered on Isola Bella.

Sir John had his information from the British Embassy in Berlin, which Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath informed of the Reich's willingness to enter an eastern pact.

(At Berlin German officials said Von Neurath reaffirmed to the British chargé d'affaires, D. C. Newton, Adolf Hitler's willingness to sign bilateral non-aggression pacts and work these agreements into one collective system.)

Agreement Reached.

The German offer means she will join an Eastern agreement, something anxiously desired by France and her big friend, Russia, though she will not contract military obligations under it. If other parties desire to do so, that will be no bar to Germany's adherence.

Laval revealed that the three conferees had reached complete agreement as to the program to be followed at Geneva when the League of Nations Council meets Monday to consider France's appeal against Germany's rearmament in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

France, presumably in response to British urging, abandoned all thought of seeking to have the council condemn Germany for her action.

In return, it was authoritatively stated, Britain gave her blessing to regional mutual assistance pacts within the framework of the league such as France desires as her "second line of defense against war."

Geneva Program

A high British spokesman, confirming Laval's disclosure that the powers were agreed as to their program at Geneva, said it covered the lines to be followed on two questions:

1. Germany's armaments program in repudiation of the treaty of Versailles.
2. Desirable action in similar future cases.

The British official emphasizes that only the league council can decide finally on such matters, but as far as the three powers are concerned they are agreed on their attitude.

In announcing Germany's readiness to enter an eastern pact, Simon told the conference the Reich believed there should be two separate documents.

Hitler's offer, informed quarters expected, would soften the French protest to Geneva.

Nevertheless, French circles said, France is going ahead with conclusion of her mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia which is expected to serve as the model of other similar bilateral pacts. A vast European "security system" would be formed thereby, it was said.

A French official denied reports from Paris that the Little Entente would be included in the Franco-Russian alliance which, he insisted, would be bilateral. Such pacts, however, must be negotiated between the countries of the Little Entente and Russia as well as among other countries.

New Conference Hinted.

Persistent reports elsewhere that another conference of the powers, to include Germany and Russia, probably would be called at London in June were received with skepticism. An official said this question had not been raised.

The French memorandum to the league charging Germany with repudiation of the Versailles Treaty and seeking to justify France's appeal under the "menace to international peace" clause of the league covenant was understood to have been sent to Geneva this afternoon.

British officials said they regarded Hitler's move on the eastern pact as a distinct concession.

Hitherto, they explained, the German Feuhrer has qualified as "dangerous and objectionable" the plan to include a mutual assistance pact in a general pact of non-aggression.

When Great Britain pressed Berlin for further clarification of her

Nation's Schools Turn Out to Denounce Conflict; Marvin in Row.

From Harvard Yard and the great colleges and universities of the East—including three in Washington—to the campuses of the Far West, thousands of students yesterday staged a one-hour strike against war on the eighteenth anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the world conflict.

As Europe's statesmen, admirals and generals, in flashing uniforms and morning coats, met in Stresa, to plan for peace and discuss the possibility of another world war, Boston's police were called out in a driving rain when stench-bombs were tossed in a counter demonstration.

In the immense gymnasium of Columbia University, in New York, at the height of the peace rally someone loosed a Nazi swastika, which fluttered lazily onto the crowds below.

Two harmless pistol shots cracked at Haverford, Pa. One pacifist leader was pitched into the river at Michigan State College. In Lansing and in Philadelphia a man was arrested for distributing Communist literature. As 10,000 students turned out in Manhattan and the Bronx, a woman speaker was pelted with an egg, which she warded off with her umbrella.

In Washington an estimated 2,000 undergraduates participated in demonstrations and mass meetings at George Washington, American and Howard universities. There was heckling and booing, but there were no fights, as there were in Chicago, when a free-for-all fight with sticks, stones, eggs and stench

Senate Adopts 1.7 Billion Rise In HOLC Fund

'Must' Measure Goes to Conference With Liberal Credit Amendment.

Without a record vote, the Senate yesterday approved a $1,750,000,000 increase in the capitalization of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, authorizing a grand total of $4,750,000,000 in bonds of the corporation, fully guaranteed by the Government.

Providing new resources for hard-pressed home owners, the HOLC bill, third of the New Deal "must" measures to be passed by House and Senate, now goes to conference for finishing touches.

As approved yesterday by the Senate, the bill paves the way for a flood of new home loan applications in the next 60 days.

The corporation already has more loan applications than it can fill, and, under the original language, all applicants would have had to file at least informal requests by the time the bill was passed.

An amendment by Senator George W. Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, made the two-month extension possible. He demanded that "the people who have the homes, and are willing to mortgage them, be heard from before we cut them off without any notice."

In vain Administration Senators pointed out that there are more than 800,000 applications now pending, and about 500,000 of these could qualify for loans. As the average loans amounts to $3,000, this number alone would require $1,500,000,000 in new resources. The extension may bring about a new fund shortage.

Before passing the bill, the Senate turned thumbs down on an amendment by Senator John H.

Culbertsons Win, Bury Simses Under a Mountain of Points

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Ely and Mrs. Culbertson triumphed tonight in their 150-rubber match with the P. Hal Simses by running out the two last rubbers and winding up the Sims-Culbertson contract bridge battle 16,130 points to the good.

The Culbertsons bid four spades on one hand, opened by Mrs. Culbertson with a heart. When her hand went down she blushingly exhibited one small heart.

Ely's eyes popped because Mrs. Culbertson never makes psychic bids.

"Why, darling," he spluttered.

"Not a psychic, professor," Mrs. Culbertson explained. "It was a misbid. My diamonds and hearts were mixed."

On the next hand the Simses bid one of their rapid-fire slams. This one was six hearts, "a sporting bid," Hal termed it, as it was an impossible contract.

The bidding went "one heart, one spade, three hearts, six hearts." The contract was set two.

"Our 1922 streamline bidding system," Mrs. Sims said, referring to Ely's frequent remarks about his "1935 streamlined system."

The wedding, Robbins said, is to be performed on May 18 in St. John's Church, Lattington, Locust Valley, Long Island.

Miss Auchincloss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss. Her mother is the former Janet House.

FHA's Chief To Quit Post In Few Days

Moffett Says He Will Talk With President First Next Week.

Most Conservative New Dealer Feels He Has Stayed Long Enough.

James A. Moffett, the Federal housing administrator, disclosed last night that he is contemplating early retirement from the administration, perhaps in the next few days.

Before submitting his resignation he wants first to confer with President Roosevelt, he said, and will ask an appointment within the coming week.

"There isn't anything definite yet," he declared. "But I always said the minute the ball was rolling I wanted to get out and return to private business."

Mr. Moffett returned last night from a trip to Detroit, where he attended a housing meeting. He declined to go into detail until he has seen the President.

Long Reported Dissatisfied.

Ever since his appointment last summer to organize the new FHA, rumors have been current that Mr. Moffett was dissatisfied with public life and wished to retire.

Last night came the first definite word, however, that circumstances have advanced to the point that Mr. Moffett wishes to drop his position with the New Deal immediately.

The reason given by the wealthy, youthful-appearing former oil company executive is that the FHA program is now well underway and is accumulating momentum.

Mr. Moffett came into prominence last year when he resigned as vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey because his sympathy with the New Deal aligned him against other officials of his company. Subsequently, he joined the Standard Oil Company of California.

His career at the head of the housing administration was marked early in the winter by a head-on collision with PWA Administrator Harold W. Ickes. The difference of opinion, finally patched up by the White House, concerned Ickes' plans for low-cost housing.

Under Contractors' Fire.

Later, the housing administrator was subjected to some crticism by contractors and building interests for alleged failure to stimulate construction to anticipated heights. In recent months, however, much of the crticism had abated.

Mr. Moffett has been regarded as one of the more conservative administrators of the New Deal, representing generally the viewpoint of business. He early manifested an interest in the NRA and served for a time as a member of the Industrial Advisory Board.

Meantime there was no intimation of a successor to head the FHA. From time to time reports have circulated that FHA and the HOLC might be merged into one credit agency. Mr. Moffett said, however, he was not aware this was being considered.

Wheat at $1; Dun's Sees Trade Boom

Bulls Add $11,000,000 to Value of Crop Still in the Ground.

Firm Predicts Sharpest Business Advance in 25 Years.

The Business Outlook.

The return of dollar wheat yesterday brought jubilation and a bullish market.

The Dun & Bradstreet financial review predicted the sharpest trade rise in 25 years.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—Dollar wheat came home like the prodigal son today and the board of trade welcomed it with a sudden flare of bullish enthusiasm that added nearly $11,000,000 to value of winter wheat still in the ground.

Traders wandered out of the pit to read a Dun & Bradstreet prophecy that the sharpest business advance in 25 years was on the horizon.

They came back to the pit for a speculator flurry of buying that lifted May and September wheat contracts above the dollar level for the first time since early January, added 2⅜ to 2½ cents a bushel to yesterday's closing prices and, on the basis of Wednesday's Government estimate of a 435,000,000-bushel harvest of winter wheat, enhanced that crop's value on the futures market by $10,875,000.

Gain Now $38,000,000.

Since last Saturday, wheat has advanced 6 to 8¾ cents a bushel, September delivery showing the best gain. At the extreme advance, this would increase the winter wheat crop value by $38,000,000.

Persistent pessimism over prospects in that Western area devastated by dust storms was again a bullish element in the market. While reports came of rain over a wide expanse of the grain belt, there was little or none in that dust-bitten section of far western Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado.

One private crop expert, touring the wheat lands telegraphed his Chicago office today that against a Government estimate of 78,000,000 bushels in Kansas he would forecast the crop no better than 70,000,000 or 75,000,000 at best.

Minneapolis Still Higher.

But the trade had taken the Government forecast and its own guesses into account yesterday, bidding wheat up to the doorstep of the dollar and then chasing it down a bit in taking profits.

Today the principal factor in the pit seemed to be good feeling engendered by the Dun & Bradstreet business report. After an early sag, wheat prices suddenly bounded up and closed near the top, with May delivery at $1.00⅜ to $1.00½ and September $1.00 to $1.00¼.

Although Chicago is the focal market of the country, prices at Minneapolis topped the rest, May wheat closing there at $1.10, while Kansas City was just a fraction above Chicago at 1.00⅛ to $1.00¾.

New York, April 12.—The most pronounced business rise in 25 years was forecast for the immediate future in the weekly business review by Dun & Bradstreet today.

"During the week there was a complete transformation of sentiment, as the hopes for a rather far-removed improvement were replaced by a realization that the im-

Roosevelt Rebuffs Governors On Japan Cotton Cloth Curb

Joint Committee Will Study Troubles of Textile Trade, Headed by Roper; Appeal to Congress Now Foreseen.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Meeting with a group of New England Governors and representatives, President Roosevelt yesterday indicated he would not restrict Japanese cotton cloth importations by minimizing the seriousness of this competition on the business of American textile mills.

Having previously set his face against elimination of the cotton processing tax, the President apparently gave the New England group little satisfaction when they presented him with a lengthy list of grievances and a story of the rapid deterioration of the textile industry in the Northeast.

Mr. Roosevelt after discussing the situation with the complaining group for three-quarters of an hour turned them over to four of his Cabinet officers. Out of that meeting came the announcement a joint committee of New England members of Congress and textile manufacturers would work with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper in an effort to find a solution for the industry's difficulties.

Met with what amounted to a rebuff at the White House, the New England textile interests were expected to concentrate pressure on Congress in an effort to force action from that end of Pennsylvania avenue, with repeal of the processing tax as the chief objective.

Congressional agitation became active yesterday when Representative Isaac Bacharach (Republican), of New Jersey, introduced a bill providing a 50 per cent excise tax on all textile importations made wholly or partially of cotton. He said his proposal was designed to shut the Japanese product out of this market.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, announced he proposed to ask the House Ways and Means Committee to name a subcommittee at once to investigate cotton importations.

The governors' committee discussed the situation facing the New England mills with the congressional delegations of the States affected. Gov. James M. Curley of Teacher Acclaimed as Heroine; Tells Kin How Pupils Died.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Tales of unprecedented heroism came to light in Rockville, Md., yesterday as five investigations into Thursday night's bus crash, which took a toll of 14 lives, got under way, and President Roosevelt seized upon the tragedy to press his $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 program to eliminate grade crossings from the entire country.

Outstanding figure of the disaster was Miss Anna Louise Funk, brave and efficient school teacher and chaperone for the 29 children, when the Baltimore & Ohio train, roaring down the tracks in a stormy night, split their bus in two, killing 14 Williamsport, Md., children, none more than 18 years old.

Rockville rang with praise yesterday, while officials of two police departments, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroad and insurance company began assembling the cold and calculating facts to retell the horrible story for the official records. Pitiful was Percy Line, grief-stricken driver of the bus who steadfastly maintained that he heard neither whistle nor bell until his bus was on the tracks.

The Maryland State police, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Montgomery County police, all sought to determine the cause of the accident.

Refuses Sleep.

But in Williamsport, Md., interest in the cause or the fixing of blame waned as neighbors sought to assuage the grief of 14 fathers and mothers. Among those who turned to this task of mercy was brunette Anna Louise Funk, who left Rockville yesterday afternoon, weary from interrogation, determined not to sleep until she had personally spoken with those who had entrusted their children in her care.

The American Automobile Association last night arranged the bond of $1,000 that had been asked for Line, who was being held on a technical charge of manslaughter to await action of a coroner's inquest Tuesday, and he was allowed to go back to his home.

In Baltimore, officials of the railroad disclaimed responsibility for the accident, asserting that the crossing was plainly and sufficiently marked.

Known in Hagerstown as a careful driver, and especially chosen by Miss Funk for his record as a safe man at a school bus wheel, Line, who is 27, was questioned throughout the day by assorted officials. Unable to speak coherently after he had helped pull children from the smashed bus, he said to Miss Funk:

"I didn't see the train or any lights. The train hit the rear of my bus, throwing it to the side of the track. Approaching the railroad I did not hear a bell until I was on the tracks. I did not see the lights of the train until it was right on us. I guess that's all."

Dead Marked Absent.

The calmness of Miss Funk astounded everyone. Not only did she take Line's statement and write out her own, but she drew diagrams of the accident. And all this after she had gone from mangled body to mangled body, feeling pulses, helping to sort the living from the dead in the chill and rainy midnight.

Schoolteacher to the core, the Hagerstown girl who in 1929 had been a beauty contest winner honored by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, made out a list of those on the bus.

At the home of Albert M. Boule, former State's attorney, where those who were less injured were taken, Miss Funk rapidly made a

$100,000,000 Allotted to Cut Rail Crossings

Roosevelt Reveals Plan to Sped Elimination of Menace This Year.

Using the Rockville bus tragedy as an example of the need for grade-crossing elimination throughout the Nation, President Roosevelt yesterday divulged plans for spending between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 on this type of work during the coming year.

The money will come from the $4,880,000,000 work-relief fund, $800,000,000 of which is earmarked for highways, roads, streets and grade-crossing elimination. The President expressed the desire to make the fullest possible use of this fund, consistent with certain basic principles he outlined.

In the first place, he declared, speed is essential to the works program, and for that reason the problem of obtaining the land for the removal of grade crossings will be left to the States, counties and cities. After the sites have been obtained, the Federal Government will bear the rest of the expense.

Projects will be restricted as a general rule to the main lines of railroads, Mr. Roosevelt said, explaining that the railroads have been showing a growing tendency to abandon branch line trackage made unprofitable by bus and truck competition.

Administration of both the grade-crossing and highways end of the works program will be centered in the Bureau of Public Roads, which is headed by Thomas H. MacDonald. Thus, Mr. MacDonald is expected to be one of those to sit on the administrative board that will guide the whole works program.

Stunned Village Prepares Rites for Bus Victims; Closes Business.

By Howard Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

Williamsport, Md., April 12.—The dull ache of grief gripped this little community tonight after a day in which its citizens passed from tearful hysteria to dazed, sad-eyed acceptance of tragedy.

As citizens paced the street, grim-faced and sleepless, the bodies of 14 children—eight girls and six boys—killed in a twinkling last night at a Rockville death crossing, were carried slowly to an undertaking parlor.

Business was at a standstill. Those who talked of the disaster spoke in undertones. The bitter grief which had pierced the hearts of 14 families spread throughout the stilled village.

Tonight a still-stunned crowd of townsfolks—simple people only now beginning to think again after the dreadful impact of last night's news—gathered to make plans for burial of their children.

"Their children," for in this little community's grief, all seemed welded into one large family.

School authorities and civic leaders had suggested a mass funeral for the child victims, but the parents expressed a desire for individual services.

In consequence, private services and burials will be held from homes and churches here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week.

Since last midnight, when first word of the accident reached here, the entire township has been paralyzed in grief. Men and women

Great Plains 'Dust Farmers' Will Exist on AAA Subsidies

By the Associated Press.

Dodge City, Kans., April 12.—The wind-swept Southwest looked up through disappearing dust clouds today, counted crop losses of more than $30,000,000, and took as a cue the words of a jovial, grimy-faced Kansas wheat farmer.

"Me leave this country?" said Arthur Adams, of Ford County, Kans., as he looked over fields blown clean of wheat. He laughed and slapped his overalls from which a miniature dust storm arose.

"Lordy, no. No dust can drive me out."

Adams hasn't had a wheat crop in four years but looks forward for rain next month and, if moisture comes, expects to have a profitable corn crop.

"Stick-it-out" farmers predominated but some dissenters, numbering more than 100 families, already had disappeared from northwestern Oklahoma, Union County, New Mexico, and a patch of western Kansas.

Adams also sounded another note prevailing widely in the "duster country"—it centers in southeastern Colorado, western Kansas, northwestern Oklahoma, eastern New Mexico and the Texas panhandle.

"I've managed to live on Government wheat payments which total $2,100 this year," he said. "That pays taxes and buys beans to go with pork we raise. Nothing better than pork and beans to make a man happy."

"An old New Englander," he continued, "once told me 'you're always looking forward to the next year's crop. The present one always gets wiped out.'

"That ain't quite true. This country does raise crops. Back in '30 I raised 20,000 bushels of wheat. In '31 I got 27,000, 50 to an acre. That's some wheat and we'll raise it that way again."

Borah Winner; Called to Help Revise NRA Bil

Senate Chiefs Lean His Way on Elimination of Price Fixing.

By the Associated Press.

Working behind the scenes in an effort to meet monopoly charges thrown against NRA by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, and others, Senate Administration leaders started yesterday to revise the bill for extending the Blue Eagle machine.

Senator Borah, called into conference by Administration spokesmen, insisted upon three major points. He demanded full restoration of the antitrust laws, an affirmative prohibition against price fixing, and a clear declaration that the Government is not seeking to interfere with purely intrastate trade.

Those in charge of the legislation conceded privately that the Administration measure introduced recently by Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, leaned more heavily toward price fixing than does even the present law. There was agreement that it would do but little to restore antitrust laws. Virtually all agreed, too, that the measure would have to be modified in both respects to obtain congressional approval.

Would Make Codes Voluntary.

Harrison and Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, collaborated yesterday in redrafting the bill and negotiating with Borah. At the same time, Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, was working on a measure further to curtail NRA's powers by putting the entire code structure on a voluntary basis.

While conflicting views of NRA began to crystalize in these various legislative drafts, spokesmen for two important branches of industry supported the recovery law before the Finance Committee's open investigation. Returns from a survey of American businessmen meanwhile showed sentiment strongly against price fixing.

George A. Sloan, speaking for the consumers' goods industries committee, of which he is chairman, urged extension of NRA for two years without major changes. He contended that to abolish codes "would check recovery, destroy confidence and probably create another downward spiral of bottomless deflation and financial chaos."

South Favors Extension.

John F. Edgerton, Nashville woolen textile manufacturer and president of the Southern States Industrial Council, testified a questionnaire submitted to businessmen of 14 Southern States showed the majority of them favored NRA's extension with or without modifications.

Sloan, declaring he spoke for big and little business, favored continuation of price and production control provisions of the law. Edgerton, representing mostly small industrial units, said his survey showed opposition to price fixing but support for production control.

While they were testifying on Capitol Hill, Robert W. Irwin, Grand Rapids furniture manufacturer and chairman of a national committee for elimination of price fixing and production control, gave out results of a national survey which he said indicated that business is against both of these operations.

Price Fixing Probably Out.

Irwin said 3,000 responses from 50,000 questionnaires showed 86 per cent of those responding were against price fixing and production control.

With this sentiment reflected in Congress indications were that Borah and Administration representatives might get together on elimination of price fixing from the new recovery law, except possibly in such natural resource industries as coal and oil.

There was more difficulty, however, in reaching a compromise on the other two points in Borah's program. Harrison and Wagner insisted it was necessary to provide specifically in the law for relaxation of the anti-trust laws sufficiently, at least, to permit business men to get together and negotiate codes.

On the question of interstate and intra-state commerce, Harrison and Wagner wanted to leave the issue with the courts, but Borah stood for a flat declaration in the law which would be plain to small business men without consulting the courts.

Further conferences between conflicting parties was planned for next week when the finance committee expects to complete its investigation and get to work on redrafting the bill.

Retail Trades Back NRA

One of the most important code authorities, that for most of the retail trades, last night came to the support of NRA, urging its continuance for two years.

This code authority is constituted of nine retail trades associations—variety stores, mail order houses, music, retail clothiers, two shoe groups, dry goods, furniture and hardware.

All but hardware voted for the resolution, which said, the code authority "favors continuance of emergency legislation for a period not to exceed two years, for self-government of trade and industry under self-determined codes, subject to changes which may be revommended by the constituent trade associations."

Between You and Me

Problems Vanish at Word From Roosevelt; How Much Is $4,880,000,000?

—By Raymond Clapper

AT the end of a busy day yesterday Mr. Roosevelt was still in his most genial humor and going strong.

He had heard a delegation of New England Governors pleading that something be done to stop increasing imports of Japanese cotton goods. With despair written on their faces, they produced figures showing that if these Oriental imports continued the total for the year would reach 40,000,000 yards. That would be a lot of goods, they said.

Well, Mr. Roosevelt explained that he was related to some of the New England textile mill owners and that he could both understand and sympathize. It just happened, however, that he had been looking over some Government figures and had noted that if these imports materialized, they would constitute less than 1 per cent of the output of American mills. If the situation became unexpectedly worse, he would want to do something about it, but meantime the manufacturers couldn't be hurt as badly as they thought. And now it was time to tell the press about the situation and would they mind going into the next room, where they could chat with some members of the Cabinet?

That was the way he disposed of a situation which has filled pages of the Congressional Record for the last few weeks.

* * * *

Then, with a twinkle in his eye, he took a stand shoulder to shoulder with his right wing critics in spurning a pair of amendments proposed to the social security bill in the House. One amendment would exempt the States from old-age pension contributions. Mr. Roosevelt explained that he had to oppose this amendment because if the States contributed nothing they would have no responsibility in administration and the result would be that the Federal Government would have to set up an army of bureaucratic agents. He was the last to want that.

The smile still covering his whole face, Mr. Roosevelt thought that the second proposal, which was to omit unemployment insurance and confine the bill to old-age pensions, was interfering with his budget-balancing efforts. The whole social security program, he felt, was in the direction of budget balancing because it would take the elderly off relief. The unemployment insurance feature was essential because it would cushion the Federal relief expenditures for the able-bodied unemployed and thus help balance the budget.

Senate leaders have decided to adjourn the Senate Tuesday for committee work. That being the opening day of the baseball season, some of the committee sessions may be transferred to Griffith Stadium. It gets very stuffy in those Senate committee rooms and the Senators must have their fresh air.

* * * *

The size of the new work relief fund is just beginning to sink in. Newspaper exchanges coming into the office indicate that editors about the country have started a new game, which might be called: "How much is $4,880,000,000?"

Here are some of their best answers:

Enough to buy 10,000,000 low-priced automobiles.

Equal to $75 for every tick of your watch until June, 1937, when the act expires.

About $650,000,000 less than the total amount of money in circulation in the United States.

Equal roughly to all of the monetary gold stocks in the world in 1913.

If spent at the rate of $4,500 a minute it would last until June 30, 1937.

Enough to buy any American city except Chicago or New York at its assessed valuation; exceeds the assessed valuation of Manhattan Island.

Would buy all gold mined in the United States in the last 143 years.

In gold it would require 90 ten-ton trucks to haul it; in $1,000 bills it would fill nine bushel baskets; in $1 bills it would cover 20 acres with paper money.

Almost three times enough to pay for all building contracts let in States east of the Rocky Mountains last year.

More than enough to pay the funeral expenses of all the people who ought to be shot for thinking up such answers.

* * * *

In the few hours that have elapsed since the tragic grade-crossing accident just outside Washington, official attention is turning away from boon doggling to the problem of using some of the $4,880,000,000 work relief chest to eliminate crossing menaces.

Railroad groups some months ago laid before Government officials a complete program which could have been put into effect within 90 days. It called for 12,951 projects, involving an expenditure of $865,000,000 and would utilize 783,489,000 man-hours of labor. Sponsors of the plan estimated that 85 per cent of the money spent would go into labor direct and indirect and that 750,000 men in 10,000 cities could be put to work. Plans already were drawn for these projects.

But one obstacle after another was raised. Some officials wanted to make the railroads stand a share of the cost, and the railroads pleaded poverty. Red tape over condemnation proceedings presented itself. Little was done. Now, spurred by the loss of 14 young lives on the doorstep of Washington, Mr. Roosevelt has taken the matter in hand and action is promised.

It may slow down the safety pin census. Even the eurythmic relief dancers may have to go to work on grade crossings. But, as they used to say when the draft yanked the office clerks into the Army, the outdoor activity will improve their physique. The difficulty has been that it is hard to interest a long-range planner in something right at hand that may save lives now.

The Senate is about to create another standing committee, the first new one since 1921. The Rules Committee has decided to recommend that a committee be set up to deal with civil aviation. Senators have been having trouble agreeing upon a name. McCarran, who doesn't mind a little redundancy now and then, suggested it be called "The Committee on Aeronautics and Aviation." McAdoo, the flying Senator, wanted to call it the "Committee on Aeronautics, Aviation and Radio." Wheeler, whose Interstate Commerce Committee handles radio legislation, objected. Army and Navy officers objected to including military aviation. So it probably will be the "Committee on Air Commerce and Civil Aviation."

The last standing committee to be created was on expenditures in 1921, the only one added since the war. In 1913 the Banking and Currency Committee was created.

Non-Aggression Pact Of 6 Powers Rumored

Paris, April 12 (AP).—Reliable sources said tonight a special conference of delegates from Austria, Germany, Italy, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia likely would be called shortly to discuss a non-aggression pact "with assurances."

The three powers at Stresa, these sources asserted, agreed on the necessity of pushing a non-aggression pact, including Austria and all her neighbors and guaranteeing Austria's independence.

A resolution to be presented for adoption by the League of Nations council, it was said, will provide for the creation of a "committee of three" to determine proper methods of preventing future violation of treaties by one country.

Economic sanctions, as provided in the league covenant at present only in case of war, likely would be extended in the case of treaty violations.

Roosevelt Asks Hill to Spare His Social Bill

Request Sent to Congress to Retain Principal Features of Plan.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Retention of the outstanding provisions of the Administration's social security bill has been urged on Congress by President Roosevelt.

The President yesterday outlined his views on the measure to reporters as Representative Sam B. Hill, a ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, told the House the bill would do away with tax-exempt bonds.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized his opposition to proposals that Uncle Sam shoulder all of the burden of old age pensions for the needy instead of splitting the cost with the States.

There is no reason, the President added, to release from their obligations the 28 States which have seen fit to enact old age pension laws.

President Shuns Patronage.

To free the States from all responsibility for helping the needy aged, Mr. Roosevelt argued, also would have the undesirable result of creating a vast army of Federal political appointees to administer the fund.

The President was vigorous in his defense of the bill's provisions for unemployment insurance, which have been assailed on Capital Hill because of a proposed tax on employers to finance that phase of the program.

Unemployment insurance and old age pensions, he said, go hand in hand and together would ultimately answer the problem of balancing the budget. As his reasons for that conclusion, he said:

1. Old age pensions would remove from the relief rolls all persons over 65.

2. Unemployment insurance would keep large numbers of others off relief by acting as a cushion to bolster purchasing power.

Mr. Roosevelt summarized his views on the bill when asked to reveal what he told Speaker Byrns and Chairman Doughton, House Ways and Means Committee, at a conference on his return from Florida.

Hill drew loud applause when he defended provisions for a system of supplemental compulsory old-age pensions, to be financed by pay roll taxes on employers and employes ultimately totaling 6 per cent.

"This title," he said, "is the most important thing in this bill. When you strike at this title you strike at the keystone of the arch of he social security program."

The provision in question, Hill declared, would authorize creation of a revolving fund likely to contain $32,000,000 by 1970.

Hill said the revolving fund could be used to finance Government borrowing and permit retirement of all outstanding Federal bonds, exempt from taxation.

"This would force that money into channels of business where it would be subject to income taxes," he said. "People who now have money in those tax-exempt bonds would not be so fortunate."

Townsend Champion Speaks.

Representative McGroarty (Democrat), of California, champion of the $200-a-month Townsend pension plan expected to be offered as a substitute for the Administration bill, entered the debate for the first time.

"How can we study this important bill in 20 hours?" he asked Hill. "The time is too short for my little brain. Would you ask me to vote for it without understanding it?"

"The gentleman is too modest," Hill responded.

Representative Treadway, Massachusetts, led a Republican assault on the measure, which he lambasted as a "lemon." He said the Democrats in their majority committee report intentionally failed to show any connection between old-age annuity taxes and benefits.

"They purposely omitted any reference to the connection between the two," he charged, "because they wanted to try to delude the Supreme Court. Personally, I think this attempt to delude the Supreme Court is rather childish."

Senate Approves Home Loan Boost

Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, radically changing the Home Owners Loan Corporation's regional office set-up.

The Bankhead amendment would have relieved the 11 regional offices of loan collecting and servicing activities, transferring these functions to State offices within 60 days.

Opposing the amendment, Senator Robert Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, in charge of the bill, claimed it would further centralize control in Washington, and promoted inefficiency. The proposal was beaten, 49 to 28.

The Senate also eliminated a House provision stipulating that regional office employes be residents of the section in which the office is located.

Other changes in the present HOLC and housing acts are designed to promote sound home mortgage lending, by purchase of shares in Federal savings and loan associations and in State-chartered home financing institutions.

The bill would reduce the required capital of national mortgage associations from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000, in order to encourage their formation.

By reducing the cost of insuring the accounts of savers and investors in Federal savings and loan associations and State-chartered building and loan associations, the bill seeks to increase their use, stimulate confidence in home-financing institutions and permit them to lend money in greater volume and at lower rates over longer terms.

District Sues Four To Force Tax Issue

In an effort to compel filing of personal property returns so District taxes can be levied, the Municipal government yesterday asked District Supreme Court to direct two men, a woman and an insurance company to file statements at the District Building.

Utility Stocks Pegging Denied By Morgenthau

Spikes Rumor Stabilization Fund Has Been Used to Fix Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday scotched rumors widely circulated in the Capital that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 currency stabilization fund has been used to peg utility security prices.

In a one-minute telephone conversation with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, the Treasury head flatly denied that the fund had been used for that purpose.

"I just talked with the Secretary of the Treasury," Rayburn said as the committee reassembled for the afternoon hearing on the utility holding company bill. "He said if he had done this it would have been a violation of the law—and of course he didn't do it."

Replies to Attack.

The question came up at the morning session when Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, asked Solicitor Dozier Devane of the Federal Power Commission if there was any truth to the rumor about the use of the stabilization fund. Devane said he knew nothing of it, and Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, suggested it would be a violation of the law.

Rayburn shortly thereafter reached the Treasury chief by telephone. His report of the denial was received without comment by the committee.

At the request of Rayburn, Devane presented counter arguments to charges of utilities spokesmen that their stocks had been depressed because of the Roosevelt utility policy and the bill to abolish holding companies in 1940. He unfolded detailed charts designed to show that the utilities securities toboggan was in February, 1933, before President Roosevelt took office.

Rayburn's Statement.

Replying painstakingly to point after point made against the bill, Devane testified the securities of the 25 principal utility holding companies had a total market value of $19,245,257,757 at the 1929 high sale point, only $2,879,034,949 bid price on February 28, 1933, but a $2,285,015,979 closing price April 9, this year. At the same time, ten principal independent operating companies' securities dropped from $3,880,067,352 in 1929 to $1,298,846,243 on the 1933 date and to $1,275,807,806 this week, he said.

Rayburn, in his second formal statement since the hearings opened, emphasized there was shown a shrinkage of more than $16,000,000,000, or 85 per cent in the value of the 25 companies' securities "before Franklin D. Roosevelt became President."

President May Visit Texas This Summer

President Roosevelt yesterday revealed the hope that he can visit Texas, home of Vice President Garner, this summer.

He remarked that the Vice President consistently refuses to come to Washington between sessions of Congress. Therefore, the President said he supposes he will have to visit Mr. Garner on his home grounds.

Presumably, Mr. Roosevelt is figuring on passing through Texas on the way to California, since he has tentatively accepted an invitation to attend the San Diego Exposition in that State.

Husband Divorced From Mary Astor

'Ideal' Marriage Ended by Slurs on His Income.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 12.—Slender Mary Astor's marriage of nearly five years to Dr. Franklin Thorpe ended in divorce today at a five-minute court hearing in which the film actress was accused by her physician-husband of referring humiliatingly before friends to his smaller earning power.

"I have a good—I'd say a lucrative practice," Dr. Thorpe testified in obtaining the interlocutory decree, "but compared to an actress' salary, well, of course—"

Miss Astor did not appear to contest the suit.

Dr. Thorpe said they were married in Yuma, Ariz., June 29, 1931, and separated March 25, 1935.

He said the actress had agreed he should have the custody of their 3-year-old daughter, Marilyn.

Saddened Williamsport Prepares to Bury Bus Crash Dead

Villagers Plan Funeral Rites For Crash Dead

Bodies of 14 Pupils to Lie in High School at Williamsport.

alike roam aimlessly about the village, dry-eyed and apparently unable to accept the tragedy as true. Youngsters, their faces a study in sorrow and apprehension, seem not to realize that 14 of their playmates and neighbors are gone.

Today, at school time, as the town rang with unverified reports of the crash, these same youngsters gathered for classes. They were met at the school by nerve-wracked teachers. They were told to return home—there would be no school.

Atop the building, a flag limp in the endless downpour of rain, fluttered at half-staff.

Parents Await Dead.

Business ceased. Many stores were closed. The tannery, Williamsport's main industrial center, operated with a small staff. Among its employes were fathers of those who lay in the town's only funeral parlor.

Totaling less than 1,500, the villagers, without saying so, held a day of mourning.

Last night was raw and cold. A fine drizzle swept the streets. A few lights burned while worried parents waited at windows for sounds of the school bus returning with their children from an excursion to the University of Maryland at College Park.

Dr. I. M. Zimmerman, prominent physician, sat in his office with Mayor Richard Hawken. The telephone rang.

The voice of Miss Louise Funk, high school chemistry teacher in charge of the outing, announced the accident.

Mayor Delivered Sad News.

Dr. Zimmerman left immediately for Rockville. Mayor Hawken organized groups of men to notify waiting parents. Within a few minutes additional lights began to appear in the village. Anxious relatives appeared on the streets in incomplete attire.

Hysterical voice aroused remaining sleepers. Soon convoys of automobiles sped from town toward Rockville.

Frantic womenfolk — mothers, sisters and friends of students aboard the doomed bus, gathered in the town square. They were joined by others. Soon there were hundreds.

Then came word that 11 children were dead. Early reports did not include a list of injured and rumors were circulated that all had been killed.

Hysteria and weeping added to the confusion. Residents of neighboring towns began to arrive. Suddenly a bus appeared at the square.

On its sides were the words, "School Bus." Hopes rose, only to be shattered.

This bus was from Rockville, bringing those who escaped with minor injuries. Reunions were pathetic because families whose children did not return on the bus stood and looked.

Wait Through Night.

Throughout the night the town kept its vigil, hoping, praying. This morning final identifications came. The sorrowful task of preparing for the burial of 14 children was begun.

In the three-story new brick schoolhouse, where a happy party of young folks gathered yesterday to start on their excursion, the 14 bodies will lie for final tributes Monday. The dead are Pearl Emmerson, Norris Downs, Claude Myers, Paul McElroy, Virginia Myers, Mary A. Downs, Margaret Eva Zimmerman, Carl Brindle, Lois Winters, Bertha Castle, Phebe Kelley, James Eluria, Elva Harsh and Leroy Kendle.

All were members of the high school chemistry class. The youngest was 14 and the oldest 18. They each contributed $1 toward the trip to Maryland University and it was to become a biennial affair. There, yesterday, they saw chemistry exhibits and demonstrations.

Moves Seat, Saves Life.

Those who escaped hurts are recovering from shock. In Washington hospitals are Jane Staley and Margaret Kreps. The former suffered a fractured arm and the latter internal injuries.

Miss Staley escaped probable death by moving her seat a few moments before the crash.

Many eyewitness stories were related. A vivid description was given by Dwight Fearnow, a survivor.

"I was sitting in the third seat behind the driver," he related. "A few minutes after we started home we were singing class songs. I guess most everybody got sort of sleepy as the ride continued and just before the crash it was very quiet. I was looking over the driver's shoulder and saw the tracks.

Says No Whistle Sounded.

"I did not hear a warning bell or whistle. The first thing I knew, a blinding light struck my eyes.

"The driver apparently saw it, too, and stepped on the gas. Then came the impact. I was thrown through a portion of the bus which was torn away, and found myself lying against a dirt bank.

"Others were lying all around. Most of them were terribly mangled and some were crying. I finally got to my feet and pulled several girls from the wreckage. Some of them didn't have on any shoes and their dresses were torn almost off."

Mayor Hawken and B. J. Grimes, superintendent of schools, officially offered the town's and school's sympathy to grieving parents.

Groups Would Dig Graves

Three groups have offered to dig the fourteen graves for the victims of the crash. They include the county relief administration, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and the Washington county board of education, according to Mrs. Margaret Lewis, field representative of the Red Cross. Mrs. Lewis said that officials of the railroad told her they would make the offer to the parents of the dead children.

Mrs. Lewis came here today to offer the services of the county chapter of the Red Cross to the bereaved families. She will stay here tonight and tomorrow. She was also at the scene of the crash last night.

The bus in which the children were riding was owned by a Hagerstown garage and chartered to the Washington county board of education. It carries liability of $50,000, protecting the school board from suits up to that amount. The maximum amount of insurance for each person injured is $5,000 under the terms of the policy.

The accident with the train has stirred heated sentiment in Williamsport against grade crossings in the county. Parents of the children and others point out that had the bus escaped at Rockville, it would still have had to cross three more grade crossings before reaching Williamsport.

The state has ample funds, derived from a portion of the gas tax, to pay a part of the cost of eliminating such crossings. In the past few years, however, the railroads have not been able to pay their share. The State has a standing offer to pay half the cost of building underpasses or overpasses.

Anti-Fascists Sentenced.

Rome, April 12 (AP).—Seven anti-Fascists were sentenced to prison for from 2 to 4 years each today by a special tribunal for the defense of the state sitting at Trieste.

Throng Views Bus on Which 14 Rode to Death

Post Staff Photo.

Here is part of the throng of curious gathered yesterday about the shattered Williamsport High School bus, in which 14 students died when it was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train at Rockville, Md.

list of the children who had made the trip.

Eyes dry, she moved among them with cheering words, calming them as they sat in silent groups. She would pause now and then to answer questions from the bewildered children.

Against the names of those who were dead she wrote the single word, "Absent." Against the names of those who were spared she put a check mark and the word—"Here."

Returns to School.

Descendant of farmers who in 1752 received a grant of land near what is now known as Funkstown, Md., this gentle teacher never cracked or appeared weary. All day her whole interest was to return to Williamsport, not to sleep, but to succor the parents of her school children. Her father, who once taught school himself, but who now runs a farm near Hagerstown, came early to Rockville to lend support.

Finally, there being nothing more for her to do in Rockville, she left with her old friend, Dr. L. B. Broughton, who had lectured on the mysteries of chemistry to her children the night before, and G. F. Pollock, alumni secretary of the University of Maryland, and went home.

"I am going to the school," she said, simply, "to make myself available to any parents who may want to talk to me about what happened."

Roosevelt Urges Gates.

In the Senate, on Capitol Hill, by a strange coincidence, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee favorably reported out a bill which would give the Interstate Commerce Commission Federal control over all lines with buses for hire.

President Roosevelt said at the White House that the accident was illustrative of the need throughout the Nation for grade-crossing elimination. In the first place, he commented, public buses should not be allowed to use side roads. The road, however, where the accident occurred is one of the most heavily traveled in the Rockville area.

Railroads, too, said the President, should not depend upon whistles or gongs to sound warning of trains to autoists. They should be required to have gates in operation at all times. He then discussed his plan to eliminate grade crossings, a project he hopes to accomplish within a year.

The accident, as nearly as could be determined, happened at 11:26 o'clock Thursday night. Driver Line, it was established through Miss Funk, who was on the front seat with him, had but a few minutes before wiped his windshield which a mechanical wiper was slowly sweeping. To do this he had slowed down but had not stopped.

He was traveling at a medium rate of speed when the car of Edward L. Stevens, Rockville golf professional at the Manor Club, passed him. Stevens, probably the only actual eyewitness to the accident and first to arrive on the scene, told a Post reporter that he had cleared the track just before the crash.

States He Heard Train.

He said he had heard, but not seen, the train, or at least had heard the warning bell, but had crossed anyway. He was on the track when he heard the bell. Immediately when he heard the terrific crash he pulled his car to a sudden stop.

He was out of his car, he said, hurriedly, and had to wait for the train to pass before he could see what had happened. The train must have been going at least 60 miles an hour at the time, he said.

He had seen the bus; he expected the crash; but the sight that met his eyes was almost overwhelming. As he raced to the bus, Miss Funk got out and began pulling victims from the twisted wreckage. Line was still sitting at the wheel. He was dazed.

Fire Truck Arrives.

Stevens said he helped Driver Line out. He was all but unconscious. Seeing that he was alive, Stevens turned to the others. Nearby residents came running up. Someone, probably the driver of a laundry truck, sounded an alarm. In six minutes a fire truck was on the scene.

Two priests, the Rev. Charles O'Hara, convalescent pastor of St. Mary's Church nearby, and his friend and visitor, the Rev. Cecil J. McNeal, of Catholic University, appeared, it seemed miraculously. Miss Funk was passing from one victim to another, feeling their pulses.

Rockville's citizenry praised highly the work of the two priests who gave absolution to all who lay there dying, regardless of their faith.

Stevens, the priests, neighbors, the bus driver all worked in the darkness and mist getting the bodies out.

Dr. William S. Murphy, nearby resident, was driving in Rockville with his wife. He heard of the accident and was the first doctor on the scene. Mrs. Murphy was a registered nurse at Georgetown Hospital before her marriage. The two of them went professionally, calmly to work.

Bodies Strewn on Cemetery.

They helped in the gruesome task of separating the dead from the living. From the mass of cut, bruised bodies they selected two to send to Georgetown Hospital on the fire truck. They worked all night, and until dawning, on the injured, rendering first aid.

The bodies were strewn all up and down the embankment near St. Mary's churchyard cemetery. When some semblance of order had been restored, the teacher, Miss Funk, telephoned Dr. Ira M. Zimmerman at Williamsport. His daughter, 16 years old, Margaret, lay dead in the Rockville morgue.

The country doctor silently left his home, drove through the night that had dealth death to his daughter, reached Rockville early. He had been given by telephone the list of those known to be dead.

He walked into that morgue and saw his daughter lying there. Bareheaded he looked at her. Briefly tears streamed from his eyes. He turned to Mrs. W. Reuben Pumphry, wife of the undertaker, for a moment silent.

Brought Them Into World.

"Do you know all of these children?" he asked. Most of them had not then been identified.

"No," she said, "can you help us?"

The country doctor choking back his own sadness, said:

"Well, I brought most of them into the world. I guess I can identify them."

His was a task that would have tried any man. He assembled and smoothed the mangled bodies, fixing features so that parents would be less stricken when they gazed at their children lying there.

And things were not so bad as they might otherwise have been when parents began coming in from Williamsport, but still there was grief enough and sights that many a father and mother and uncle and aunt will never forget.

Fail to Recognize Girl.

Bertha Jane Castle, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Castle, was one of the last to be named. The crash had disfigured her beyond immediate recognition even by her own parents.

At Williamsport Paul McElroy's father and mother, William and Alice McElroy, were so overcome that they could not leave their home. It fell to an aunt to make the fearful journey from the home to the morgue and say it was her nephew lying there.

To a 70-year-old man fell the lot of naming his granddaughter, pretty 17-year-old Elva Harsh.

The impact of the crash was so great, witnesses said, that clothing was strewn about and had to be collected and sorted.

In Washington, representatives of the Keystone Automobile and the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club issued harsh condemnations of the grade crossing, which, it was found, is among 11 recommended for elimination in a bill pending before the Maryland State Legislature.

The crossing has long been known as a dangerous one on the main highway between Baltimore and Rockville and agitation for its elimination is nothing new. There was no watchman at the crossing, his time of duty having ended an hour and a half before the crash.

A formal inquest will be held into the crash at the office of the Rockville coroner, probably on Tuesday.

Railway Denies Blame.

C. W. Galloway, vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio, issued the following statement:

"The crossing is protected by standard signals and by warning bells which, we definitely know, were operating at the time of the accident.

"There are no buildings close to the crossing which would obstruct the vision of the driver, and the crossing is well lighted.

"Three outside witnesses have stated that the engine whistle was blown approaching the crossing."

Other witnesses, said, however, that the whistle invariably is sounded so close to the crossing that it is not adequate warning.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, acting under authority of the laws of 1910, had three men on the scene today. They are required to report fully on the accident and make recommendations concerning it, but they do not seek to place criminal blame.

The commission report will not be finished until after all other hearings and inquests are held.

Out of the tragedy came the revelation of romance as contrast to the grim and gruesome details. It was learned that Jane Staley, 17-year-old school girl, had secretly been married to Edward Murray. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Staley, Ned visited his bride, who lay in a cot at Georgetown Hospital with a broken arm. Beside her, and perhaps dying, lay her companion, Margaret Krebs.

Reassures Mother.

Jane greeted her young husband, who rushed to the hospital with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Staley. She and Ned had tried to keep the romance secret until the end of the school year.

It was the merest chance that saved the bride's life. She smilingly told reporters that just before the crash she had moved from the rear of the bus to change seats with one of the boys sitting up front. "At first I wasn't going to let him," she said.

She said she remembered little of the tragedy beside hearing Miss Funk say, "Oh, my God."

The Kreps girl was asleep when the crash came. Her first words after regaining consciousness were words of reassurance to her mother, who was sitting next the bed.

"Don't worry," she said, "I'll be all right."

Her name last night was on the danger list and doctors were not sure whether she would live.

Senate Reports Bill to Control Motor Carriers

Roosevelt Plans Outdone in Giving Authority to I. C. C.

By Robert C. Albright.

The entering wedge for a coordinated program of legislation touching all forms of transportation and vesting sweeping new powers in the Interstate Commerce Commission was struck yesterday in the Senate, where leaders gave right of way to the Administration's bus control bill.

Federal supervision of all for-hire motor transportation, with additional authority for the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate maximum hours of employes and safety requirements for equipment, was proposed in a favorable report filed by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson said the Senate next week will call up the bill which for the first time may subject common and contract motor carriers to the same type of rate and route regulation now imposed on their chief competitors—the railroads.

Road Situation "Chaotic."

"The competitive struggle," the Senate committee reported, "is to a large extent unequal and unfair, inasmuch as the railroads are comprehensively regulated, the water carriers are regulated in lesser degree, and the interstate motor carriers are scarcely regulated at all."

Administration bills for Federal control of water carriers and railroad reorganization still are tied up in committee. A sharp fight on the water carrier measure may thwart its passage this session, but leaders forecast early approval of the bus regulation bill.

Extraordinary growth of competitive highway transportation, spanning thousands of miles of hard-surfaced roads, has developed a condition which the Senate committee says is "chaotic" and "jeopardizes the maintenance of transportation facilities and service appropriate to the needs of commerce and required in the public interest."

Original Bill Outdone.

The measure reported by the committee provides intensive regulation of common motor carriers, less extensive control of trucks hired by contract, and no regulation of private motor carriers, except discretionary power for the commission to pass on qualifications and hours of employes and safety of equipment.

Interstate bus and truck common carriers would have to obtain certificates of public convenience from the I. C. C. Contract operators would be required to obtain permits and brokers dealing in transportation services, but not employed by any operating company, would be licensed. Rates would be regulated.

The measure goes further than the original Administration bill. As first introduced it provided for investigation and report on the need for Federal regulation of qualifications and maximum hours of service for all motor carrier personnel. As amended, the I. C. C. not only has authority to make the investigation, but may impose reasonable requirements without further legislation.

For more than a year motor bus and truck lines have been subject to a form of regulation under NRA codes but the Senate committee says these codes are "loose" and "admittedly inadequate to bring about necessary reforms."

Lacking motor carrier jurisdiction, the Interstate Commerce Commission already has control over steam railroads, electric railways, express companies, sleeping car companies, pipe lines and steamship lines controlled by railroads.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, who filed his committee's report, said railroads are seeking relaxation of these regulations "mainly because their competitors are unregulated."

U. S. Launches Rail Crossings Removal Drive

Between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 Will Be Spent in Year.

first obtaining the rights of way for grade crossings before coming to Washington with their plans, the President reiterated his intention to spend such part of the works fund as he does used on projects which can be completed by July 1, 1936.

No Cost to Railroads

He added that there will be no cost to the railroads—thus removing at one stroke a bone of contention which some have argued is largely responsible for the Nation's small progress in constructing safe crossings in the past.

In most cases, the States themselves will do the actual work on grade crossings, Mr. Roosevelt said, but where States have no proper agency to take charge the Federal Government will do the job. He pointed out that the development of fast, stream-lined trains, raising speeds from 45 and 50 to 70 and 80 miles an hour, makes doubly important the elimination of crossing hazards.

The unusual advantages of grade-crossing elimination in providing small, widely distributed projects within easy reach of centers of unemployment have long been recognized among Administration leaders. Surveys have shown that hundreds of millions could be spent in this manner. Mr. Roosevelt said, however, that the general expectation is for an expenditure of between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 the first year.

Mr. MacDonald said that the Bureau of Public Roads already has on hand plans for the construction of a large number of such underground or overhead crossings. More than 500 dangerous crossings have been eliminated, or are in process of removal, he said, since July, 1933.

An even larger number of train-crossing hazards have been eliminated by the relocation of highways, he added, since it is estimated that for every crossing made safe by construction work two are removed by straightening roads. Nevertheless, at least $30,000,000 of the $600,000,000 which the Bureau of Public Roads has been given to distribute to States during this Administration has gone into structural work at crossings, he figured.

Interest Cut Due.

The number of grade crossings showed a drop in 1933 for the first time since the development of railroads—a drop largely due to the abandonment of trackage. In the same year the American Engineering Council suggested early elimination of some 5,000 crossings at an estimated cost of $500,000,000.

"It has been variously estimated," according to the recent report of the National Resources Board, "that further elimination to the amount of $12,000,000,000 would be justified."

As he explored this and other possibilities of the works program, Mr. Roosevelt let drop a remark of encouragement to the cities which owe money to the PWA. Now that the Federal Administration can borrow money at less than 3 per cent, he commented, it would be a safe guess that the present 4 per cent rate charged municipalities will be lowered.

With Director Robert C. Fechner, of the CCC, the President went over plans for enlarging the CCC to 600,000 foresters, and with Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell he discussed rural aspects of the works program. Mr. Fechner brought word that approximately 1,500 new camps can be constructed and 300,000 new men enlisted within two months' time.

Alyce Can't Go to See Circus, Says Surgeon

Fall River, Mass., April 12 (U.P.).—Alyce Jane McHenry, who sang "Man on the Flying Trapeze" as a sort of theme song for her upside-down stomach operation, can't go to New York to see the circus.

Hardly had the 10-year-old Omaha girl told of her longing to see "a real three-ring circus in New York" when she received an invitation, good anytime in the next three weeks. But tonight Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, who righted Alyce's "tummy," said it was "out of the question."

Jimmy Neilson, 13-year-old San Jose, Calif., boy who had his upsidedown stomach righted last Saturday, today had a second "needle operation" to drain fluid from the chest cavity.

Tomorrow Dr. Truesdale is scheduled to perform another upside-down stomach operation—his twenty-seventh—on 9-year-old William Spiegleblatt, son of a Newport, R. I., baker.

Pope Expects to Live Until 1950, at Least

Vatican City, April 12 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XI expects to live until 1950, at least, and proclaim another jubilee year when he is 93, he revealed today. The holy father was urged to name new cardinals to fill 15 vacancies, but smilingly replied:

"There is no haste to prepare for our successor."

Explaining, the pontiff said he recently was informed that a seer had predicted he would live at least another 15 years.

Berlin Agrees To Join Accord; War Fear Dims

Stresa Parley Jubilant as Hitler Clears Way for Peace.

stand, Von Neurath explained that the Reich had not changed her view, but she was prepared to become a party to a pact of non-aggression even though other powers wished to supplement it by an agreement for mutual assistance.

If there was to be a supplementary pact, the German foreign ministry added, the agreement should not be in one document but in two.

Air Pact Delayed.

Discussions concerning Austria the British termed "satisfactory" since, they emphasized, Germany would be asked for further information. They said they understood Hitler was prepared to consider a Danubian pact if satisfactory explanations are given him.

As to the proposed western air pact, it was explained that this involves difficulties for England and Italy. A spokesman said:

"The question at issue is how we shall devise an air pact which shall not differ much from the land Locarno pact."

France and Italy, it was learned, today entered the final phases of a security pact between themselves, one of the principal points of which was a guarantee of Austrian independence.

This pact is to create a Latin bloc which in turn would invite Great Britain to conclude a treaty of friendship and consultation—but not a treaty of alliance—with it. The pact is to include, strengthen and enlarge the accord concluded at Rome January 7.

The conferences will reassemble at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Where differences of opinion yesterday threatened chances for agreement, things smoothed out quickly today as the negotiators, preliminary exploration work done, got down to business.

Tonight Mussolini entertained the visiting premiers, with their assistants, at dinner in the Hotel Borromeo.

A French spokesman, discussing the tri-power agreement on the course to be followed at Geneva, said it covered "measures" to be applied against any power violating treaties in the future.

It was understood the "measures" are mainly economic, such as refusal to supply treaty violators with raw materials, particularly those intended for war industries.

Circles close to the conferees reported Premier Flandin wanted to insert sanctions in the league covenant itself, while Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain opposed them.

Proposed Sanctions.

Such sanctions, it was assumed, would obligate league members, in case one member attacks another, to refuse all economic and financial assistance to the aggressor and finally lend military aid to the country attacked.

The covenant as it now stands provides merely for economic and financial action in case of aggression and says the league council may invite members to put military provisions into execution.

If the "measures" against treaty violations to be discussed at Geneva imply penalties, this would indicate necessity for revision of the covenant, which contains no provision for sanctions against treaty violators.

Reform of the covenant, in the opinion of some Stresa circles, might mean another big peace conference. As efforts presumably would be made to bring the Kellogg pact outlawing war into harmony with the league covenant, some officials foresee intense American interest in any scheme to restrain treaty violations.

German Invitation To Laval Reported

By the United Press.

Stresa, April 12.—French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval was reported tonight to have been invited by Germany to visit Berlin on his way to or from Moscow late this month.

Also, if Poland hesitates to follow Germany into the projected eastern European pact, Laval will stop off at Warsaw on returning from Moscow.

The French delegation said there had been no official suggestion for Laval to visit Berlin. However, it was believed Berlin's willingness now to enter the eastern pact will result in this added gesture of good will between these two chief antagonists on the continent.

More Land Wanted For National Park

Wider Boundaries Sought in Shenandoah Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., April 12.—A new undertaking, designated as Shenandoah National Park recreational demonstration project, Virginia R-4, for the purpose of acquiring land for straightening out the boundaries of the park, has been established with headquarters here, it was learned today.

Options are being taken on property under authorization of the Land Program Division of the FERA and the Submarginal Land Division of the Interior Department. Acquisition of about 15 blocks of from 20 to 30 tracts each inside the original or "Cammerer" boundary, but outside the condemned "Kelsey" boundary, is contemplated. Funds are expected to be supplied by the Submarginal Division.

Families now occupying land on which the option is exercised will be resettled in subsistence homestead communities or be cared for by the rural rehabilitation program.

Electrician Halts Fire at Eastern

Overcomes Film Blaze at School Single-Handed.

An electrician single-handed halted a fire in the projection room of the Eastern High School assembly hall yesterday afternoon. The 2,000 students in the hall never knew there was a fire.

Flames suddenly shot up at about 3:30 p. m. while a film, "The Cyclone Kid," was being shown. A roll of film caught fire, probably from overheating, the electrician, Louis E. Nix, 33, of 1312 Maryland avenue northeast, said later.

Several students were with him. Nix grabbed the burning roll with his hands, swept it away from other inflammable films nearby, and sought to smother the fire on the floor. Flames seared his face and hands, but he got the blaze out before firemen arrived. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Germans Base Peace Gesture On Four Points

Will Sign Accords Without Clauses for Mutual Assistance.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 12.—Adolf Hitler today reassured Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, that he stands by his offer to sign bilateral non-aggression pacts without mutual assistance provisions.

That was the promise he made Simon, now at the tri-power conference at Stresa, during their recent conversations here, and that promise Simon carried to Stresa in the German memorandum summing up the conversations.

While German officials expressed surprise at reports from Stresa that the Reich had offered something new to help the conference reach an agreement, it was disclosed that Simon through British Charge d'Affaires D. C. Newton, today asked Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath to confirm what Hitler told him. Von Neurath complied.

Hitler's Peace Offers.

This was, in brief:

1. That Germany would sign bilateral pacts agreeing not to aid an aggressor in any way, whether economically, financially, militarily or otherwise.
2. That Germany would not accept mutual assistance provisions.
3. That what other powers put into their bilattral non-aggression pacts was not Germany's affair.
4. That all these bilateral pacts could be assimilated into one general pact.

The effect of this, German officials said, would be that other powers could have their mutual assistance if they wanted it, but none of Germany's pacts would obligate her to use her men, airplanes and guns to help anyone in trouble.

It also would obviate other powers' passing over German territory en route to answer an SOS call. This is the German substitute for proposed Eastern pacts.

View on General Pacts.

That Germany should agree to negotiate bilateral pacts without the mutual assistance clause even though other powers included it among themselves was described as quite "logical" for, it was stated, "in the making of bilateral pacts outside countries can not dictate what those treaties shall contain."

"The general pacts envisaged here," it was further explained, "are merely collections of small units alike in general but with some differing stipulations."

A government spokesman said, "We now expect a document of some sort to issue from Stresa instead of just a communique, but we are waiting to see what that document is."

Optimism was lacking in official quarters. One spokesman said it was like pulling teeth "for some countries to relinquish privileges they acquired 15 years ago."

"But no progress can be made," he continued, "until discrimination against Germany has been abandoned in the interest of a peaceful Europe."

The German press attacked Premier Mussolini of Italy sharply for his anti-German attitude, the old Nazi organ Reichswart suggesting that the Vatican is behind Il Duce.

Banker Loses Prison Appeal.

Topeka, Kans., April 12 (AP).—The State Supreme Court ruled today that Warren W. Finney, 61-year-old Emporia capitalist, must go to prison for embezzlement, joining there his son and a former State treasurer who figured in a million-dollar bogus bond scandal. He was convicted of embezzling approximately $65,000 from his now closed Emporia bank.

Austrian Draft Plans Glorify Hapsburg Rule

Proposal for Pre-War Army Linked With Praise of Franz Josef.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, April 12.—Austria today linked preliminary preparations to restore the pre-war system of universal military service with praise of the pre-war monarchy under Emperor Franz Josef.

Revealing that the recent decision to increase the army, limited to 30,000 men under the Treaty of St. Germain, would involve restoration of universal conscription, the government announced public attention simultaneously would be directed to the greatness and glory of the ousted monarchy.

Col. Walter Adam, the government's chief of propaganda, explained that actual renewal of compulsory military service would await the confidently expected granting of arms equality rights to Austria.

Meanwhile details of reorganization of the army are being worked out.

"Barracks, uniforms and equipment must be ready," Col. Adam said, "before the change is actually put into effect—and that's likely to take considerable time."

The propaganda head also announced that an internal loan, probably of 100,000,000 schillings (the schilling is currently quoted at about 18.79 United States cents), would be floated soon for the creation of jobs for unemployed.

In connection with the army, Col. Adam said:

"It is illogical to describe a big army as oppressive, unproductive and a burden on the taxpayer.

"Practically all the money spent in equipping an enlarged army with uniforms and so forth will flow directly into the coffers of industry and stimulate employment."

Army reorganization, involving the construction of new barracks, will employ some 35,000 men, it has been estimated.

Memories of the Hapsburg dynasty, whose youthful aspirant to Austria's throne is Archduke Otto, will be kept in the forefront of the public mind through the Franz Josef Exhibition, to be held from May to October.

The resources of all the State museums, theaters, opera houses and the like will be used in this campaign to glorify the late emperor, outstanding representative of the Hapsburg dynasty.

Rubber Chiefs Submit a Plan To Avoid Strike

Miss Perkins Hopeful That Akron Unions Will Not Walk Out.

By the Associated Press.

Z After a day of negotiations with employers and employes, Secretary Perkins expressed new optimism last night over the possibility of averting the threatened Akron, Ohio, rubber strike.

Executives of the Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone tire and rubber companies submitted to the Secretary a proposal for avoiding the walkout which Miss Perkins later last night was to turn over to Coleman Claherty, American Federation of Labor organizer, in Akron.

Claherty, in turn, was to submit the proposal to presidents of the three Akron units of the federation's rubber division.

Miss Perkins had two long conferences yesterday with the manufacturers, and another with Claherty. Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary, also conferred with Claherty.

The nature of the manufacturers' proposal was not disclosed.

President Roosevelt at his press conference said Secretary Perkins had reported progress in her efforts, but did not amlify on prospects for a final settlement.

Miss Perkins herself told newspepermen that the outlook was not as dark as it was last night after her first conference with the manufacturers.

Whether President Roosevelt would take a hand in the negotiations remained a subject for speculation among observers here. His eagerness to maintain the truce that has generally prevailed since last fall was shown, however, by the close touch he kept on the parleys through Miss Perkins.

Monday Walkout Rumored.

The refusal of the Goodrich and Firestone companies to allow the labor relations board to hold employes' elections in their factories are the fundamental strike issues.

After the board ordered the election, those companies held them up by asking the Circuit Court of Appeals to review the board's orders. The Goodyear Co. also is involved in the strike threat proceedings.

Department officials said yesterday they understood the strike was set for Monday. Neither Coleman Claherty, federation organizer in Akron, nor Green would confirm this, however.

Miss Perkins talked with the executives for about an hour this morning. Afterward they retired from her office to an anteroom and later to their hotel to consider her proposals. They declined to discuss the situation. Later, they returned and again conferred with the Secretary.

Early in the afternoon, Miss Perkins and McGrady started negotiations with Claherty after he had held a long conference with Green. Miss Perkins left after an hour for a Cabinet meeting, but McGrady and Claherty were together throughout the afternoon.

"Not So Black."

"We had a very interesting and in some ways helpful talk," Miss Perkins said of the morning conference with the manufacturers.

"They are showing an effort to be helpful and are standing by. It does not look as black in my mind as it did last night."

In another labor case, Secretary Ickes yesterday ordered the American Petroleum Co., Houston, Tex., to recognize the National Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America as its employes' collective bargaining agents.

U. S. Action Threatened.

He approved a decision of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board declaring that if the company did not comply with the order by April 29, "the case will be referred to the proper governmental agency for further action."

This could be either the Justice Department for prosecution on charges of violating Section 7 (a) of the recovery act, or the Petroleum Administrative Board for removal of the firm's Blue Eagle.

Employe elections conducted successively by the American Petroleum Co. and the Petroleum Labor Policy Board had resulted in victory of the union over the company's employes representation plan, but the company had insisted that bargaining representatives "must be bona-fide employes."

Dust Farmers Plan to Exist On AAA Funds

Kansans Alone Will Draw $15,000,000 for Not Planting Wheat.

Greeley County, Kans., once known as "the wheat king" of his State, scoffed at those who predict the affected areas are turning slowly into a desert.

It Always Has Rained Again.

"It has been tough on all of us the last three years," he said, "but it will rain again as it has in the past.

"There will again be bountiful wheat crops and the East will be sending out photographers to take pictures of immense piles of wheat for which we have no elevator space."

R. S. Trumble, Ford County agent, declared the southwestern Kansas land has not been permanently damaged.

"It will come back," he asserted. "The farmers plan to stay and bring it back."

Millions Due in AAA Cash.

F. K. Reed, Federal crop statistician at Topeka, said western Kansas wheat farmers should receive in round numbers $15,000,000 this year in Government payments.

More millions are counted on by wheat farmers in the other affected States. Additional funds were sought to make possible a gigantic listing program, creating high furrows intended to toss the dust-laden winds upward and break them up.

The fact that the latest dust storm broke up without rain caused hardy residents to fear the choking clouds may return soon.

Dust Envelops Arizona.

Arizona, outside the hard-hit area, experienced dust today. Clouds rolled over Phoenix, which apparently came from New Mexico. Nogales, Ariz., residents clamped wet cloths over their noses.

Throughout the storm area schools reopened, stores resumed business and transportation difficulties were ironed out.

In each affected State, large areas were green and crop forecasts favorable.

In Kansas, for instance, Statistician Reed estimated that while 45 counties in the storm-drought area would produce considerably less wheat than last year, the other 60 counties would have a larger harvest.

Congressional Group Wins Promise of Aid

By the Associated Press.

Relief administration funds and labor yesterday were ordered released for dust-control projects in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator.

The order went to relief administartors in those States following conferences between Hopkins and a congressional delegation. At the same time a survey of damage caused by drought and dust in that area was projected by the Agriculture Department with a view to furthering its land-use program.

Hopkins said the relief administration would supply on application by the States 10 cents for each acre affected for tractor fuel. Previously, Kansas was allotted $250,000 for dust-control work, consisting mostly of strip plowing.

Sees Congressional Group.

The decision was made by Hopkins after conference with Representative Jones, of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; Senator Gore and Representatives Massingale, Ferguson and Johnson, all of Oklahoma; Senator Hatch and Representative Dempsey, both of New Mexico.

The survey of the dry and dust afflicted area will be conducted by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics preparatory to withdrawing arid areas of agricultural land from production. It is preliminary to conferences to be held on problems confronting people in the dust originating areas.

Vast Acreage Involved.

Plans already under consideration call for withdrawal of between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 acres now in production to use for grazing, forest plantings, recreation and wild life purposes.

Secretary Wallace said in a radio speech directed to the Izaak Walton League convention in Chicago that the dust storms are "only the most spectacular and awe-inspiring of the many significant warnings Nature is giving us" of the necessity of following a land-use program to avoid disaster.

H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Erosion Service, told the same convention "this is not a battle to be fought solely by the Government," adding that "the whole people must be aroused if we are not to lose it."

Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and administrator of the proposed land-use program, declared "it can not profit anybody if the fertile topsoil of our farm land is blown or washed away, if our mountains are denuded and if our rivers become alternate trickles and torrents."

Red Cross Offers Nurses.

Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, said Red Cross nursing service will be furnished immediately to communities where illness has resulted from dust storms.

The Washington Red Cross office is checking tonight by telephone and telegraph with relief administrators in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado to determine where nurses are needed. The Midwestern area office at St. Louis today was instructed to communicate with affected areas.

The action followed receipt of reports that nurses were needed in some areas.

Massachusetts proposed a prohibitive duty on cotton cloth equal to the cost of American production plus 10 per cent. This found favor with the congressional group and was included in the recommendations made to the President.

After he had conferred with the Governors, President Roosevelt revealed at his press conference that he had challenged their contentions as to the serious effect of Japanese importations on the industry here. He indicated that he regarded the basis of many of the textile manufacturers' complaints as propaganda.

Mr. Roosevelt said there was no doubt that cotton cloth imports from Japan had increased rapidly within the last three or four months. He pointed out these imports in December totaled about 2,200,000 square yards as compared with a previous monthly average of 500,000 square yards.

In January, he said, imports of Japanese cotton cloth totaled approximately 3,300,000 square yards, and in February 4,800,000 square yards. If the Japanese imports continued at this rate for the remainder of the year, he added, the annual total would be about 49,000,000 square yards. But that figure, he said, represented but seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the total American production for 1933.

He said if the increase in the imports from Japan continued to be accelerated with indications that the annual total might be much higher, he would cross that bridge when he came to it. He indicated, however, he saw no reason at this time for any restrictive action against Japan. Moreover he further indicated that he had not yet found merit in any of the proposals made by the textile group.

The Governor's committee laid before the President a statement contending that industrial employment in Massachusetts had dropped from 668,000 in 1923 to 399,000 in 1933; pay rolls had dropped from about $800,000,000 in 1923 to $355,000,000 in 1933, and that employment in the cotton goods industry had decreased from 114,000 in 1923 to 45,000 in 1933.

The number of spindles operating in Massachusetts 15 years ago was about 37,000,000, whereas now there are only 10,000,000 spindles in place, of which only about 6,000,000 are in active operation, the statement asserted. Massachusetts, it was contended, was an accurate reflection of what has happened in all the New England States.

Statement Is Gloomy.

"Conditions in the textile industry have grown steadily worse since 1933, except for a temporary improvement at the time of the adoption of the textile code," the statement explained, adding, "There is every indication that the cotton textile industry will cease to be a New England industry unless competition from Japanese-made goods is speedily ended and immediate adjustment is made of governmental regulation of industry."

Specific recommendations proposed by the committee were:

Adoption of a duty equivalent to the cost of American production plus 10 per cent on manufactured textiles.

A similar prohibition on all goods imported from countries that have failed to pay their war debts.

Elimination of the cotton processing tax, or its payment out of the works-relief fund or by general taxation.

O'Connell, of Rhode Island, representing the Governor of that State, and Representative William M. Citron, representing the Governor of Connecticut, met with the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

When the President left the Cabinet room for his semi-weekly press conference, the New England delegation continued their discussions with the four Cabinet officers for more than an hour. On leaving Secretary Wallace observed the group had presented "an interesting case but no solution."

Another Mill Shut In New England

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 12.—While President Roosevelt told four New England Governors that importation of Japanese cloth, if continued at the present rate for the rest of the year, would amount to less than 1 per cent of American production, the closing of another New England mill was announced tonight.

The management of the Hope mill at Scituate, R. I., announced it would close April 19 for an indefinite period. The mill employs 410 persons.

Relief Head Backs W. Virginia Work

Beehler Replies to Holt Who Is 'Disgusted.'

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., April 12.—William N. Beehler, State relief administrator, today replied to a statement by United States Senator-elect Rush D. Holt that he is "disgusted" with relief administration in West Virginia. The director said that most of the complaints are due to "lack of understanding of our policies and procedure."

Holt has said one of his first acts as Senator from West Virginia "will be to demand that the people of this State be given a better break on the relief situation."

He added that "I am disgusted that so much money has been spent through the West Virginia administration with such a little amount accomplished."

mediate future is to bring the sharpest rise that has been witnessed in business in the past quarter of a century."

The review added that the rise "will be fortified adequately to prevent the interrupting recessions which followed the spurts of the last two years," and continued:

"Potential benefits of the $5,000,000,000 appropriated by the Government have provided stimulus needed to dispel the impatience which had appeared in some branches because of the let-down in business toward the close of the first quarter.

"All of the reports received were more decisive than at any time this year in the confident attitude taken regarding a more even tempo of progress from now on.

"Encouragement also was provided by the fact that, in spite of rain, cold, snowfall and recurrent dust storms, consumer demand was sufficiently strong to carry retail distribution to a larger total than for the week preceding."

Wholesalers were rushed with reorders, the review said, and many retailers lost sales because of delays incident to the rush.

"General industry continues at the year's peak, with the gains being extended in the output of the products for national consumption," it reported.

"Industries in most parts of the country now are advancing at the most orderly pace in the last two months, as all of the strikes have been settled and threats of walkouts have been dissipated."

Better Policing Demanded for Prince Georges

Suburb Citizens Protest Crime Conditions at Public Rally.

More police for the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County were demanded by several hundred citizens of that section meeting at the Bladensburg firehouse Thursday night.

County Commissioners Vinton D. Cockey and Harry W. McNamee, who attended the meeting, were kept busy explaining why something had not been done to relieve what was termed "unbearable" conditions in this section.

Clyde Bell, of Capitol Heights, one of the speakers, described that town as "unsafe for anybody to go through." He pointed to the death last November of Bennett A. Wells, killed in a barroom fight, and the recent stabbing of another citizen in a barroom.

Crime Spectacles Related.

He told of seeing an unconscious man "being carried into some bushes by the side of the road" and of being ordered away when he attempted to investigate; of seeing a man lying unconscious in a gutter "with blood running out of his mouth and nose," and of having his auto bombarded with beer bottles.

Wilbur Eskite, Tuxedo, former deputy sheriff, reported 33 robberies in Tuxedo and 28 robberies in Cheverly since the expiration of constables' terms last December.

Commissioner Cockey said he realized a number of depredations were taking place, but said he was not ready to admit that the county is a crime center. He added he was going to do all within his power to eliminate politics from the appointment of police.

Magistrate's Chickens Stolen.

Other speakers included Jack Riggles, Seabrook; Mrs. Nina Merryman, Bladensburg; Harry Lohman, Bladensburg; Samuel Kutler, Beaver Heights; Mr. Poe, Beaver Heights, W. R. Beattie, Bladensburg; Clifford Gasch, Bladensburg; Capt. R. T. W. Duke, Bladensburg; Henry Eskite, Tuxedo; John Alsop, Bladensburg; Lewis G. Darnall, Beaver Heights; Wallace Littleford, Bladensburg; Robert Wilson, Bladensburg Junior High School principal; Louis Day, Rogers Heights, and Justice of the Peace Louis Kutch, Ardmore.

Magistrate Kutch said his section was so bothered with someone stealing chickens that he personally took the matter in hand. For two weeks he "layed out" at night to catch the thief. At the end of this time he came home one night to find his own chickens gone, he said.

The Solution

To Second Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the second thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life dramas broadcast yesterday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

"Helen!" Capt. Hardy addressed his beautiful young daughter. "Go on deck for a moment: I want to talk with Anna."

Helen obeyed. Capt. Hardy placed his hands on the shoulders of his fiancee.

"Anna, we haven't time for mush and sweet sayings. There's room in that lifeboat for only one . . . You can't see me with those tears filling your eyes . . . wipe them away . . . there. Now look at me! I'm going to put that child in that lifeboat and then I'll come back and tell you what we're going to do! While I'm gone—pray!"

Capt. Hardy picked up his daughter in his arms and ran with her to the lifeboat and placed her safely in it. Without giving Helen an opportunity to resist, he kissed her and ordered the boat lowered. One look down at it as he brushed away a truant tear. Then back to his cabin.

Anna was on her knees at the compass. Already the stern of the ship was lifted half out of the water. Out of the night came the scream of "Daddy!"

The captain went to the bridge There was but one order—"Desert ship!"

The only ones who remained aboard as the ship made its final plunge were Capt. Hardy and Anna. And—Sparks.

Do not miss the next in this gripping series, entitled "The Woman Who Cheated," Monday, at 5:30 from WJEJ.

2,000 Students Here in Strike Against War

G. W. President and Rep. Maverick Row Over Marvin's Attitude.

bombs developed on the university campus.

George Washington University students assembled on the steps near the school library and one of the class buildings shortly after 10:45 a. m. and heard addresses by representatives of peace organizations and members of the anti-strike committee as well.

Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, was to have talked to the peace advocates, as were Representatives Fred J. Sisson, of New York, and Thomas A. Amlie, of Wisconsin.

Marvin Dissuades Speakers.

A viewpoint expressed by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, in telephone conversations with the three Representatives changed their plans, and the legislators were not on the program, although Representative Amlie mingled with the crowd of students at the foot of the iron steps during the meeting as a spectator.

When he learned Representative Maverick was to speak at the meeting, Dr. Marvin informed him that the gathering was in no official way connected with the university and that he could not be accorded the courtesy and honor he deserved at the meeting.

"I could not officially receive him," Dr. Marvin said last night, "and I was unaware that he was to speak until a short time before the demonstration.

"The meeting was in no way official, and I believe the students back of it, with a few exceptions, are avowed Communists. If the students had declared themselves for peace, and against Fascism and Communism as well, I would have been the first to encourage them.

"As it is, they were protesting against war—and there is a fine line drawn there—for war is one thing and possible revolution another. The abolition of imperialistic war does not necessarily insure peace."

Representative Maverick took issue with Dr. Marvin.

Maverick Raps Marvin.

"The idea of Communism having anything to do with the antiwar demonstration is silly, and I told Dr. Marvin I had no desire to talk to him about that," stated Maverick.

"I told Dr. Marvin that if the meeting meant that students must cut classes, or in any way violated the rules of the university, I would not speak. He said this was true, and I didn't go.

"I think he has handled the entire affair in a very silly, unwise manner. I will address the students anywhere off the campus and say anything I please," added Maverick, who served overseas during the World War, and won the Silver Star and Purple Heart citations.

Substituting for the congressional speakers at George Washington were Chester Williams, former secretary of the National Student Federation of Amerca; Jesse MacKnight, of the R. O. T. C., representing the National Council for the Prevention of War; John Coggins, of the student group for Academic Freedom for Strikers and Miss Jean Scott, and C. Gurewitz, both of the National Student League.

Students Protest.

A resolution was sent Dr. Marvin, protesting his "action in denying us the privilege of hearing our scheduled speaker, Representative Maverick."

Representing the anti-strike committee were C. T. R. Bohannan, who brought with him four students in R. O. T. C. uniforms; George Parker, a premedical student, and Al Waters, who said, "we should have bigger and better wars."

At American University all classes were called off at 11 a. m. and a special assembly was held, at which Jack Hoover, president of the student council, presided.

The principal speaker was former Representative Jeanette Rankin, of Montana, now with the National Council for the Prevention of War.

"I am ashamed of my generation," declared Miss Rankin, who was the first woman member of Congress and who cast her ballot against war 18 years ago, "for we have not yet removed war from the civilized world. The task is for you, the younger generation, to do."

Howard University students left their classes at the appointed hour, and paraded with banners on the campus. Many of them heard addresses by Maurice Gates, of the League for Industrial Democracy, and Lionel Florent.

Four women and two men, representing six organizations, called at the White House yesterday morning and left a petition for President Roosevelt in the hands of Marvin McIntyre, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary.

They said they represented the National Council of Methodist Youth, the Student League for Industrial Democracy, the American Youth Congress, the National Student League, the American League Against War and Fascism and the Inter-Seminary Group.

The strike proved a boomerang at the University of Maryland. The drill period of the R. O. T. C. unit, set for the time of the strike, was better attended than ever, with few absentees reported.

A quiet demonstration was staged at Western High School, and at Roosevelt students gathered in the auditorium and held a panel discussion on peace.

Across the Nation student peace strikers marched and spoke, shivered in chilly spring rain and booed and brawled.

Chicago Students Riot.

Chicago University's peace meeting broke up in a free-for-all fight that brought police. No one was seriously injured.

An assemblage of 3,000 students at the University of Minnesota, in Minneapolis, heard Gov. Floyd Olson declare that no government has any right to force its citizens to bear arms in an aggressive war.

At Dartmouth, Ramon Guthrie, professor of French, told the students of his experiences in the World War, and branded statements of war-time posters, "Your Country Needs You," as lies.

Eight hundred Smith College girls, in Northampton, Mass., cut classes to attend an anti-war meeting.

University of Virginia students applauded Joseph B. Matthews, former editor of the New Republic, when he told them "A strike against war is a strike for culture and peace against brutality."

At the College of the City of New York a hall seating 1,500 was filled. New York University had 1,500 demonstrators. Many New York high schools had strike meetings and total attendance in the New York area was estimated at 30,000.

Vassar College for Girls attended almost en masse a program at which the president and students spoke. More than 2,500 joined a peace demonstration at Western Reserve University at Cleveland. St. Lawrence University dismissed classes to permit students to attend.

The University of Pennsylvania and Temple University dismissed classes at noon to permit perhaps 15,000 students to participate.

Two girls at Hunter College, New York, were suspended for strike organization activities, but 1,000 of the student body walked out in defiance of school authorities and met in the rain.

About 150 students at the University of Illinois at Champaign left classes. At Milwaukee, students of State Teachers College and the extension department of the University of Wisconsin formed a strike group of 2,500.

Two Girls Are Beaten.

School authorities at Los Angeles Junior College, where two girls were beaten, tried to drown out speakers in the student crowd of 1,500 by speaking through a loud-speaker system concealed on the roof of the administration building. The group was dispersed when water sprinklers were turned on.

Rain dampened the enthusiasm of 500 Yale student strikers, who listened to a few short speeches and then scurried for shelter.

Anti-war demonstrators at the University of Wisconsin at Madison split into two groups, offering competing programs, when the anti-war committee was accused of Communism.

In the Pittsburgh area demonstrants numbered more than 1,200 from the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech and Pennsylvania College for Women, but were only a small fraction of enrolled students.

Wayne University, Detroit, mustered 500 strikers; the University of Minnesota, 2,000; Dartmouth, 500, and Brown University, at Providence, R. I., 1,300.

The entire student body was dismissed at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex., to attend a meeting. A quiet meeting on the University of Kansas campus was attended by 1,000 and 1,100 University of Texas students participated in a mild demonstration.

Student Head Joins.

Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College at Winter Park, Fla., and a personal friend of the late Woodrow Wilson, joined his 150 students in their "peace strike." He walked out of the classrooms with them to the shores of Lake Virginia, where he told them they should realize their power to prevent war. "We are headed straight for another war," he warned.

In a heated chapel meeting, a two-thirds majority of the students at Southwestern University, Memphis, Tenn., adopted a resolution demanding abolition of military training in colleges and high schools.

When 1,000 students at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, joined the strike, they were told by President Frank P. Graham: "Go to it; I am all for you."

Approximately 14 per cent of the enrollment of Vanderbilt University, Peabody College and Scarritt College, or a total of 250 students, attended a joint, quiet demonstration meeting at Nashville, Tenn.

Only 100 students, or 5 per cent of the enrollment, joined the "strike" at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

County Plans Dairy Survey

Committee Will Prepare Permanent Rating in Montgomery.

Appointment of a special milk inspector and establishment of a numerical dairy rating system for Montgomery County, Md., was proposed Thursday by the Montgomery County Commissioners. The proposal was made after conference with Douglas B. Diamond, R. L. Hickerson and James D. King, representing milk producers.

A committee of three, County Commissioner Charles E. King, county farm agent; O. W. Anderson and Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, was appointed to secure a qualified special inspector to conduct a survey of all dairies selling milk in the county, totaling approximately 160.

The survey is to determine present conditions for the purpose of formulating a numerical rating system to be used as a standard for grading dairies as producers of grade A or grade B milk. Heretofore the only milk allowed to be sold was that graded A, and the grading was in accordance with certain physical facts, principally relating to cleanliness.

The committee is to report June 1 or earlier to the county commissioners.

Arlington Plans Improvement Of Courthouse

Proposed Remodeling Calls for $60,000 Outlay but No Tax Rise.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Consideration of plans for the remodeling of the courthouse will be among the principal matters to come to the attention of the county board at its meeting today.

The plans which the committee, consisting of County Manager Roy S. Braden, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas and County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse, have been studying for several weeks call for an expenditure of approximately $60,000.

Should the board approve the plans submitted it is proposed to add a second story to the county clerk's office and extend that part of the present building forward about 60 feet. The addition will be used for administrative offices, with a meeting room for the county board. At the present time the board either is forced to meet in the office of the county manager, the county courtroom or the circuit courtroom.

Officials say that the improvements to the courthouse as proposed can be made without an increase in the tax rate.

Other matters to be taken up will be the question of the rate of the front-foot assessment for the installation of the lateral sewer lines and a report of the engineers for proposed extensions of sewer lines.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas is announced as the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Parent Teacher Association of the James Monore School at Aurora Heights. The meeting will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Douglas will speak on "Training Today's Children for Citizens of Tomorrow."

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Master Plumbers Association of Arlington County will sponsor a bingo party tonight at 8 o'clock in the Moose Hall, Courthouse road and Wilson boulevard at Clarendon.

The Rev. John H. Pearson, pastor, will conduct the services at the Clarendon Methodist Church tomorrow. At the morning service his subject will be, "A Day of Triumph." In the evening he will discuss the book entitled, "Christ's Alternative to Communism."

The Moral At Rockville.

Washington is horrified by the accident at Rockville. Disasters of this sort seem doubly terrible because they are so unnecessary. And the ultimate responsibility for this tragedy extends behind any negligence which inquiry may attribute to either bus operator or locomotive engineer.

Ghastly as this accident appears when viewed at such close range, it is by no means unique. Continually the newspapers record similar instances in which children traveling to or from their classrooms are slaughtered by locomotives plowing through motor buses. Drivers are frequently negligent. Engineers sometimes forget to sound the alarm before their thundering trains streak across public highways. And what is even more serious, thousands of grade crossings are inadequately safeguarded.

It seems to be impossible entirely to eliminate human frailties in situations of this kind. The most cautious driving will not entirely remove the inevitable hazards encountered everywhere that trunk railway lines bisect automobile highways. So long as this menace exists statisticians can calculate, often with grim accuracy, the probable number of accidents comparable to that at Rockville.

Out of this pitiful destruction of life should come an imperative demand for the elimination of death traps on the highways. And the moral is particularly appropriate at this moment, when the Administration is devising ways and means of spending $4,880,000,000 on work-relief projects. The elimination of grade crossings obviously affords a fruitful field in which a very considerable portion of this fund may be most profitably invested.

Projects of this kind require a large amount of direct labor and construction materials. They do not throw the Government in competition with private enterprise. On the contrary they would relieve the railroads of an expenditure the carriers can not afford. More important still, they serve an urgent social need. Maintenance of conditions which encourage such horrible accidents as this one at Rockville can not possibly be justified when the Government is preparing to ladle out billions of dollars on public improvements.

Anyone familiar with the highways about Washington will be able to think of many crossings where death is always lurking. Similar conditions exist in nearly every part of the country. The Administration could not begin expenditure of its enormous work-relief fund more effectively than in the removal of these intolerable hazards.

The Student Strike.

In Europe the Class of 1914 has been called to arms. The regiments now going through maneuvers are largely made up of 21-year-olds. Yesterday in this country something more than 100,000 of this same Class of 1914 took part in widespread demonstrations against war. And except for occasional tinges of red, indicating Communist agencies that joined the procession after it was under way, the movement must be set down as an altogether spontaneous and deeply sincere affair.

No one has a better right to organize against war than these students. For if their fears materialize and it comes to fighting, they will be the ones whose lives will be wrecked first. Theirs is the right to demonstrate, and if they choose a "striking" technique there is none who should say them nay so long as order is maintained. This appears generally to have been the case in yesterday's assemblies.

The students, whose concern for world and national affairs marks a new and commendable departure in school interests, will do well to bear in mind all aspects of their new activity. They must take full caution not to abuse the rights afforded them by American freedom. In many countries of the world today such efforts to influence governmental policy would be utterly out of the question. Further, such anti-militaristic demonstrations have in the past paved the way to iron-fisted dictatorships. Germany and Italy are cases in point: both countries experienced general pacifist reactions after the war, the impractical idealism of which was taken full advantage of by militant factions in their armed ascents to power.

Let the slogan be "Construct, Don't Grab!" In nearby Maryland students took yesterday's demonstration as an opportunity to militate against the recently passed teacher's oath bill, which they believed (and rightly) undesirable. And finally, wise leadership is needed to control the ardor of the ranks. Tact will be necessary to avoid inciting the indignation of those who may, with equal sincerity, think very differently on the highly debatable question of the pursuit of peace. A real liberalism must be the order. Otherwise this impressive campaign will quickly defeat its own ends.

On The Wrong Track.

The Administration is being urged by representatives of the cotton textile industry to place cotton cloth from Japan upon a quota basis. As is often the case, the temptation is strong to blame other countries for industrial distress that is largely of our own making. The Japanese have undoubtedly been rapidly increasing their sales of certain kinds of cotton cloth to the United States. But, despite the marked percentage increase in such imports, they constitute a negligible proportion of our domestic output of cotton cloth.

In 1934, for example, American cotton mills produced over 7,000,000,000 square yards of cotton cloth and approximately one-sixth of that yardage consisted of bleached goods, which accounts for the bulk of Japanese imports. In February, the last month for which statistics are available, Japan shipped 4,800,000 square yards of cotton cloth to the United States, while her general imports (including warehoused goods) totaled 5,700,000 yards. Even if this rate of importation should be maintained or surpassed, it seems obvious that Japan will not make much impression upon the American market, although indirectly low-priced imports will have a depressing effect upon the domestic industry.

The increase in the volume of imported Japanese cottons is significant in view of the high duties that have to be paid upon these goods, which are also subject to compensating duties imposed to offset the domestic processing tax upon cotton. Cheap Japanese labor and excessive depreciation of the yen help to explain Japan's increasing inroads in this country as well as in foreign markets where she has acquired export trade at our expense and particularly at the expense of the British.

The present agitation against Japan, however, is primarily the result of conditions resulting from Administration policies that have advanced the cost of raw cotton, added to the operating expenses of cotton mills under the codes, and thus made inevitable advances in the prices of finished goods of American manufacture. The total amount of cotton goods imported into this country last year was insignificant, and if we were to establish an embargo upon all foreign purchases of cotton cloth our mills would still find their outlets inadequate because prices have outstripped consumer purchasing power as a result of the activities of the AAA and the NRA.

Since Japan is a heavy buyer of American cotton, the imposition of quotas upon Japanese cotton goods might mean that our farmers would lose more than our textile manufacturers would gain by such action. Certainly our situation would not be improved by resort to policies that invite retaliation on the part of a country that is now buying more from this country than she sells to us.

Our basic trouble, of course, is due to efforts to raise prices of export commodities and raw materials far above world levels. Unless we eventually modify these practices, it will become necessary to cut ourselves off to an increasing extent from contacts with the rest of the world, in order to protect American producers against the competition of nations with lower costs.

While this may prove to be the outcome of continued reliance upon scarcity-induced high prices, it is quite certain that such methods will not enable us to raise our living standards and restore prosperity. On the contrary, we should find ourselves confronted by a progressive restriction of market outlets through gradual extinction of foreign trade.

The Impartial Attitude.

When Donald Richberg was made general counsel of the NRA in 1933 many conservative leaders of industry shook their heads sadly. They felt that their worst fears had been confirmed by the assignment of this important position to a man who had fought the battles of organized railway labor so vigorously and adroitly. Their suspicion that the NRA might be used as an agency for increasing the power of labor without granting employers coveted privileges of control over prices and production became akin to certainty. Mr. Richberg was a symbol of all that they most feared and disapproved.

Time often brings great changes in men's opinion of those who hold high office, even if the men themselves remain unchanged. Hence it is not surprising that Mr. Richberg, as head of the NRA, has now become for some critics a man bent on shielding employers against the punishments they are supposed to deserve. Senator Nye, for instance, is indignant, because Mr. Richberg has not shown a proper eagerness to chastise a manufacturer of munitions who, the Senator alleges, has refused to negotiate with recognized labor organizations. Mr. Richberg's excuse is that he prefers to try to adjust differences before appearing before the Senate Munitions Committee to prefer complaints.

If Senator Nye had had Mr. Richberg's experience in trying to adjust disputes between labor and capital, he might not be so ready to pass judgment upon the rights and wrongs of a particular case. A competent negotiator must be able to see both sides of a question, no matter which party to a controversy he happens to represent. No doubt, Mr. Richberg's experience has helped him to take a more impartial view of the problems that confront the recovery administration than would be possible for a man who had never helped to fight the battles of either labor or capital.

A Confused Beginning.

Various reasons may be advanced for the preference shown the CCC in allocation of the work-relief fund. The CCC rates high among the New Deal's emergency organizations in point of successful performance. Director Fechner has already completed plans to double the strength of his conservation corps. And the scheme is easy. It requires less constructive thinking than most of the projects to be financed through the $4,880,000,000 appropriation.

Explanations of this sort are not, however, entirely satisfactory. The CCC has been spending about $325,000,000 per year. At that rate it has been able, according to Mr. Fechner's recent report, to advance forestry and park development from 10 to 20 years ahead of the normal program. No doubt the CCC will continue to do good work. But the more it accomplishes the sooner will come the time when the Government must face the problem of disbanding a CCC army greater than the entire population of Washington.

Apparently the President seeks to make the CCC serve as a part of the "pump-priming" venture. His allocation of $600,000,000 to that agency coincides with announcement of intention to spend as much as possible of the enormous work-relief fund during the next fourteen months. The coincidence leads inevitably to the assumption that this allotment has been made more in the interests of distributing money than in thoughtful conservation of the country's forests.

It should be noted, however, that the CCC does not lend itself to "pump-priming." A large portion of its expenditures goes into wages at the rate of $30 per month, into food, clothing and miscellaneous supplies. Moreover, the CCC demand for construction materials is relatively trivial. Consequently, its stimulating effect on business and industry is meager in comparison with that of some other types of public work. Furthermore, only 300,000 men are to be enrolled on the CCC allotment of $600,000,000. On that ratio the four billions altogether available for work-relief will fall far short of the objective of taking 3,500,000 unemployed from the relief rolls.

If the "pump-priming" theory is practical, which many economists question, it must stimulate private enterprise so that normal employment will automatically take the place of artificial jobs created by the Government. Obviously no private employer is going to hire 600,000 foresters when the CCC allotment is spent. And since their activities in the meantime will contribute very little, if anything to the country's industrial tempo, it is difficult to see how expansion of the CCC will have any appreciable effect upon the basic problem of recovery.

Once more it appears that the Administration is going forward without fully considering whether the means it employs will be effective in achieving the much-advertised objective. The complete work-relief program is yet to be revealed, but the CCC segment, which will require more than one-seventh of the gigantic fund available, offers little encouragement to those who realize how essential it is that this program shall not fail.

Domesticity On The Hoof.

Without benefit of Emily Post or the aid of a lovelorn column, Uganda, one of Great Britain's most primitive colonies, is apparently succeeding in solving an extremely delicate problem. Bachelors in this country, and even a few husbands, may be inclined to differ with the solution, but it suits the Ugandans and they are the ones who have to live in Uganda.

Briefly, the question before the protectorate is—how much is a wife worth? After much discussion and numerous test cases, the stable price handed down by the court of chieftains is five cows! That is, provided, of course, that both the girl and the cattle are on the hoof. This ruling is intended to dispense with unfair competition, haggling by the bridegroom and extortion by the girl's father.

But the point that is worrying the administrator of domestic relations in that remote outpost is what to do in case of divorce. When the bridegroom returns the bride to her paternal roof, should the father respond in kind and send back the five cows? Or should he discount something for wear and tear on his daughter and send back only two of the animals? In the last analysis, therefore, it's not what a girl is worth before she is married, but how much she depreciates afterward. If "darkest Africa" can shed any light on that question, even Judge Ben Lindsey will have to take a back seat.

Leave Train Size To I. C. C.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Several Western States are flirting with proposals for the limitation of the length of railroad trains.

This is a backward step. It is harking back to the era before the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In fact, the various conflicting laws that States were passing in those days in regard to railroad operation compelled the Federal Government to take the whole subject over.

An attempt to make a distinction between transportation within the States and through the States is impossible. Goods in transit come under the rule of interstate commerce if their ultimate destination is interstate.

Laws limiting the size of trains would cause confusion and, even if workable, they would add greatly to the cost of shipping. California shippers of perishable products would be seriously affected. If any regulation of the kind is called for it should be left to the Interstate Commerce Comission.

The Desolation Of Dust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have lived through a few major catastrophies: war, flood, earthquake. This week I crossed certain dust-storm areas of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas. And I knew that never before had I had such an overwhelming impression of final desolation, of doom inescapable, complete, as I then experienced.

Always before, there had seemed to be something to be done, there was some way of escape—there was sky, there was air. This time, though there was, I believed, something to be done, in appearance there was not—there was no air, no sky.

It was as if from outer space the fatal thick gray were sifting down, extinguishing sky, absorbing air, where the eye still could pierce the thickness, the scattered, paintless farmhouses were outlined in gray ghostliness; no cow or dog stirred, no human being moved about. If men and women, if children, had not fled this airless land, they were shut behind those ghostly doors holding cloths over nose and mouth to save throat and lungs.

There was no height left—the gray closed down over man and his fields. His world was a thin dust strip between darker grays. There was no width left—the horizons clamped their darkness close about him. Whence, one asked could come the courage even to flee—so futile effort seemed.

Was it something like this that buried lost civilizations?

More St. Patrick.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One can agree with T. J. A. Flynn that there was a papacy in the time of St. Patrick, and that the Pope sent Palladius to the Scots who inhabited the northern part of Ireland. However, in the interest of accuracy, the claim that the Pope also sent St. Patrick is not so readily admitted. The history of that early period is of course somewhat shadowy. But it may be noted that St. Patrick says nothing whatever about any such papal commission in his "Confessio"—his autobiography. Gleanings from authorities on the subject bring one to the belief that St. Patrick went to Ireland "on his own hook."

It is somewhat akin to the claim that St. Augustine took Christianity to England, whereas the venerable Bede relates the meeting of Augustine with eight bishops of the Britons who had been driven by the heathen Saxons into Wales. In short, the Christianity of St. Joseph, of Arimathea, and St. Alban was known and practiced in England several hundred years before Augustine, who converted, not the original inhabitants of England, but the invading Saxons.

Consider The Mule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a mule gets stubborn and wants to go down the wrong corn alley it's called mulish. But when the Administration goes the wrong way and persists in it, it is called leadership.

Please keep up the good work in your paper and bring out the real truth on what is going on in Washington. This used-to-be wonderful Government of ours has gotten on three flat tires under the New Deal.

First Laugh.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please thank Bargeron for me. His article on April 8 gave me the first laugh I've had in ten years.

I've sadly plowed through seas of funnies—never even a smile for me. But humor, wit, whimsy and brains, all mixed in one, give me hope.

Economic Pressure In Danzig.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of April 9 on Danzig, which is closely similar to the general impression in this country, has so far misinterpreted the conditions in Danzig, and the results of the recent election, that I can not refrain from comment.

I lived for a year and a half in Danzig, in 1930 and 1931, and was closely in touch with the situation in East Prussia, Danzig and the so-called Polish Corridor. Although there was little publicity then about the conditions, the foundations of the present situation were being laid.

The basic fact that your editorial overlooks is that the livelihood of Danzig is not based on East Prussia, but on the commerce that flows from Poland. This has always been true. Danzig is dependent on its commercial business which comes from the hinterland, formerly Russia, now Poland. The commerce of East Prussia has never supported Danzig. This commerce is small and flows through Konigsberg. Today Danzig is inside the Polish custom borders, and commerce can flow from Poland through Danzig. Yet even under these conditions, Poland has seen fit to create the port of Gydnia. Poland has likewise established new rail connections direct up the Polish Corridor to Gydnia, clear of the Danzig borders.

In case that Danzig were to vote politically so that it were possible to reattach Danzig to Germany, without wiping out the whole Corridor and thus control commerce flowing from the hinterland, it would mean that Danzig would be outside the Polish custom borders and free from any restraining Polish control. The commerce from the hinterland would then flow entirely to Gydnia. The industry and commerce of Danzig would almost entirely disappear, which would bring a very serious crisis in the lives of all these inhabitants. It was these conditions which made the Hitler government fall short of their goal of obtaining a two-thirds majority in the Danzig Senate, far more than disbelief in the Hitler policies.

The fact that the inhabitants were faced with voting away their livelihood was a serious handicap for any party to overcome. Had the question been in such a form that it would have left the Danzigers in control of the commerce flowing from the hinterland, I believe that the result would have been as overwhelming as it was in the Saar. It is a very difficult thing for a population knowingly to vote itself into a condition of starvation.

Frank Declaration Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial of April 5, you quote Senator Tydings on the folly of producing less and less in an effort to employ more and more people. In the same paper, Mr. Thurston says we must first secure production before we can talk about distribution and quotes Mr. Hoover's criticism of the policy of scarcity pursued by his rivals, the Democrats. At first sight these ideas seem consistent if not identical.

Yet one suspects that Mr. Hoover and Senator Tydings are, in reality, far apart. Because the Senator is objecting to that very curtailment of agriculture which was the inevitable consequence of the tariff act put through under the auspices of Mr. Hoover. What he wants is an abandonment of such "supernational" policies and an expansion of agriculture.

If Mr. Hoover wants this he still has an excellent opportunity to say so and the country would be delighted to know where he stands. A frank statement from him would be preferable to criticism of his opponents for their constructive efforts to alleviate the misery caused agriculture by his surrender in 1930 to high tariffs.

Thank You

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper has many varied and pleasing parts. One column in particular I enjoy reading is "No End of Books" by Theodore Hall. It was his column of April 2 on "Spring Cleaning of the Mind" that prompted this little note of appreciation. This is a splendid bit of writing and well worth reading two or three times.

Here's wishing you and Mr. Hall continued success and may he and your other writers bring forth many more interesting articles such as this.

Too Much Brain Trust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: B. L. M., in The Post of April 9, is wondering if it would be interesting to the readers of your paper for you to write up the lives of Hopkins, Tugwell, Ickes, Wallace and, perhaps, others of the brain trust. You will please permit me to say no, it would not.

We have already heard more about them than we wanted to hear, and if you have nothing else to write about, you will just please send my paper along without any printing on it at all, and oblige.

The Noble Bean.

In an earnest endeavor to get all essential legislation out of the way before the season for spring plowing is too far advanced, Michigan's House of Representatives took time the other day to designate the bean as Michigan's official vegetable. This is a touching tribute to a real benefactor. A lot of Michigan citizens get a substantial part of their living from producing beans, and a lot more by eating beans.

If the Senate and the Governor take the matter seriously and cooperate, Michigan may be the first State in the Union to have an official vegetable. The choice is fitting. Michigan for some time has been the first bean State in the Union.

So, if nothing further comes of it than this official recognition by a branch of the Legislature, something has been done to let the world know that Michigan is bean conscious.

The Post Impressionist

Going Gertrude?

Postoffice, Saturday.

HERE is a cry for help from a deserving quarter—it may be even a deserving half. When you have read it, you will understand why it has been signed with a pseudonym: indeed, you may understand what it is all about. But concerning its author, we may say merely that he is one of the Capital's most promising, and patiently performing, painters, who, as he modestly admits, "put some lousy art in the Greater Wash. exhibit."

His letter is as beautifully typewritten as if Brownie had linotyped it in a saner moment. The envelope is addressed "To The Post-Impressionist—if he is (all) there—on The Washington Post." And the signature that we are asked to append is "The Daring Young Thing on the Flying Divan."

"I still read," says he, "your Column: not because of my depraved esthetic taste, but because a habit is hard to stop. Therefore, your story on drunken drivers was pretty well digested. Nevertheless, I am still picking pieces of it from my mind, if not my teeth, and I want to tell you one thing about it and ask you another.

"In the first base, I am sorry to learn that you do not drive a car, for now I know that it was not you whom I ran into—or, rather, who ran into me. It is very tragic to discover that it was not the Post-Impressionist who knocked me down at the corner of New York avenue and Thirteenth street. Also, I didn't get the fiend's number; and, after all the stars and numbers I saw to pick from, I should have found the license of that hit-and-run terrorist. Besides, it was my fault, and it always makes me angry to be run over or into when it is an act due to carelessness on my part . . .

"I was merely sauntering along and using the last thin dime I had to cut the pages of Thomas Wolfe's last encyclopedia . . . And suddenly I bounced up and then down on the nice asphalt.

"The asphalt didn't give a bit. But the book lay a few feet away, looking quite unread and lonesome.

"But now to get to second base: back, I mean, to drunks. For I have an ulterior motive in writing, and hope it's not so low that you will ignore it.

"I suppose you will think I am drunk myself, or going Gtde. Stein on you. Not so.

"I once drank, but my stomach saved me. I have tried to lasso fireplugs from speeding cars, delivered marvelous extempore speeches, made love to other men's wives (not recommended), forgotten people's names (including mine). I have probably committed other bibulous crimes which my former fellow-inebriates would recall, should you consult them. But my stomach saved me. I ascended the wagon.

"Well, I now want to rescue other sufferers. And I can't get any instruction on how to do it. The question is: Do you have a book on the Care and Feeding of Drunks?

"I have watched Steig drawings closely, and Peter Arno and even John Held—that clever young man who is not related to Anna Held. And I have written for the catalogues of Abercrombie & Fitch, Sears-Roebuck, apple-growers, rabbit-breeders, soap premiums, exploding cigars—have perused a few chapters of Freud, Pavlov, D. H. Lawrence, Kay Boyle, Hemingway and Don Marquis, all in vain.

"I admit that these scientists are excellent for some purposes. But they don't help me in my present plight. They are absolutely silent—either from pure spite or purer ignorance—upon how to remove a drunk from the geraniums, the fish pond, the fireplace, the taxicab, the shower, all-night quick lunches, or the 'phone booth.

"There is one drunk among my so-called (so self-called) friends, who insists on singing the Torerodor song, and there is another who sleeps with the coal scuttle in his arms."

"In fact, I might mention a few more:

"The one who raids the ice box. The one who weeps copiously over the fact that he is drunk. The girl who falls consistently into the Potomac, regardless of season—provided she is near the Potomac. The woman who clings to the 'phone and calls people up, eventually bringing chaos and the police—or vice versa.

"All these—and I with no authoritative volume to guide me! You can see that I am in a quandary—not to say several quandaries.

"If you can't recommend a book on how I am to rescue these poor people—if none of your readers can recommend one—then I entreat you, dear Post-Impressionist, to come around and rescue the goofy buffoons yourself.

"I am miserable up here all alone on the wagon. I have to have company!" . . .

French Are Wondering Where They Blundered

Nation Has Always Split On Policy Toward Germany; Teuton Philosophy Alarming.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondent of The Post.

Paris.

FACED with the fait accompli of Germany's rearmament, the French are asking themselves with mixed feeling what their mistakes have been in the past. For many of them, France should not have been so lenient to Germany and should have shown more strength to defend the Versailles Treaty. For the others, France did not make enough concessions or, rather, she made them too late. For all Frenchmen, their country suffers from not having adopted, and clung to, one of the two policies.

There is just one point on which they all seem to be agreed. They are convinced Germany's dignity complex has become so touchy it may lead to war. They are concerned by that mysticism stirred up around Wotan and the Nordic gods. And they fear that the German leaders, some day, may choose to seek a glorious end in blood and war, like those Wagner heroes of the Niebelungen legend.

All this is expressed with considerable bitterness but in no panicky way, as by people who see the danger but keep their heads on their shoulders. They hope for the best and consider their past faults.

* * * *

MANY a Frenchman sighs with regret at the thought of a Franco-British treaty which now would seem too good to be true and which a good many years ago almost saw the light of day. It read more or less as follows:

"Considering that the French soil has been invaded twice in a lifetime and that it still suffers from the devaastation that was inflicted upon it by the enemy;

"Considering that both the populations of France and the British Empire have paid a heavy contribution of human lives and wealth to repel the German armies' invasion;

"Considering that security guarantees given France against a future invasion by Germany are indispensable to the restoration of stability in Europe, to Great Britain's security and to the world's peace—

"His Britannic Majesty and the President of the French Republic . . . have agreed that:

"Article I.—In the case of a direct and unprovoked German agression against the French territory, Great Britain will immediately side with France with her naval, military and air forces."

* * * *

This sounds almost impossible now. Yet, it is the text of a treaty which was submitted by the British Premier, Lloyd George, to his French colleague Briand, at Cannes on January 11, 1922. Briand was called back to Paris and the accord was rejected on the ground that some of its economic clauses were likely to jeopardize the reparation payments.

As Wladimir d'Ormesson, a conservative political writer, wittily puts it in Figaro: "A Frenchman always refuses to lose five francs. But he is always ready to lose half a million if he thinks he can call it an investment."

* * * *

WHEN Poincare invaded the Ruhr to obtain the payment of reparations, his showing of strength quickly lost the French public opinion's support. But two years later, when Briand shook hands with the German statesman, Stresemann, at Thoiry, a little Swiss village, he did not have more than half of the French people behind him.

So, neither a policy of strength against, nor of concessions to, Germany has ever had the French nation's unreserved following. Even now, the French feeling toward Germany is as complicated as ever, with no clear-cut edges.

The sensation caused by Germany's blunt rejection of the military clauses of the Versailes Treaty is counteracted by the realization that sooner or later Germany must be let alone; the craving for alliances is checked by the unwillingness to encircle Germany in an iron ring, as the League of Nations ideal and the hope of obtaining collective security are not dead.

* * * *

"FRANCE never felt like refusing to admit Germany's dignity," Emmanuel Berl, noted leftist writer, recently wrote. "We never thought of establishing a hierarchy of nations which would work against Germany. We never denied that Germany was the equal of any other nation by her cultural contribution, her industrial power, her demographical enthusiasm.

"We merely considered that Germany differed from other nations by her potential menace, because, while we regarded every nation as a fixed entity, metaphysically indestructible, Germany only praised the outburst which constituted a nation . . .

"No discussion, no serious conversation will be possible with Germany so long as she does not realize how terrifying her philosophy is for her neighbors.

"If Germany wants us to take her armaments as a proof that she now regards herself as second to none, no Frenchman will object. If she wants us to think that she is no more alarming than any other nation . . . no Frenchman will believe it."

* * * *

THIS average French reaction, except in very conservative circles, commands the problem of French armaments. The French Parliament recently voted that, for the next four years, French lads will serve two years instead of one to make up for the deficiency of births during the "lean" war years. This will keep the French army up to its present strength. But the French realize this strength, no matter what they do, will be inferior to German possibilities, since the "lean" years produced a little over 300,000 births a year in Germany and 120,000 in France.

Gen. Denain, French air minister, recently obtanied from parliament the authorization to modernize the French air force by spending in 1935 a $100,000,000 credit appropriated for 1936. The navy is about to build a $70,000,000, 35,000-ton cruiser. Nationalistic and military circles would ask for more credits. The Parliament, concerned with coming municipal elections, is unwilling to increase military expenditures.

Voicing the opinion of a large majority of peasants and workers, L. O. Frossard, a moderate Socialist leader, wrote a few days ago in Marianne:

It is imperative to make a choice, once and for all. We can not have both quality and quantity. It is impossible to give France, in every domain, a superiority which she can not attain because of her low birth rate and her already too heavy financial charges. There is a touch of folly in wanting, at the same time, the most numerous military effectives, the most perfectly equipped professional army, the most powerful war material, a larger navy and the fastest air force.

"France, alas, has neither the men we wished nor the billions we would. We are ready to make sacrifices. But only provided they leave us some reason to live."

AFFLICTIONS come together, my spirit shrinks and squirms, and I denounce the weather in harsh and bitter terms; then no one is affronted, no ruffled feelings smart; my language, though unwonted, can bruise no tender heart. I well might roast the banker who sold me phoney stocks, who seemed to yearn and hanker to rake in all my rocks; or I might roast the voter who spieled around and spoke, until he sold a motor that always keeps me broke; or I might roast the faker who hung and snooped around until I bought an acre of oil-producing ground. But someone then might tell them, and they would pine away, the curses that befell them would bring them to decay. And so with lungs of leather anathemas I toot, and roast the blooming weather, which doesn't care a hoot. "The weather's getting colder than weather ought to be; I have a frozen shoulder, I have a frozen knee; the weather's simply ghastly, e'en when it's best; and I denounce it vastly, it ought to be suppressed." I don't denounce my neighbors when troubles break my heart; with words as sharp as sabers I score the weather chart; and then no man is weeping because of words unkind, no delegate is keeping my adjectives in mind; there is no talk of slander among the gossip-birds, because I, in my dander, turned loose a flock of words. The weather man is smiling, a twinkle in his eye, although we keep on piling the cuss-words mountain high.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

The National Plan.

NEW DEAL agencies along a broad front were preparing to move yesterday toward the solution of the problem of Henry. In high quarters it was said that while the problem is vexing there is no reason to consider it insoluble, not by a New Deal Government anyway.

BARGERON.

Henry, it will be recalled, is an aged Negro who sweeps up the floor of a children's dress shop in Richmond, Va. Mrs. Wise, the proprietor, was told by one NRA inspector that $12.50 a week was a gracious plenty for him and fitted in perfectly with the President's plan to uplift Southern living standards. A second NRA inspector, wanting to lift Southern living standards still higher, said Henry had to be paid $14 a week. Then, all of a sudden, Mrs. Wise realized Henry was really superannuated and, after getting a doctor's certificate that he could only do part-time work, is now paying him $9 a week.

* * * *

The matter is considered exceptionally serious in Washington because it is a rough spot in the NRA which must be ironed out before legislation extending its life can be enacted. This is because the new legislation will provide for a perfect NRA and a thing like this can not be permitted to exist. The original legislation called for a perfect NRA, but the new legislation is to say, "positively."

Donald Richberg is expected to confer with the President in an effort to get quick action on the security legislation. Henry could then be taken from the keep of NRA, it is pointed out, and placed under this legislation. This would then leave a clean and perfect NRA unless, of course, something else like it bobs up.

Fearing, however, a long delay in the enactment of the security legislation, Mr. Richberg, it is understood, plans to confer with Harry Hopkins to see if the latter can't take Henry over.

* * * *

An obstacle arises here, though, by virtue of the fact that under the $5,000,000,000 works bill Harry is to go out of the relief business. Observers yesterday recalled Mr. Roosevelt's declaration, "we must quit this relief business," or words to that effect. This, it is pointed out, would make it embarrassing for Harry to take Henry under his protective wings. The strictly politicians of the Administration agreed that Mr. Roosevelt ought to quit making cracks like this because they are bound to come back to haunt him later. In other quarters, in what might be described as the high-minded side of the New Deal as opposed to the political side, it was said Mr. Roosevelt is not the slightest interested in the politics of the matter, that he hasn't the slightest concern whether he is reelected or not and that his sole aim is to give the people a more abundant life.

There was a suggestion that Homer Cummings might be asked to decide whether Henry could not come under the provision in the work bill for remedying population maladjustments. In this event Henry could be turned over to Rex Tugwell's "Third Economy." Rex, it is not believed, would be averse to taking Henry unless it necessitated his changing it to the "Fourth Economy." He is understood to be determined to stick to "Third Economy" as a description of the "new social order" because it sounds pretty. Not much worry is entertained about getting a favorable decision from Homer but then there will remain Comptroller General McCarl.

At any rate, Richberg is believed to feel strongly that some agency should take Henry for a few weeks until he can get his new legislation. Then he will take him back. He would do the same for the other fellows, his friends assert.

While not directly interested in the placement of Henry, the National Industrial Labor Relations Board and Miss Perkins plan to look into the question of whether when Mrs. Wise said to Henry one day, "Henry, you are shiftless and not worth $14.00 a week," she was not violating Section 7(a), which prescribes the mental attitude between employe and employer. To tell Henry he was shiftless and not worth $14.00 a week, it is held by some authorities, was intimidation in that it might cause Henry not to think as well of himself as he should.

To An English Visitor

Lecturer Summarizes His Reactions To The United States After 7,000 Miles Of Traveling.

By Harrison Brown.

THE first thing that strikes the visiting Englishman is that on this side there is a more general awareness that "things are happening." That things must change, are changing and will continue to change is tacitly accepted by the American. Nor does he attach many strings to his vision of change, except a strong aversion to certain labels which have been accepted elsewhere as denoting the changes he envisages. He will, for example, eagerly admit that the economic system under which he has grown up is badly stalled. But the label "Socialist" is as much anathema over vast areas of the country as it was in Victorian England when Bernard Shaw first chose it as his telegraphic address.

I have spoken with members of school boards who listen regularly to Huey Long or Father Coughlin, but who look askance at the name of Norman Thomas on a proposed list of lecturers. Main Street is impervious to the appeal of Socialism as such, but its heart throbs wildly to the parables of the Utopian Society. Even the magnificent TVA project rouses doubts in some minds. Too bad that more people can not see it for themselves.

Another thing which must strike the wandering observer is the amount of apparently unnecessary misery in many rural districts. To find gaunt hovels perched amidst refuse dumps, and hungry children in them, is strange to one accustomed to the peasant gardens of Europe. The European peasant has always been an oppressed class, but never, except occasionally in time of war, has he actually starved. There are American tenant farmers today who are in that plight and one reason for it at least could be cured without a revolution. Too often the peasant abroad has been tied to his spot of land. The bane of the tenant farmer in America is insecurity of tenure.

The "Go-West-Young-Man" tradition persisted long after the early nineties, when the frontier was officially declared closed. Nothing could be more natural than the tenacity of this migratory habit, since all young men did not seek land. What they did all seek was opportunity, and for a long time America's claim to be a democratic country came nearest to truth of all those claims. There very nearly was equal opportunity for all. During this visit, and for the first time, I have gained the impression of a widespread realization that no open frontier remains over any horizon. North or South, East or even West, there is short time and low wages, with the hobo camp on the outskirt of the city.

* * * *

AND therefore something is wrong and drastic change is required. The elderly conservative in Chicago may think only in terms of getting back to predepression days. But the more thinking of the younger generation already see him as doomed to disappointment as was a similar generation in Europe in 1919, which thought their prewar world would come to life again.

But if the younger people do not share the sad illusion of their elders, neither do they accept things as they are. For a country which has never known politics in the European sense it seems certain that European examples must be of limited value. Such popular political tradition as exists in America was summed up recently in the cartoon which showed a young man reading a letter: "Father writes from the Poorhouse to be sure to vote Democrat." This lack of any political philosophy, combined with the drama of sudden collapse and the increased tempo, is perhaps responsible for the fact that America, too, has arrived at the heyday of demagogy.

It was in Detroit that I discovered the new version of the old migratory tradition. Detroit was "nearing the peak." The springtide of production produced a boom psychology, despite the fact that, with mathematical precision, in three months time the flood would have dwindled again to a trickle. This year the population of Detroit has grown. For some time the automobile plants have imported "seasonal" labor from the farm lands of Illinois and Michigan. This year they have gone farther afield and sent their recruiting agents into the South. From the hills of Kentucky and the Appalachian "wilderness" of Tennessee, and even farther South, have come many thousands of young men who had never seen a large-sized town or the inside of a factory. No skill is required and a wage of 50 cents an hour is riches to them, while it lasts.

But Detroit has 50,000 families on relief even during this "boom," and many old automobile workers are included in their number. When every allowance is made for the importance of the industry in the general economy of the country, the patriotism of the manufacturers seems to the outsider somewhat hard to find. The city fathers of Detroit will probably share that view if Federal funds again become difficult to obtain.

* * * *

CERTAIN reflections are inevitable when one sees American employers resisting by every device that which in western Europe has long been accepted as the backbone of such democracy as exists. In this respect the chief aim of Fascist regimes in Europe may be said to coincide with the aim of the large employers' associations in America, with the difference that the former are destroying a mechanism which already existed, whereas here the aim is still to prevent the mechanism being installed. If the New Deal conferred respectability on the idea of collective bargaining, there would seem now to be a widespread conviction in labor circles that it can expect little more in the way of help from the Administration. How long it will be before labor itself "goes political" is an interesting speculation. If the scales were evenly balanced this early nipping in the bud of any tendency on the part of labor to rely upon outside help might be a good thing for organization which cost nothing would inevitably be ephemeral.

The test of how evenly the scales are balanced is the manner in which force is used by the State in times of crisis. Is the "restoration of law and order" applied with equal justice whichever side has destroyed it? The question answers itself.

To hop from Detroit, "bustling capital of American industry," to old New Orleans is to change one's world. It is also to change dictatorships. So much has been written about Huey Long that the visitor acquainted with European Fascist countries almost expects to find himself in the same familiar atmosphere of espionage and ill-concealed terror. The Crescent City shows no outward signs of either. So far as the mass of its inhabitants are concerned it continues to sprawl beside its river as unconcerned about its new dictator as about the fact that it has dropped from second to seventh most important port in the country.

* * * *

THE situation in Louisiana may be likened to that in Rumania, where also opinions are often expressed forcibly but where elections are never "free." It is easy to find business men in New Orleans who dislike Long intensely, it is not easy to find one willing to be quoted; outside, in the lumber towns and so on, it is even less easy, for there tax assessments can be an even more powerful gag.

There is a certain smug satisfaction amongst Louisianans today as they see alarm at their Huey spreading to Washington and across the country, nor is there any doubt that it will spread wider and faster. For the outsider, however certain he may be that the course of events in the two continents will not repeat themselves in their details, it is impossible to ignore that fundamentally conditions show great similarity. The same declining standard of living which helped to produce the Mussolinis and Hitlers is operating in the United States to swell the army of radio listeners and "club" members of Long and others.

Most of this army has never thought of "politics" before, their frame of mind is no better protection against demagogy than is the despair of Europeans who have thought too much. In one respect, however, there is all the difference in the world. America still lacks the appalling consciousness of being in the grip of the iron claw of the war machine. There is therefore hope and determination to see things through. The tragedy of Western Europe is the unspoken feeling that her race is run.

Jefferson's Birthday

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY is Jefferson's birthday. He was born April 13, 1743, in Virginia, and he died on the same day as his great political opponent and predecessor in the presidential office, John Adams, July 4, 1826, at the age of 83. In the later years of their long lives, these two former rivals and enemies, John Adams, of Massachusetts, and Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, became intimate epistolary friends and their correspondence is immensely interesting.

It is a brilliant exchange of ideas between two great men who had played important parts in the drama of the republic, and whose respect for each other's intellect was mellowed by a constantly increasing affection. They were fortunate in living long enough to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their country; and few things in its history have been more dramatic than their joint departure on their country's birthday.

* * * *

Jefferson throughout his life was a passionate lover of learning; he went to William and Mary College and studied 14 hours a day. In addition to learning Greek, Latin, mathematics, French and natural science, he was a fine athlete, a good dancer, played the violin and was a solo singer. He studied law and finally entered politics, where his career is a part of national history.

He drafted the Declaration of Independence, and worked steadily in Virginia and in the country for equal rights in voting, taxation, and opportunities for education. He believed in religious freedom and in Virginia secured the abolition of taxation for support of the Established Church.

* * * *

He became Secretary of State in the first Presidential Cabinet under Washington in 1789; under John Adams he was Vice President; at the national election, in 1800, he and Aaron Burr had the same number of electoral votes, and it was only after a sharp contest that he was elected. Although a great upholder of the rights of the people, he fortunately did not allow any theories to stand in the way of the purchase of Louisiana Territory from France in 1803, one of the most audacious, far-seeing and wisest actions in the history of the presidential office.

After he retired in 1809, he devoted himself to a project very dear to his heart; and the University of Virginia was the result.

Monticello, his beautiful home, near Charlottesville, is visited annually by many thousands of Americans.

Progressives' Plight Leads To Orthodoxy

No Other Logical Course Open To Suffering Sons Of Wild Jackass.

By Elliott Thurston.

THE plight of the Progressives is one of those political tragedies which has not had the attention it deserves. Amid the many ills of the world the painful position of the Progressives may seem less than momentous. Nevertheless their sufferings are real and acute. They need relief.

Some time back when that authority on the subject, former Senator Moses, was asked if he knew or could ascertain what had become of the Sons of the Wild Jackass he replied that from all he could learn they had been swallowed by the New Deal whale. Scarcely a trace was left. Subsequently, however, the Progressives, who had always been so many Jonahs to the G. O. P., were in some cases rather violently regurgitated. The Messrs. La Follette and Cutting, notably, were cast out upon the political seas, most unexpectedly, to sink or swim unaided and alone. They just managed to reach shore. The experience left them badly shaken. Senator Norris, patron saint and patriarch of them all, who had done much to herd the Progressives into the New Deal, became and remains embittered.

All this was sad enough, but while the Progressives dallied with the New Deal, a new crop of leftist leaders sprang up—the Huey Longs, Father Coughlins, Upton Sinclairs and Townsendites, for instance, all selling the same political wares, offered in greater or lesser degrees. All rushed to the market with redistribution of "wealth" offerings.

* * * *

THE Progressives suddenly found themselves without any goods to sell, except perhaps 16-to-1 silver. And enthusiasm for that is singularly absent from the minds of the masses. The voters may be as stupid as Henry Mencken alleges, but they do not seem to be so ignorant as to suppose that draining most of the silver of the world into Treasury vaults is going to create any business or abundance or usable real wealth. No; the ghost of Bryan is not only incongruous in this day, but it has lost its silver appeal.

Moreover, the New Deal has sapped the silver issue by its surrender to the silverites, whereby the Treasury has been buying silver in huge quantities, and nothing much has happened except misery for Chinese and therefore a not unnatural glee in Tokyo. Not even a Bryan could sell the idea to the country today that there is any magic left in silver.

Then, too, the New Deal has devitalized most of the other Progressive issues either by adopting them outright or compromising. Nothing much has been left with which to construct saleable political wares. That is, nothing has been left, curiously, except issues which sound strangely orthodox. The Progressives can not outbid the Longs and Townsends. As surely as the cotton plowers-under have lost their markets, the Progressives have lost theirs to the new left-wingers. The only choice left to them is to stay unhappily on the outer fringes of the New Deal, with it but not of it, or to go orthodox.

* * * *

THIS is not so impossible as it sounds at first. Already the Progressives, with Mr. Borah and Mr. Nye long since in the vanguard, are battling against monopolistic results of NRA. But the monopolistic results are by-products of the whole price-raising, production-reducing drift of NRA. Thus, logically, the Progressives who are against the monopolies must oppose the price-raising and production-cutting. And that lands them exactly where most orthodox economists are and have been all along.

Similarly, there can be no doubt about the agrarian revolt fast brewing against the AAA, and for the same reasons. The cotton crisis has served to demonstrate vividly how disastrous the whole concept of planned scarcity is. The Progressives' first anxiety is for the farmer. The West, as all political scouts agree, is rebelling against man-made crop destruction, now tragically outdone by drought and dust storms as if by some vengeance of Nature.

As for Labor, the basic complaint welling up from its ranks is that the cost of living has risen faster than wages. The "little business man," who feels himself victimized by NRA, the farmer and the worker are the first concern and the political customers of the Progressives. All three are suffering from approximately the same thing—the consequences of attempts to base domestic economy on scarcity instead of plenty.

* * * *

LOGICALLY, there is no place for the Progressives to go but to a policy of plenty as opposed to scarcity. And that is economic orthodoxy. Will they come to that? The answer depends a good deal on whether the New Deal will re-form itself in that direction, as has sometimes been indicated only to be canceled out by more silver-jugglery or announcements from the White House that prices must go still higher.

In any case, if the now politically lost Progressive tribes are to stand for something they will have to come to the orthodoxy of an economy of abundance. The inevitable corollary is a policy of reviving international trade, which in turn would necessitate currency stability. Yet all this is the very incarnation of what is miscalled conservative policy. If logic is to have a voice with them, the Progressives have no alternative policy open to them. They may even yet find that their true political soulmates are those once-despised Easterners who remain tainted with deep-dyed orthodoxy.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Wedding of a Nazi Chief.

Under a fleet of bombing planes, and with the entire army in attendance, the wedding of Gen. Otto Doe and Fraulein Gretchen Blank was celebrated today. It was one of the finest military displays in the history of the country, and, in the opinion of foreign military attaches, showed Germany to be in readiness for a major war at any time.

* * * *

The nuptial ceremonies were most impressive. The bridegroom rode to the church in an armored car under an escort of 46 tanks, six brigades of infantry and several thousand shock troops especially chosen for formal functions.

* * * *

The bride arrived on a gun carriage decorated with lilies, cherry blossoms and iron crosses. The bridesmaids looked very fetching in army ambulances, and the ushers cut a pretty figure as they dashed through the streets in trucks from the quartermaster's department.

* * * *

There was a slight delay at the church while identities were established to the satisfaction of the secret police, a feature of the activities at this point being a half-hour fight with non-Aryans. When order was restored the happy couple entered the edifice. The bride walked down the aisle on the arm of the Richtofen Bombing Squadron. The bridegroom was accompanied by a detachment from the Chemical Warfare Service.

* * * *

The bride looked charming in a gown of battleship gray and an atmosphere of the front line trenches. She carried a bouquet of nasturtiums and six days' marching equipment.

* * * *

The bridegroom wore his full regimentals and carried three gold-braided swords, a couple of ultimatums and the usual topographical maps. The poison gas squad brought up the rear and gave an added touch of beauty to the imposing scene.

* * * *

The happy bride was given away by her mother, assisted by the War Office and the Twenty-second Brigade of Wire Cutters.

* * * *

Goose-stepping was by the vested choir. Following the ceremony the couple left with the infantry for a honeymoon in the vicinity of the nearest war threat.

He served the church as acting pastor for one year, and has been, and is, executive secretary of the Columbia Baptist Association.

What Religion Means to Me

Mr. LaRoe contributes this week's article to The Post's series of informal discussions on the everyday application of religion.

By Wilbur La Roe, Jr.
Chairman Committee on Civic Affairs, Washington Federation of Churches.

Religion, like love, can not be defined; yet, like love, it is indispensable. Every thinking man must give thought to his relation to the mysterious universe in which we live. The philosophy of irreligion is that we are mere accidents—the fortuitous products of a physical change which took place when this planet, in its process of cooling off, happened to attain a temperature conductive to life. At that time, we are old, life cells began to multiply and when enough of them multiplied human beings resulted.

This barren philosophy may satisfy the pessimist or the athiest but it is not satisfying to the average person. The average man will not agree that the hapless bumping together of molecules or atoms or microbes could produce a rose, or that chemistry can explain why one man will sacrifice for another. Religion takes the facts of life and discovers in them a guiding purpose. It develops and refines our sense of appreciation so that we can see, even in the ordinary things of life, beauty and harmony.

But I am not an artist, and religion to me must be a practical thing. I have seen a man surrounded with luxury, but sunk in the depths of despair. And I have seen a woman, in the midst of the direst poverty and distress, stand unafraid and set her face resolutely toward the future. The woman had what we call, for want of a better name, faith. Faith has been defined as the thing that enables a man to put his foot down boldly where nothing can be seen.

Every true adventurer must do that. And every man who lives his life in fullest measure must live and love beyond himself. Christ used a cross to project himself and his love countless centuries beyond the end of his own physical life.

One has only to look at the world today to see the necessity of making a choice between hope and despair, between worry and faith, between war and peace, between hate and love, between accumulation and sacrifice, between selfishness and service, between racial intolerance and brotherhood, between profits and human kindness. And if one makes his choice honestly he is bound to find himself aligned with those who appreciate the value of true religion, because hope, faith, peace, love, sacrifice, service, brotherhood and good will among men and among nations are of the very essence of true religion.

The Cream of the Comic Crop!

Exclusively

in

The Washington Post

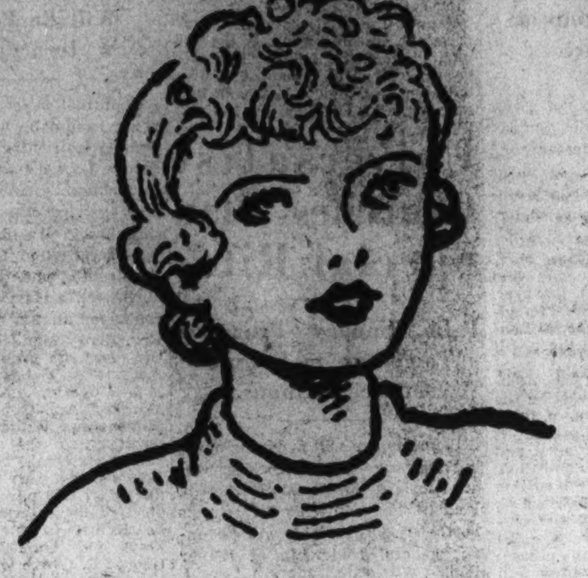
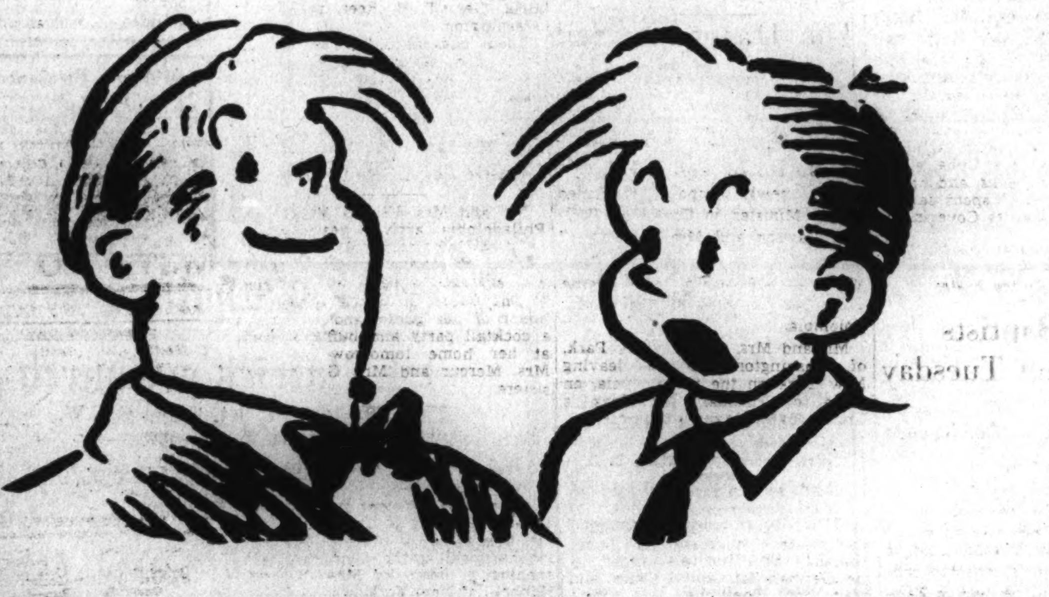
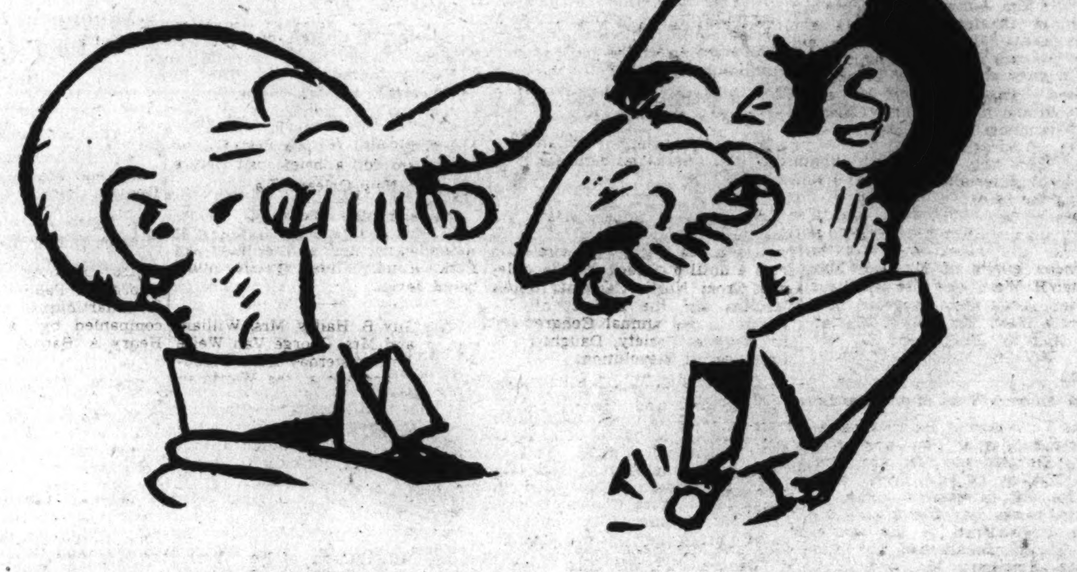
● TAKE all the escapades of Sinbad, Gulliver, Bulldog Drummond and Sherlock Holmes, mix well . . . and you'll have a rough idea of what DICK TRACY goes through in his fight for the right. A super-super-detective with a heart of pure platinum, Dick at present is embroiled with those despicable and desperate villains, Boris and Zora Arson. These two will stop at nothing to gain their foul ends . . . but then, neither will our hero in his brave efforts to foil them. After tomorrow, Dick Tracy will be an exclusive Post feature.



● WITH a face and figure that should grace the front row of the chorus and a come-back as snappy as your garter, WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner, has more ups and downs than the proverbial elevator man . . . and as many hearts on a string as you'll find in a deck of pinochle cards! And don't forget that other off-shoot from the Winkle family tree—the rascally, impudent kid brother, Perry! You'll find them in The Post every day of the week, including Sunday. Be sure to see them!



● THERE'S never a dull moment in the lives of the inhabitants of GASOLINE ALLEY. Here's the favorite comic strip in millions of American homes . . . beloved by grown-ups and children alike. Just now, Walt and Phyllis are wrapped up in a baby girl they've adopted . . . a waif left with a mysterious note on the running board of Walt's car. Others in this engaging menagerie are Corky, Skeezix and the good Doc. After tomorrow, you'll find them only in The Post . . . daily and, on Sunday, in a full page of color!



● JUST in case you don't already know it, THE GUMPS are the most happy-go-lucky crew of nit-wits ever to appear in any comic strip. Andy Gump, homely and lovable, and his wife Min, are just like a lot of people you know. As for Uncle Bim . . . he's the most unusual rich man ever to fall prey to designing females—namely, his blonde wife Millie and her scheming, mercenary mother. Then there are Chester Gump, the young white hope of this amazing family . . . the lugubrious maid ("Soup's On!"), and others.

Other Post comics, appearing daily, Sunday or both, include Benny, "Cap" Stubbs, Apple Mary, The Bungle Family, Joe Palooka, Dixie Dugan, Napoleon and Uncle Elby, Our Boarding House, Jane Arden and Alley Oop.

● AFTER tomorrow, "The Gumps," "Dick Tracy," "Winnie Winkle," and "Gasoline Alley" will no longer appear in The Washington Herald. The suit involving exclusive publication rights to these four comics came to a final conclusion in the District Supreme Court last week and an injunction prohibiting their publication in the Herald became effective April 10. However, through the courtesy of The Washington Post, in order to avoid inconvenience and expense to the Herald, these comics will appear in that newspaper tomorrow for the last time.
After tomorrow, however, they will appear exclusively, daily and Sunday, in The Washington Post.

Justice For Women Absorbs Interest Of Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Club Leader

Tree Planned In Recognition Of Her Service

Planting Exercises to Be Held Tuesday Afternoon in Meridian Park.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson leveled a broadside against clubwomen, in general, on the score that they were too much concerned with the social side, "the nut-cup phase," of club work, she certainly couldn't have had in mind women like Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, in whose honor a tree will be planted in Meridian Park Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Wiley has been a member of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs since 1912 and is now on the last lap of her term as president of that organization.

A summary of the work carried on during her administration reveals that in the last three years she has taken an active part in almost every outstanding civic and cultural movement in Washington, and has efficiently directed clubwomen of the Capital as they finished old projects, launched new ones and contributed to public welfare while they enriched their own lives.

Women an Important Factor.

Yet Mrs. Wiley takes all this as a matter of course. "Clubwomen today are naturally interested in national, civic and cultural activity," she said at her home in Ashmead place. "If women are inclined to take a more active part in public life than they were back in the early days of clubwork, it is because they realize they have something to contribute and are now an important factor in their city."

She said this as she led the way to the upstairs living room of the house where she has lived for 22 years. "Here," she said, walking into the room, "is where I do much of my work."

It was a homey place, from the cretonne curtains to the framed motto hanging on the mantelpiece. Books lined one wall and at either side of the opposite end of the room there were two more loaded bookshelves. All around the room—on the walls, on the mantel and on the desk—there were family photographs. There were numerous pictures of Mrs. Wiley's two sons and of Dr. Wiley, "father of the pure food law." There was, also, a snapshot of Dr. Wiley in his automobile, the third ever used in Washington; there was the medal that was struck for Dr. Wiley at the fortieth anniversary of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists; and there was a photograph of Mrs. Wiley herself, taken in 1898 and carried in Dr. Wiley's watch for ten years.

Talks of Many Things.

A solid blue rug, a couch, some blue wicker chairs and a typewriter stand completed the furnishings of the room. But the two card tables, temporarily set up and piled high with letters, pamphlets and circulars, revealed how busy the occupant of this room had been and would be.

As she sat in this room, Mrs. Wiley talked of many things—her sons (Harvey, jr., who was widely known at his birth as the "pure food baby," and John, who was graduated last June from the Naval Academy at the head of his class); her noted husband, and her work in the federation and the National Woman's Party.

A woman of wide interests, she admits one of her most absorbing concerns has always been justice for women. This caused her, as a girl, to write her graduating essay on "What Is Liberty?" This led her, later, to become an active worker for woman suffrage; to become president of the Elizabeth Cady Stanton Suffrage Club in 1907; to assist Miss Alice Paul and the congressional committee of the National Woman Suffrage Association in arranging the famous suffrage parade in 1913; and, finally, to join the 218 women who went to prison in order to focus attention of the country on women's demand for the privilege to vote.

Gruesome Experience.

"All I did to get that prison sentence was to stand at the White House gates with a banner reading, 'Mr. President, how long must women wait for liberty?' Going to prison was a gruesome experience, but now, looking back, I'm glad I was among those women who were willing to undergo any hardship for justice. I am still working for justice for women, and I am convinced that only by a constitutional amendment can discrimination against women be removed."

In this connection, Mrs. Wiley mentioned that her husband, also strongly in favor of women having equal civil and political rights with men, had been the first president of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage in the District. Proof of Dr. Wiley's approval of his wife's stand on equality for women is borne out by the dedication in his "Autobiography," which reads as follows:

"To Anna Kelton Wiley . . . My beloved wife, mother of my boys, who, without neglecting her motherly and household duties, has devoted her life to the welfare of women, first to secure for them the right to vote, and, second, equality before the law, with my full consent and approval, I dedicate this book, a simple narrative of my life, its victories and defeats. Her character and devotion to me have been strong factors in my success and her sympathy and advice inspiration in defeat."

Served in Many Capacities.

One of the most outstanding and most active women in Washington, Mrs. Wiley has served her city in numerous capacities. In 1931 she was made chairman of food conservation. Organizing the clubwomen of Washington and enlisting the aid of the domestic science departments of the District of Columbia Public Schools, she directed this work with the result that $3,000 worth of food was collected, canned and distributed to the needy. A year later she was in charge of the clothes conservation committee that had an important part in collecting and distributing 30,000 garments. Since her husband's death she has helped to continue the work in which he was interested by advocating the passage of the proposed new food law, designed to bring the first pure food law up to date to prevent false advertising.

Among those who will take part in the tree planting ceremony will be the chairman of the committee on forestry for the District of Columbia Federation, Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, who will present the tree and who has written a poem for the occasion; Marshall C. Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks; the Rev. H. H. Sterrett, rector of the All Souls' Episcopal Church; Mme. d'Aulby, Miss Rose Maxwell Dickey and the past presidents of the District of Columbia Federation—Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgins, Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Mrs. Virginia White Speed and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt.

MRS. HARVEY W. WILEY, outstanding clubwoman of Washington, who admits her absorbing interests—besides her sons—are still "justice for women" and the pure food law.

Research Shows That 4,000,000 in U. S. Are Twins

Latest statistics show there are 4,000,000 twins in the United States and that they comprise about 3.7 per cent of the population.

Their prospects in life are shown to be less than single individuals because there are two ways in which a pair of twins can be disrupted by death and only one for the individual. Despite this, their chances of survival as a pair are reported unusually good, as compared with the one person. A single male individual has a life expectancy at birth of 59.3 years, as compared with the male twins' expectancy of 46.1 years. A single female has an expectancy of 62.8 years and the female twins 50.3 years.

This data was compiled by the statistical department of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Tea Time Finds the Briton on Keen Edge

Habit or Characteristic of Race? That Is the Big Question.

By Ware Torrey.

LET NO ONE say that the average Englishman is unimpassioned, reserved and phlegmatic on all occasions. If you think so, you have not observed Englishmen at tea time.

It's not only tea itself that stirs a Briton. One of the most dramatic spectacles the empire affords is one of her sons selecting a tea cake. The tea cakes wait coyly in their paper frills. The choice lies usually between a pink, green or caramel frippery, decorated with spirals of whipped cream and spun sugar, that would send an American male shuddering toward cocktails.

There can be only one choice that is the right one for your Englishman, and as the slow process of elimination goes on, other tea cake addicts wait in sympathetic silence.

Habit or Racial Characteristic?

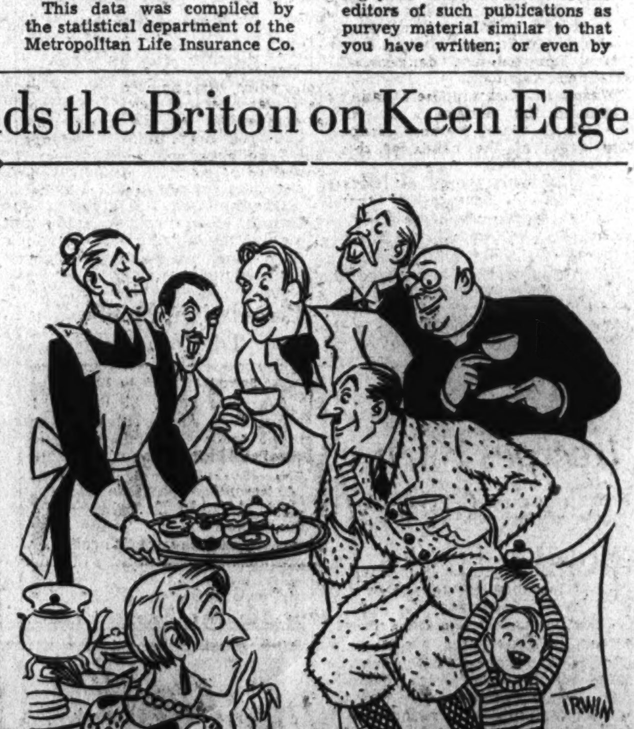
The ritual of tea pouring is too well known to need elaboration, with all its earnest banishment of tea leaves and measurement of hot water. And the two schools of taste are also well known, the toasted-scone followers and the wall paper sandwich converts.

But the question that burns unanswered is whether tea worship among Englishmen is a habit or a racial characteristic.

If a habit, its grim hold is worthy of a better cause. If a racial characteristic, it should be traced down to climatic causes, or scarcity of sweets in early life, or the strong man's need of a good excuse for taking an hour off.

Toward tea time, you see your English friend becoming absent-minded, distraught, and finally downright irritable. He needs his tea, poor dear.

And he knows it. Employes scamper from their desks to tea, with their superiors smiling benignly upon their flight. Or else there are crumbs among the papers, and tea drips in the inkwell, or ink drips in the tea well or what have you. In offices in which individuals don't fancy ink with their tea, there is the exodus of a general strike between 4 and 5 p. m.



Tea Inevitable on Island.

It may be no more than a cup of tea extract and a biscuit, alias a soda-cracker. But no man's a man without it, at tea time in England. Picture the postman pausing on his round, the clerk retiring round a corner of his counter, the doorman negotiating a cream bun in an off moment, and the lorry-driver balancing a crumpet over his steering wheel.

Something really should be done about a custom that makes such strong demands upon the nervous system. Perhaps a few pamphlets on the dangers of overeating and a handful of raisins might help. It would be a pretty pass to have the British coat-of-arms become the lion and the unicorn smiling across a tea cup rampant.

How Does One Break Into "The Writing Game," Woman Past 30 With Lots of Time and No Financial Worries, Wants to Know.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am very anxious to know about the best way to get into the writing game. Can you advise me if I should take a course in journalism or suggest a better way of acquiring the ability to write?

* * * *

I have always been interested in writing and would like to write incidents and experiences of my friends, as I have traveled extensively and have had quite a few interesting experiences myself. How can I make contacts with persons who could use my articles?

* * * *

I have had quite a number of letters printed in newspapers in different cities, which I sent in under my own and assumed names, but that is as far as I have gone. I have plenty of time on my hands and would like to become a writer and eventually get on the staff of some newspaper or magazine. I do not need the money but I want to express myself.

* * * *

Am I too old now to undertake this work, do you think? I am in the thirties. I will watch the paper for a reply.

Very truly yours, READER.

No Specific Formula.

DEAR READER: So far as I know, the only way to get into the writing game is to dedicate your efforts to the realization of that ambition. A course in journalism helps some; a course in creative writing, either in the university classroom or by correspondence, helps others; still others place themselves in the hands of an agent, who, for a reading fee, assists them in drafting their beginners' efforts into marketable shape.

* * * *

In his recent book, "City Editor," Stanley Walker, famous New York newspaperman, takes a rather pessimistic attitude regarding the opportunities for recognition accorded would-be journalists today. A well-known woman journalist, asked "What is the future of the newspaper woman?" replied, "Her future is behind her."

* * * *

As with so many professions, I should say success in writing is a matter of "1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent perspiration," to quote words attributed to the late Thomas A. Edison in defining genius. Most successful writers will tell you they "work like dogs" to keep whatever success they have earned by similar exertion.

* * * *

One thing is certain—one can not approach a writing job in the role of dilettante and expect to achieve an iota of personal satisfaction or public acclaim. Whether one deliberately elects writing as a career, or finds oneself wrestling with it by accident or necessity, it is a grimly relentless taskmasters, mentally and physically.

* * * *

And while I believe your age has no relevant bearing on your chances of success as a writer, your implied lack of imagination, initiative and sense of values does. A woman past 30 with plenty of time on her hands and no financial worries, with a purported desire to write, surely should be able to hit upon a more direct means of attaining her goal than writing letters under real or assumed names and mailing them to newspapers.

* * * *

How can you make contact with persons who could use your articles? By locating an agent, as I have said; by mailing your material direct to the editors of such publications as purvey material similar to that you have written; or even by approaching the magazine or feature editors of the daily newspapers here. The latter may find your stuff suitable for use, and if not, they may be willing to suggest a possible market for it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Survey Shows 11-15 Hour Day For Housewives

WHO SAYS housewives have an easy time? They work from 11 to 15 hours a day, according to a recent survey of Washington homes. The survey also shows a considerable portion of those hours is spent in the kitchen developing "sink fatigue." In order to learn how many trips a day are made to the sink and how much time is spent there, the International Nickel Co. installed an electric eye and a time-recording clock in homes selected for the study.

Results proved the size of the family has little control over the housewive's trips to the sink. Although the average number of trips was found to be 107, one woman who has a family of six made only 42 trips daily, while another woman with a family of the same size made 162 trips.

Average time spent at the sink was an hour and a half a day. The survey showed, however, that some women spend two hours and a half each day at their sinks, while other women spend less than an hour.

The number of trips and the amount of time spent was determined by the electric eye and time-recording clock placed in a group of kitchens for three-day periods. Each time the housewife went to the sink she interrupted the passage of a beam of light from one part of the apparatus to the other. The duration of the interruption was recorded by the delicate timing instrument.

Culbertson On Bridge

Low Card Significance.

Listening to bridge players discussing hands one might be led to believe that such cards lower than the ten-spot did not exist. Reverence is paid to Aces, deference to Kings, and love to Queens. Even the scamps known as Jacks hold key positions in the post-mortem discussions. Occasionally the eight and nine spots may come in for an honorable mention, but cards of lower rank seem to be forgotten. Alas, poor deuce!

Finessing Low Cards.

Great attention must be paid to low cards when a difficult hand is being played. Declarer's failure to finesse a seven-spot caused the loss of a game in today's hand.

East, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable; East-West part-score 90.

South:

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
1♣(1)	1♠(2)	1NT	Pass
2♡(3)	3◇	Dbl.	3♠
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A shaded opening bid, for without a rebiddable suit 3 honor-tricks are required; but the bid may be excusable in view of the part-score.

2—South is unwilling to make a takeout double since he does not want to force a heart response. If North makes a free heart response, South may eventually bid game in notrump.

3—East doesn't like the spade or diamond situation for notrump purposes.

The Play.

West opened the singleton ten of clubs, dummy played the Jack, East the King and declarer the Ace. A small diamond was led to the Jack, West failing to take with his King, and the seven of clubs was returned. East and South played low and West ruffed. A heart return was ruffed by declarer, and the King and Ace of trumps were cashed. The Ace of diamonds was laid down, followed by a low diamond which was won by West's ten. A heart return forced declarer to trump again.

At this point declarer's position was hopeless. West was bound to get in twice—once with the King of diamonds and once with the master trump—and South had only one trump left to stop the heart suit. He led the Ace of clubs and failed to make the contract.

Declarer should place the ten of diamonds in the West hand on the bidding and finesse the seven of diamonds at trick 2. Since this prevents the loss of more than one diamond trick, declarer will have just enough time to establish the diamonds without having his trumps exhausted by repeated heart leads.

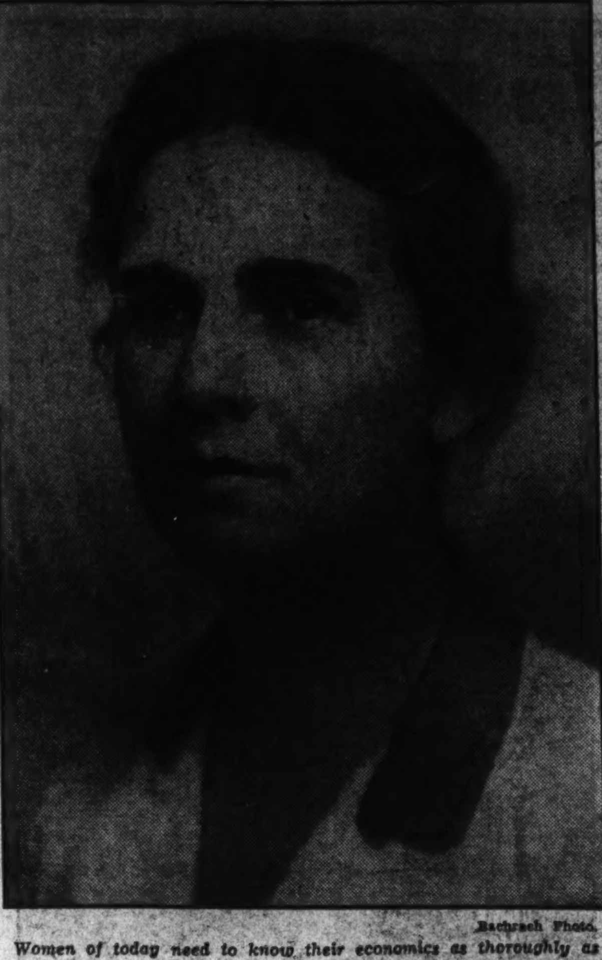
Economic Ills in U. S. Laid to Mental Laziness



Bachrach Photo.

Women of today need to know their economics as thoroughly as they know their fashions and their cookery, believes Miss Dorothy P. Hill, director of the Summer Institute for Social Progress at Wellesley College.

Americans Stereotyped in Their Thinking, Miss Dorothy P. Hill, Director of Social Institute, Charges.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE AMERICAN people are too easily managed and too easily pleased. They go in for stereotyped thinking, are swept along by the demagogue with the loudest voice, take too seriously such catch phrases as "back to the gold standard" and "balance the budget."

This is a true picture of the country, Dorothy P. Hill is convinced, after directing two sessions of the Summer Institute for Social Progress at Wellesley. She is equally convinced the United States will conquer its economic difficulties only when the people have acquired a common knowledge of economics.

The population as a whole is too reactionary, believes Miss Hill. In her opinion this attitude is the result not of inner convictions, but of a certain laziness of mind.

"Most persons rebel at a change in the social and economic order simply because it requires effort for them to think along new lines," the director of the Institute for Social Progress declared yesterday. "They would rather muddle along than study things out. Of course, most of them know so little about economics they can't study things out correctly."

Fosters Economic Study.

And that's where the Institute for Social Progress comes in. Its chief purpose is to study economic problems presented by persons recruited from indusrty, business and the professions. But closely allied to this main purpose is the secondary one of interesting everybody in economics, Miss Hill explained.

"We ought to have a common knowledge of economics just as we have of machinery," she said. "It would be almost impossible to sell even a woman an automobile with a defective motor today. Everybody now knows a good deal about machinery," she smiled. "I don't know why I said 'even a woman,'" she continued. "I don't think women are superior to men but I certainly believe they are equal."

If and when the people of the United States become interested in "popular economics," they will be able to separate the sheep from the goats among economists, Miss Hill believes.

Will Recognize Sound Planning.

"They will know better than to be taken in by a lot of half-baked theories, she said. "They will recognize sound planning when it is presented to them."

This sound planning, in Miss Hill's opinion, is likely to be along cooperative lines. Whatever it is, it will take two or three generations to put it into effect, she is convinced. Before the people of today can even set the machinery in motion they must study statistics, must learn the principles of economics, must determine to learn the truth about existing conditions, Miss Hill warned.

When the new social and economic order is eventually brought about it will result in higher standards of living than we know today and will utilize machinery to its fullest extent, she believes.

Calls Problem "Underconsumption."

"There's no reason why we shouldn't have higher standards of living," she said. "Our country is rich in resources. All we need is an intelligent plan. Our problem has never been overproduction but underconsumption."

Plenty of plans have been discussed at the Institute for Social Progress, Miss Hill admitted. At the session last July, 20 states and 52 vocations were represented. Farmers from the Middle West described their reactions to plowing under crops. A pale, undernourished young woman from the coal mine district of West Virginia told of the lack of food among the miners' families. Employers brought out some of the problems they are up against. Union leaders explained strike tactics. Lawyers expounded laws for the protection of property.

This summer the members of the institute will again be recruited from industry, business, homemaking, teaching, engineering and farming. A total of 130 men and women will be accepted for the sessions which will be held at Wellesley from July 6 to July 21. A few scholarships are awarded each year to persons who could not otherwise afford to attend.

Iowan's Trip Costs Only $1.

"Last summer," said Miss. Hill, "we sent $15 to a farmer in Iowa so he could make the trip. He spent less than a dollar of it. His wife packed enough food to last the entire journey and he picked up rides. If there were only more people as interested in learning about economics as that farmer was, we'd be able to start pulling the country out of its difficulties."

Miss Hill is now on a tour of the East, Middle West and South, telling groups about the institute, trying to work up enthusiasm for it. She has just ended a brief stay in Washington, where she talked with persons who hope to attend this year.

Shop Holding Sale on Brazil, Cashew Nuts

Toppers in Fetching Mode Placed on Display at Capital Store.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FROM THE DARK jungles of South America come the Brazil nuts. From the Malabar Coast of India come the cashews. And both Brazils and cashews may be found—especially priced today—at a large local nut shop.

The manager of this "nut-dom" has an amazing knowledge about all the tasty tidbits he displays. Of the Brazil nuts he said:

"These are found in pods shaped like coconuts and each pod contains about 20 or 30 nuts. The average weigiht for the pods I believe is about 5 pounds. They grow on towering trees, that sometimes reach a height of 100 feet. The natives who gather them always wait until calm, quiet days, for the breezes send these heavy pods crashing to the ground like canonballs. As a matter of fact they've been known to kill men in this manner."

The cashew nut, he explained, grows in a bluish gray shell which in turn grows out of a pear-shaped fruit. The shell itself is extremely tough and requires considerable ingenuity to open properly.

Since both cashews and Brazils come from such far corners of the world it seems amazing that they are free from a stale rancid taste. This fact, the manager said, is due to the expert attention and care given them during shipping.

So, now that you know the family background and environment of the cashews and Brazils just step right up and say hello to them today while they're especially priced.

Toppers in Fetching Models.

The business woman who appreciates the value of always looking fresh and just out of a band box will be bound to greet the "Roney Toppers" enthusiastically. And so will the traveler who likes to cram a lot in a small suitcase.

Let's start with just an ordinary "topper." It's approximately half of a blouse, goes on under your jacket, and fits like a small vestee. The "Roney toppers" are a little different. They are especially styled with a scarf-like collar which may be worn any number of ways to give either high or low neck effect.

The fetching models displayed in a local store come in silk seersucker and flat crepes and in vivid plaids, or pastels.

A Confection That's Different.

If you like big crispy nuts, toothsome figs and golden molasses made rich with butter, you'll be sure to fall for a certain confection made by a local candy artist.

She obtained her recipe from her grandmother, who in turn got it from hers, so you see, it's been passed down from one generation to the other and regarded almost as a family heirloom.

And, indeed, that's about what it is. Imagine owning a recipe which makes absolutely perfect candy, which is quite infallible, and which no one eles has access to. She's lucky! But so are we! For a very conservative cost we may order this delicacy by merely calling such and such a number. And, all those whose Lenten sweet tooth is yearning for a sugary bite have a treat in store if they send for some of this candy.

Men simply love it. Why? Well, who knows why men like what! Possibly because it's different. Probably because it reminds them of candy "grandmother used to make."

The shop will mail out orders for gifts if addresses and cards are sent. Remember, this delicacy will make an ideal remembrance, not only for Easter, but for birthdays, and bon voyage greetings.

It is put up in an attractive pound and half-pound boxes and made fresh every day.

Hats Made to Order.

Some women simply can't find a hat to suit them. If they try a Breton sailor it's about as becoming as the washtub. A smart "pillbox" looks like a misfitting soup bowl. And a beret gives them the style of a pancake.

But hearken, ye unfortunates. Mme. Marsi is in town today and Mme. Marsi knows her hats! She owns an exclusive hat shop in Vienna and has a clientele that sounds like a roster from the Almanac de Gotha.

She's in the hat department of a downtown store helping just a lot of unfortunates find exactly the hat that suits them. She does this by making them a hat right on their head. Imagine it. But you should see her work. First, you see a nuge awkward hat form. Then you see a kind of brimless cap, and then, presto! there's an Easter bonnet brimming over with chic.

If you are one of those poor unfortunates who can't, simply can't find a hat, then here are truly good tidings of great joy.

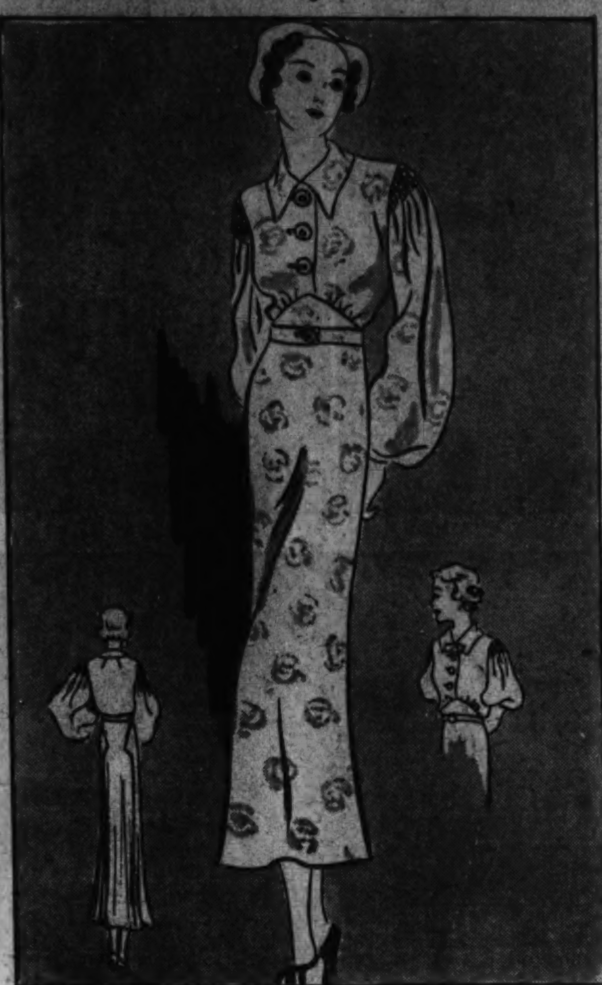
2,700 B. C. Relics Found.

Remains of iron implements and clear glass used 2,700 years B. C., have been reported unearthed from ancient Sumerian ruins by Dr. Henri Frankfort, of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The iron was a fragment of a blade still incased in a bronze handle. It was found at Tell Asmar, one of the neighboring cities of Ur in the southern section of Mesopotamia.

Gathers Are Newest Note In Dresses for Summer



Pattern, No. 908.

GATHERS, and lots of gathers, are one of the newest notes for spring. They are especially flattering in the lovely, soft materials like chiffon, cotton voile, or printed net. This one-piece gown would be ideal for a summer Sunday-go-to-meeting costume. It is easy to follow because of the large instruction chart that accompanies it. Note the shirring at the built-up waistline and at the tops of the large, full sleeves. And the demure high neck with its flat, shaped collar. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Complete yardage requirements are given on the pattern envelope.

What TODAY Means

"Aries."

IF APRIL 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

You may be thrown in contact on this date with a person you know has a quick temper, and you will show good judgment to do nothing that will arouse it. In answering questions it might be well to remember "the retort courteous" will prevent a reply discourteous and prevent a disagreeable argument. It will be tactful to comply with any reasonable request made by a member of your family or a friend, if it is possible to do so.

If inclined to feel hurt by someone you hold in high regard, having forgotten something affecting you, just remember you probably have at times suffered from your memory letting slip a date, event or matter, so console yourself with the thought it was unintentional.

In any social gathering on this date be careful not to let your mind "wool gather," which may cause some one present to comment unkindly on later as a lack of proper attention by you. Married and engaged couples, as well as those hoping to win some one's heart and hand, will do well to remember intimacy is no excuse for rudeness or rough horseplay.

If a woman and April 13 is your birthday, overcome any tendency to regard nearly everything in a frivolous light or manner if you hope to succeed. You have the aptitude required to achieve worth-while things if you will seriously apply yourself and do not permit social affairs to interfere with business. You have it in your own power to gain through love unlimited happiness. You should meet with a great deal of success in the regulation of domestic affairs. Chemistry, work of a hygienic nature, stenography, bookkeeping, as well as teaching, are among the lines of activity in which you should do well.

The child born on April 13 when it leaves high school, very probably will have definite ideas of its own regarding what it wishes to do and any strong opposition on your part may be a mistake.

If a man and April 13 is your natal day, safeguard your own interests. Do not depend on others to advance your cause. Medicine, law, art, architecture, engineering, as well as chemical research work, may offer both interesting as well as lucrative employment.

Successful people born on April 13:

James Harper, publisher.
George E. Badger, lawyer and Senator.
Seth Adams, inventor and manufacturer.
William H. Beard, artist.
Denison Chase, inventor.
Samuel H. Scudder, scientist.

Physician Tells How Diabetes Signs Appear

Warns Lot of Insulin Must Be Taken Despite Early Treatments.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FEW of us can forget the hopeless picture presented by diabetic children before the discovery of insulin scarcely more than a dozen years ago. The prospect was for a pleasing one. In spite of the efforts of the physician and the parents, these children literally starved to death.

And then came the discovery of insulin, a precious gift to suffering humanity. It offered afflicted children the right to live, to be happy, to play, and to develop into normal men and women. There are but few cases that will not respond to careful dietetic management and the appropriate use of insulin.

Any child who has excessive thirst, a voracious appetite, and profuse excretion of urine should be examined for the presence of diabetes. In many cases the condition will appear suddenly. There is a loss of weight, and parents will usually notice an increase in irritability, disturbed sleep, spells of anger, or impatience, and, in spite of the best parental control, many will break over the dietetic boundaries.

Insulin Reactions Risky.

Even though recognized and treated early, the symptoms will generally increase for a time and a large amount of insulin will be required. After a few years, however, if wisely managed, the disease will steady down so that in young adult life a smaller amount of insulin is required.

It is not always necessary to keep the child entirely sugar-free, as to do so would require too frequent insulin injections of doses so large that an insulin reaction might occur. Rather than run the risk of insulin reactions it is often wiser to permit the blood sugar to remain at a level a trifle higher than normal.

During the period of adolescence—and in many children this begins as early as 12 or 13 years of age—strict adherence to a diet is difficult. Although most of these children understand their status thoroughly, yet with the enlargement of the spirit of adventure and of freedom they are inclined to break away from the rigid diet. They will do this occasionally even though they know the consequences. Gradually wisdom comes and they are just as anxious as anyone to control such accidents as coma and the reaction that follows an overdose of insulin. An intelligent child, beyond the age of 5 or 6, can be taught to follow a diet and to weigh his food.

The psychological attitude of diabetic children is interesting. Although at first they may feel somewhat handicapped, most of them regain confidence as they study their own cases and gain the upper hand.

Hicks, 4304 Tenth street northeast, for her recipe for rose and thistle salad; second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. G. P. Hudson, Twenty-first and C streets northwest, for her recipe for spring favorite, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Philip Tarr, Lanham, Md., for her recipe for spring bouquet salad.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Dorothy Nalley, 371 Charles street, Winchester, Va., for her recipe for pineapple and strawberry salad; to Mrs. George Canalle, Winchester, Va., for her recipe for lettuce and cress salad with Roquefort dressing; to Mrs. E. H. Miller, 1321 Buchanan street northwest, for her recipe for frozen cheese salad, and to Mrs. Grace Plummer, 1210 Minnesota avenue northeast, for her recipe for jellied vegetable spring salad.

Rose and Thistle Salad.

6 medium-sized tomatoes
6 lettuce leaves
6 stalks celery
⅛ pound Roquefort cheese
6 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon chopped pimiento
Red button radishes
Spring onions

Peel and chill tomatoes. Cut each from top nearly down to bottom into six sections. Partly fill with diced celery, top with Roquefort dressing, sprinkle with pimiento and encircle the whole with radish roses and onion thistles placed alternately.

Roquefort dressing: Beat cheese, mayonnaise and lemon juice thoroughly.

Thistles: Cut onions into 2½-inch lengths. Stand them on end and cut downward several times nearly to bottom, like a paintbrush. Leave roses and thistles in cold water an hour or more, to open and curl before serving.

Spring Favorite.

1 fresh pineapple
2 carrots
French salad dressing
Cream cheese or cottage cheese
Watercress

Cut the pineapple lengthwise, leaving some of the stem ends on each section. Take out center part and cube. Grate carrots and add enough cheese to form this into small balls. Roll balls in grated carrot that has not been mixed with cheese.

Place carrot cheese balls and cubed pineapple in the pineapple shells which have been placed on the salad plates. Place watercress on each side of the pineapple shell. Serve with French salad dressing.

French Salad Dressing.

1-3 cup mild vinegar and lemon juice (little more than half lemon juice)
1 cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon paprika

Mix ingredients and beat thoroughly. Place in refrigerator and shake well before using.

Spring Bouquet Salad.

1 large new green cabbage
2 small crisp carrots
9 radishes
Russian dressing

Russian Dressing.

½ cup mayonnaise
1 hard cooked egg (chopped)
2 tablespoons chili sauce
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon chives
2 tablespoons chopped nuts

Select a large, green, crisp cabbage. Pick off the outer leaves, wash and dry thoroughly. With a sharp knife hollow out the cabbage until you have an attractive bowl with the outer leaves standing out as little frills. Use about half of the center cabbage and shred it finely. Wash and dry the carrots and six of the radishes and shred them, using a medium vegetable shredder. Combine with cabbage. Combine the dressing in the order given. Mix lightly with salad, fill the cabbage bowl and garnish with the remaining radishes, cut into roses.

Pineapple and Strawberry Salad.

1 small fresh pineapple
1 tablespoon chopped mint leaves
1½ cups fresh strawberries

Peel pineapple and remove eyes. Cut in slices and then in cubes. Chill. Wash, hull and chill the strawberries. Combine the fruit and arrange on a bed of mint. Sprinkle with the mint and serve with honey dressing.

Honey Dressing.

3 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon of lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt

Beat together the salad oil, honey, lemon juice and salt until well blended. Use at once.

Lettuce and Cress Salad With Roquefort Dressing.

1 head lettuce
2 bunches cress
1 green pepper
1 canned pimiento
Bunch of radishes

Shred head of lettuce coarsely and arrange it with watercress, half and half on individual plates. Pick over the cress and cut off coarse stems. Wash and chill before serving. Pile lightly in center of salad plates. Surround with the shredded lettuce. Sprinkle cress with diced pimiento and lettuce with chopped green pepper and garnish with radish rose. Carefully spoon over dressing and serve at once.

Dressing.

Rub a deep narrow bowl with a cut kernel of garlic, place in it ¼ pound of Roquefort cheese crumbled, ½ teaspoon powdered mustard, ¼ teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Work to paste and add ¾ cup of oil and ¼ cup cider vinegar. Beat with rotary egg beater until smooth.

OBJECT— Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

On her eighteenth birthday, Katrina Harman learns that she has lost her fortune and that Tazewell Bronson, whom she loves, also loves her, but has no intention of marrying anyone. Ill-advisedly, she lets him pay for some frocks she has ordered and gives him her I. O. U. for them. She can not repay him and is determined not to see him again, although he tries to continue his attentions. After a wearying search, she gets a job as a waitress. One day she is called to serve a luncheon party and finds that it is Tazewell who is entertaining. In her perturbation, she drops a tray on the frock of his guest and humiliated leaves the restaurant. Before she does so, the proprietor tells her Tazewell wants to see her. She refuses to see him. At home in her boarding house, she is talking to Ann Graham when a note comes from Mrs. Fremys-Dillon asking to see her. Katrina had applied for a position as her companion, but had been rejected; now the place is open again and Katrina is to come at once. Mrs. Fremys-Dillon spends the first hour reciting the trials she endured at the hands of her former companions.

"TO my unutterable amazement the sweet-faced Loula Sharpe, in her offended vanity, actually accused me of not knowing what I was talking about," Mrs. Fremys-Dillon continued. "She said I wasn't half as smart as I thought I was; that other people knew a thing or two and that she understood and pronounced French quite as well, if not better than I. Have you ever heard of such downright ignorance and impudence? I certainly never have and it cost this companion her job, for I ordered her to pack her things and go."

"And she left at once, I presume," concluded Trina, wondering why Mrs. Fremys-Dillon was honoring her, a comparative stranger, with all these confidences.

"No, not at once," said the "confider." "Not until after she'd staged a regular exhibition right here in this room. The vulgarian . . . that's what she turned out to be, a vulgarian . . . had the temerity to call me an opinated hypochondriac, sick nowhere but in the head . . . just note the commonness of her phraseology. You can imagine how it made me shiver.

"But to pass on to the next companion, Mamie Udell. She came to me highly indorsed by the Rollstone Employment Agency. And she started off fairly well. But, unfortunately, she drank. Yes, the second day I smelled Scotch whisky on her breath and spoke about it, since that is an odor I can not abide. After that she continued to drink, though she disguised the liquor smell with mints. I know this because I got the odor of peppermints every time the woman came near me, and on the fourth day the most terrible thing happened . . ."

Trina watched the "semi-invalid" fortify herself with deeper and deeper inhalations from the Lalique bottle and inquired: "What was this terrible thing if . . . if you care to tell me?"

Had Been Drinking.

"I intend to tell you." And in a voice dramatically lowered, "Mamie Udell all but poisoned me. With a disinfecting solution of carbolic acid. She'd just returned from her afternoon outing drunk, you see. So irresponsibly drunk that instead of giving me my before-dinner tonic . . . I'd dismissed Miss Purvis then and it was the companion's duty to give me the tonic . . . she brought in from the bathroom the carbolic solution which was about the same color as the tonic. And I'd—I'd burned my lips and tongue before I discovered the difference."

"How horrible—and dangerous!" exclaimed Katrina.

"Wasn't it? Just suppose I hadn't discovered the mistake . . . in time! Think of my narrow escape from death at the hands of this supposedly 'settled' woman!

"All of which brings me back to you, child. Because of these shocking experiences with older companions I've decided, as I wrote you, to give you, and youth, a chance . . . provided you can assure, convince me indeed . . . in the event I engage you . . . that courting and boy friends will not distract you from your duties to me . . . and provided you will promise me, on your word of honor, not to marry within, let us say, at least a year. I abominate changing companions. Now can you, in conscience, give me this assurance, make me this promise? Think well before you answer."

Trina thought "well." And long. She thought about Tazewell Bronson, the one and only boy friend for whom she'd ever even been tempted to care and on whom she'd bestowed — or rather, squandered, yes, looking back "squandered" was the verb—all her love.

She thought about their courtship. About the grand, after-graduation "whirl," so thrillingly begun and so abruptly terminated on that night of nights when all her joys had seemed to come to such a sudden and breath-taking end.

And, lastly, Katrina recalled her meeting with Taz in the Blue Moon Restaurant that very same day, scarcely two hours before. But could it have been just two hours since she'd gazed into Tazewell's astonished eyes and then dropped the luncheon tray, spilling hors d'oeuvres on his sister's dress?

Money-as-a-substitute-for-love! Wasn't that what he'd been determined to force upon her? Otherwise why had he deliberately gone upstairs and waited in Paul Doremus's private office for the restaurateur to take her to him?

Well, for once he'd waited in vain, this flirtatious rich man's son, accustomed to having girls at his beck and call and to getting his way in everything.

Again that warning of Elena, her boarding-school chum, flashed into Trina's mind. The laughing and yet not jesting advice to beware of the charmer, the love-maker who no girl seemed able to resist. But just to prove to him and to herself her own "immunity" hadn't she, though love-struck, refused absolutely and consistently to succumb, only to find later on—in those "off-guard" moments at the Club Miramar—that she, too, like all the rest, had fallen victim to his resistless line, as Ellie had described it.

Victim that she was, however, she'd had the courage and the pride to leave him waiting in that private office of the restaurant while she'd returned to her room and begun another fruitless search of those eternal help wanted ads. Then, in her extremity, when she was all frantic about her joblessness, had come the summons to rush to the Ritz Carlton. And here she was now, at the Ritz, she, the ex-waitress, in this luxurious bedroom, athrill with the expectancy of lining up another job. One much, much-better-paying, too, than the place forfeited on Taz Bronson's account.

Answer Wanted.

Katrina, "thinking" on, glanced at her "summoner," the semi-invalid who, now affecting a becoming Madam Recamier sofa pose, was again sniffing at her smelling salts. Sniffing, also doing some reflecting on her own account as she adjusted her lorgnette, always more of an ornament than a necessity, trained inquisitive eyes on Trina and said:

"I told you to ponder your answer. That's true. But you're taking such a frightfully long time to . . . to respond to my question that I'm wondering if . . . if you aren't encumbered with some sentimental tie or attachment that stands between you and the position I have to offer. It isn't your fault if such is the case. Don't think I blame you."

"Yes, any 18-year-old girl might . . . would indeed be likely to have an interfering love affair . . . or affairs. In my first note I reminded you that 'youth would be served,' didn't I?"

Katrina nodded, which was all she was permitted to do, and Mrs. Fremys-Dillon continued:

"I also wrote, as I distinctly remember, that no girl, unless she was one out of a hundred, could be expected to have the stamina, poise, steadiness and devotion to duty that I require in a companion. You recall that, too, I suppose."

"Perfectly. What's more, I saw your point, disappointed, crestfallen as I was over not getting the job-as-companion. At the same time . . . you may think it strange but I do hope you won't think it conceited of me . . . notwithstanding my youth, I felt deep down that I possessed those qualities you mentioned, those you thought I lacked."

"Then you figured you really were that rare exception, 'the hundredth girl'?"

Ordinary Sheet Has a Life Span Of 250 Washings

The life span of the ordinary sheet is 250 washings.

This is just one of the facts proven by a recent investigation conducted by the United States Institute for Textile Research.

Experiments were made on sheets that were used and laundered daily in hotel service and some sheets that were laundered continuously without use. Those not in use were good for 364 washings.

It was also discovered that sheets change their size, growing shorter and wider. As they lose about 8 per cent, or 5 inches, in length, they gain about 6 per cent, or 4 inches in width. This is due to the method of ironing the sheets from selvage to selvage.

After six weeks' use the average sheet grows slightly thicker and from then on diminishes slightly. This thinning out is more conspicuous on the inner portions which lose about 30 per cent as contrasted with 10 per cent loss in the outer portions.

Mirror Buttons Appear.

Plain velvet blouses are fastened with colored square mirror buttons to tone. The blouses are to be worn with tailored suits.

Nice to Sign Opposition's 'Suicide' Bill

Baltimore Treasurer's Tax Suit Plan to Become Law.

County Commissioners to Lose Extension of Powers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 12.—Governor Harry W. Nice announced today that he would sign the Baltimore county treasurer's bill that weathered a series of storms through the legislative mill, but at the same time expressed his belief that proponents of the measure had "written their political suicide."

He made this statement after telling a delegation of 150 citizens of the county who appeared before him that he would veto another bill designed to give additional powers to the county commissioners in matters affecting the metropolitan district.

The treasurer's bill provides that legal actions bearing upon collection of delinquent taxes shall be taken for the treasurer by the attorney or assistant attorney to the board of commissioners. Under existing law, the treasurer names his own attorney.

The Governor's decision was given after he had heard a committee in opposition to the measure. The group was composed of State Parole Commissioner Gaylord L. Clark, Victor P. Noyes, Walter Crothers, Delegate Milton Tolle and Harrison Rider, one of the Democratic leaders in the county. The Governor's statement was:

"This bill represents purely a partisan matter that I am sorry has been projected into my deliberations. I am asked to side with one section as against another in a way with which I am not affiliated.

"Passed by a Democratic Legislature the proponents won out by the skin of their teeth. Had I been a member of the Senate or House, I would have been most vigorously opposed to the bill. But it has been sanctioned by the two branches of the Legislature, both predominantly of the same party as the treasurer of the county.

"This is not an easy thing for me to say. I have no yardstick by which I may measure a problem of that kind, except the yardstick of partisanship in effect in the two branches of the assembly. I shall sign the bill, but I think its proponents have written their political suicide."

Policeman Wanted At Middletown

Town Unprotected as Job Goes Begging.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., April 12.—For the first time in history, Middletown is without police protection. No applications for the position were filed with the newly-elected Burgess and Commissioners at the organization meeting last night. Under the town's charter, no appointments can be made unless application is filed with the board in writing.

William E. Lutz, who has served as policeman for several years, said the pay was too small and he will not be an applicant for reappointment. The job pays only $25 a year, but the officer made only one arrest in five years.

L. Osmond Derr, one of the holdover members of the Commissioner board, was named assistant burgess; Walter L. Remsberg was reappointed clerk, and Leslie N. Coblentz, attorney.

U. of Va. Founder's Day Rites Will Honor Jefferson Today

Services at University and at Monticello Tomb Planned.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 12.—Thomas Jefferson, founder of the University of Virginia, will be honored here tomorrow at the university and at his tomb at Monticello in memorial services commemorating the 192d anniversary of his birth.

Floral tributes from President Roosevelt and Gov. Peery will be placed on the tomb along with the wreaths of patriotic societies and other organizations in ceremonies tomorrow afternoon. Morning exercises will be held at the university, when Bainbridge Colby, of New York, will give the Founder's Day address on "The Jeffersonian Tradition and Woodrow Wilson."

At 11 a. m. the governing board, faculty and students of the university will form an academic procession down the scenic lawn from the rotunda to Cabell Hall, where President John Lloyd Newcomb will present the speaker.

The exercises at Monticello will be held at 3 p. m., and will include a procession from the mansion to the grave. Lieut. Col. E. M. Watson, military aid to President Roosevelt, will lay a wreath in behalf of the President, and in the absence of Gov. Peery a representative will place a floral decoration on the grave for the State of Virginia.

Societies invited by Stuart G. Gibboney, president of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, to participate in the ceremonies, include the Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames, and others. Descendants of the Jefferson family, and the City of Charlottesville also will be represented.

Preceding the afternoon services, President and Mrs. Newcomb will give a luncheon at which guests of honor will include Mr. and Mrs. Colby, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Watson, Frederic W. Scott, of Richmond, rector of the university, and the Rev. Hugh Black of Union Theological Seminary, New York.

Mr. Colby's address will touch on two figures closely associated with the University of Virginia. Woodrow Wilson was a student in the university's law school from 1879 to 1881, and his room on West Range is preserved as a shrine.

Thomas Jefferson, who obtained the charter for the university in 1819, designed it and supervised its construction, was born at Shadwell, April 13, 1743, and died at Monticello, July 4, 1826, a year after the opening of the first session.

The day's exercises will be brought to a close with a concert tomorrow night by the combined glee club of Sweet Briar College and the University of Virginia, which will inaugurate the first annual musical festival in honor of Jefferson as a patron of art and music. It is planned to have the choral organizations of all State colleges join in future Founder's Day concerts.

Moffatt Backs Levy on Sales To Aid Schools

Portsmouth Lawyer Convinced Average Taxpayer Would Be Better Off.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 12.—Robert W. Moffatt, Portsmouth attorney and member of the House of Delegates, said today he favors a sales tax to relieve real estate of its tax burden and as a means of assuring a modern school system for the State.

Here to discuss taxation with State officials, Mr. Moffatt said a general sales tax of 2 per cent or less will mean operation and financing of the school system by the State and will enable the localities to reduce taxes to the extent of present contributions to the educational system.

"A sales tax," he said, "not only will make unnecessary local taxation against real estate for schools, but will enable the State to readjust its present tax system upon a more equitable basis. It should make possible the abolition of the individual income tax, the local tax on tangible personal property and other levies which experience has shown yield only a limited amount of money, are evaded by most of the people and are a general nuisance.

Seen Much Fairer.

"I believe that the small group of citizens who now pay all the taxes for the support of their local, State and National Government will find that a sales tax, applicable to all, is much fairer than a string of taxes which are applicable only to the people who own property. A sales tax should reduce the tax bill of the average tax payer without increasing the taxes now paid indirectly by the poor man with every purchase he makes."

Perplexities of Virginia's relief problem, stirred anew by FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins' reiterated demands that the State would have to spend $5,000,000 in caring for its unemployed or lose all Federal assistance in this field, gave promise today of continuing indefinitely.

From Gov. Peery came a clear indication he would not reveal his position until he received official confirmation from Mr. Hopkins of statements which the Governor said have appeared as yet only in newspapers.

Municipal Meeting.

Mayor W. R. L. Taylor, of Norfolk, chairman of the League of Virginia Municipalities' committee on relief, announced a meeting of his group would be called next week, when it hoped to confer with Gov. Peery and VERA Director William A. Smith, but withheld his own opinion pending developments.

Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg, floor leader of the House of Delegates and slated for the Speakership, protested he had been trying for two years to fathom the intentions of Hopkins as regards Virginia, but had not succeeded in getting a clear picture of what the State was expected to do.

If the Federal Government enforces its demands that Virginia contribute such a sum as $5,000,000, observers here have asserted, the State has no other recourse than a sales tax enacted by a special or regular session of the Assembly.

Harrisonburg's Stores Report Business Gains

Increase Exceeds Normal Improvement in Sales and Credit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 12.—Retail business and credit conditions are considerably improved in Harrisonburg, according to a survey made here today among bankers and business men. The improvement over last year is greater than the normal seasonal pick-up.

Department stores and other merchants report better business in spite of the unfavorable weather. Harrisonburg is the trading center for 80,000 agricultural residents and the retail trade here is a barometer for conditions generally in this section.

Banks report increased deposits and more active accounts. The increased number of loans made were for business houses and were repaid promptly, it was said. Installment buying payments are being met promptly and general collections are better than they have been for several years.

Real estate agents say property values are improving. Recent public sales have resulted in spirited bidding—in contrast with the lull of the last several years.

A number of new business places are being opened. Automobile sales are increasing. The city's four largest industrial plants are employing nearly their normal number of employes.

Police Chief to Retire.

Elkton, Md., April 12 (AP).—George C. Potts, for the last 26 years chief of police here, has announced that he will retire next month, the close of the town's fiscal year. His successor has not yet been selected.

Meat's Rise Called Boon To Sea Food

Maryland Game Officer Advises Watermen to Advertise.

Swepson Earle Declares Packers Are Expecting Beef Famine.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 12.—Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner, said today that soaring meat prices and the increasing meat shortage offer an unusual opportunity to the sea food industry.

Meat prices are advancing so as to be almost prohibitive, he said. Yet large meat packers assert such a meat shortage already exists that they are unable to fill orders.

Earle returned today from Chicago, where he attended the meeting of the National Planning Council of Commercial and Game Fish Commissioners. While there he interviewed a number of leading packers.

"They claim that before the summer is over beef and pork will be unobtainable," the conservation official asserted. "Lamb and mutton are not affected, but the demand for meat will cause a heavy drain on the normal sheep production which must materially advance prices."

As prices climb, he said, many people will turn to fish. If water resources are conservatively handled, permanent benefits may be expected in every branch of the sea food industry.

"At the present time sea food consumption is about 1,000,000,000 pounds below 1929," Earle stated. "It was the general opinion of the council in Chicago that the consumption can now be greatly increased while holding prices in range of the consuming public. This should be a bright prospect not only to Maryland packers and watermen, but to the national fishing industry."

Earle disclosed that he is attempting to have the Federal Government aid Maryland establish a huge fish hatchery on the Chesapeake Bay to propagate commercial fish. He said he is encouraging watermen's associations to begin an advertising campaign to take advantage of the meat situation.

Relief Head Flays Refusals of Work

Staunton Official Warns Jobs Must Be Accepted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 12.—Harold G. Chandler, VERA administrator for the Staunton area, announced here yesterday that persons who refuse offered work will be dropped from relief rolls.

He said he had received complaints that some persons on relief had been offered farm work and refused it because they feared they would be stricken from relief. He emphasized that taking of odd jobs—and day by day work—does not make a person ineligible for relief.

Chandler said every effort is being made to curtail the number of cases in Rockingham, Augusta and Highland Counties and in the cities of Staunton and Harrisonburg. There is a total of 1,421 in the area.

The administrator also made it plain that those who refuse to plant and work gardens will be dropped.

At the Boerner store the thieves carried away aand looted the cash register, which was found later on the Jacks Mountain road to Gettysburg. Only a small amount of money was taken from the church.

Official Visions Power Project Boosting Sales

Will Open New Market for Electrical Appliances, Ozlin Predicts.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, April 12.—Creation of an important new market for electrical appliances as a result of the proposed rural power program in Virginia was predicted today by Chairman Thomas W. Ozlin, of the Virginia Corporation Commission, which advocates construction with relief funds of new lines that would carry current to 25,000 farm homes now without it.

Country residents who call personally or write a flood of letters daily to the commission are enthusiastic about the prospects of obtaining current under the expansion plan, Mr. Ozlin said. Many indicate their intention to buy mechanical refrigerators and radios, in addition to lighting appliances, should the plan become effective.

A survey made by engineers in February forms the basis of the commission's plans, which call for expenditure of more than $7,000,000. It is proposed to form a non-profit corporation which would direct construction and operation of the system, but definite plans are lacking until allocations of the rural electrification funds in the new Federal relief appropriation are made.

Of the huge amount asked by President Roosevelt as a recovery measure, $100,000,000 was earmarked for rural power expansion. The electrical appliance market which would be created by new power outlets financed by this sum throughout the country would be appreciable, Judge Ozlin estimated.

It has been learned that Virginia property owners whom the new lines would benefit can finance the wiring of their homes and lines connecting their houses with the high-voltage cables through the Federal Housing Administration.

Census Lists More Farms In Virginia

4,000 Added Since 1930 in Valley-Piedmont Rural Section.

Depression Partly Accounts for Increase, Says Supervisor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 12.—The number of farms under cultivation in the Seventh Congressional District (ten Valley and three Piedmont counties) increased 20 per per cent, or more than 4,000, during the last five years, it was announced today by the 1935 Farm Census officials on finishing their work for the district and closing the Harrisonburg district.

The 1935 count were of farms in the counties of Amherst Augusta, Bath, Clarke, Highland, Frederick, Nelson, Page, Rockbridge, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Rappahannock, Warren, and in the cities of Harrisonburg, Winchester, Buena Vista and Staunton, 25,150. The 1930 census showed 20,765 farms in the same counties and cities.

Norman D. Foster, census supervisor for Virginia; L. C. Dawson, district supervisor, and T. T. Showalter, assistant district supervisor, declared the increase is due to the return to farms, for subsistence, to sales of parts of farms to pay off debts and to FERA and VERA in placing indigent families on small farms.

The farm census did not take into consideration the size of the farm. It included all land operated for farming purposes whether by tenants, owners, shareholders or leaseholders.

The number of farms in this section of the State, as revealed by the 1935 census compared to the 1930 census:

Counties.	1935	1930

Augusta	3,862	2,635

Cities.
Harrisonburg	18	18
Winchester	53	20
Buena Vista	57	24
Staunton	10	10
Total	25,150	20,765

Rockingham County leads this section in the number of farms—3,917, an increase of 500 in the five years. Augusta County, however, showed the largest increase—1,200.

Merchants Protest Sprinkler Charge

Declare System Benefits Entire Community.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 12.—Forty industrial and business men of Hagerstown have protested to the mayor and city council against the annual $50 and $75 charge imposed by the city for sprinkler systems and have asked that the charge be removed.

The petitioners presented letters from Cumberland and Baltimore, which stated that the officials of the former city considered the installation of sprinkler systems as a benefit because they reduced the fire hazards and because of this no charge is made. Baltimore officials said the minimum sprinkler charge is $10 annually.

Spokesmen for the petitioners told the mayor and council that the installation of sprinklers cost the city nothing and that when water was used it was charged against the property owner. But they thought it unfair to charge them for service benefitting the city. The mayor and council promised to consider the petition.

For nearly a year the company has been operating on the old United States mining property.

1,500 Cheer As U. of Va. Assails War

Speakers Demand Overthrow of Traitors Causing Conflicts.

Faculty Members Deplor Effect of Struggles on People.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 12.—Approximately 1,500 University of Virginia students, faculty members and citizens of Charlottesville jammed Cabell Hall here today to hear seven speakers attack war as "stupid," and "senseless," marking the university's official participation in the Nation-wide student demonstration for peace.

A small, organized group of students in the rear of the audience broke into a prolonged tumult of boos and catcalls when Francis Franklin, a member of the student anti-war committee, declared it was the purpose of the movement "never to support the Government in any war under any conditions."

He was cheered, however, when he said that if the "capitalists and imperialists force us into another senseless war, we will rise up and overthrow the traitors."

Dean Deplores War.

Franklin, the son of a Baptist minister, asserted that "we, the people, have no desire to fight in any war. Whenever any government becomes destructive of the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, it is the right and duty of the people to alter or abolish it," he added.

Dean Ivy F. Lewis, of the university, deplored the disastrous biological results of war, and declared that they outweighed all social and economic destruction. He favored, however, adequate defense, "against every enemy, whether he comes from across the sea or rises in our midst to destroy American traditions and institutions which have made us great."

Dr. Robert K. Gooch and Dr. Scott Buchanan, of the university faculty, addressed "fellow demonstrators" on the stupidity and irrationality of war, saying that nations should have reached the stage where they can settle disputes by arbitration. Winfrey Smith, of Fredericksburg, and Edwin McClintock, of Clarendon, antiwar committeemen, also spoke.

All Nations Armed.

Joseph B. Matthews, of New York, who spoke at the invitation of the antiwar committee, declared that "never before in peacetime history has the world been so well prepared for war," and added that the United States was in the front rank, "without the consent of the overwhelming majority of the people."

Matthews declared that the movement was a "strike for life against death," and launched into a bitter attack on certain newspapers, radio stations, magazines and newsreels for building up "militarism and a jingoistic spirit."

Two Visiting Players Again Are Applauded for the Charm of Their Personalities

Those Herberts Leave Indelible Sense of Worth

Win Host of Local Friends; Vincent Lopez Shines; Theater Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The spirit of showmanship probably is better epitomized in the career of Hugh Herbert and his charming wife, who was Rose Epstein, than in any other couple touring out of Hollywood.

In the course of years, I have encountered a surprising number of practitioners of the art of the theater. Many of them have been upstage, austere, forbidding and totally artificial. The artificiality, more often than not has been completely obvious. They have been "putting on an act," as the saying goes.

These Herberts, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh, I have met several times, now. They have yet to be anything but the salt of the earth. No pretense, no subterfuge, no bunk, as we have a way of saying about the showshops—just "home folks," the kind you like, and are willing, to take into the intimacy of your own fireside—like John Boles, Jean Harlow, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Bette Davis and precious few others. Such are the Herberts, Mr. and Mrs.

Some Reminiscences.

It is fun hearing Hugh and Sidney Lust rehashing the old days when they were just starting out in show business together, the one as star, the other as manager. One is led to believe that in at least a few of those early days the boys didn't do so well. However, in due course they both got going. And how they have gone since!

It was at the rout tossed by Mr. and Mrs. Lust in the Russian Troika Wednesday night that Mr. and Mrs. Herbert probably received the most sincere tribute of their associates in the theater and allied activities.

This was a party among parties, at which everyone who was anyone—and everybody was—made a pretty speech and then collapsed from the excess of his oratory.

This was true of your present column, but that he was not alone in the futility of his forensic efforts may be determined from the fact that a majority of the following made similar fruitless attempts to be verbally effective:

Among Those Present.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lust and Geraldine Lust; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lust, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rosenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Solomon, Mr. and Mrs. J. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smeltzer, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Glasser, Carter Barron, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hunter, Rudolph Berger, Dave Ginsberg, Miss A. McConnell, Frank La Falce, Mr. and Mrs. Don Craig, Henry Salus, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Brown, Mr. and Mrs. David Weiner, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wonders, Nathan Stiefel, Mrs. Theodore Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Hardie Meakin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kranz, Nelson Bell, Mrs. Aline C. Dobyns, Sam Wheeler, Arthur Reilly, Edward de S. Melcher, Vincent Lopez, Ethel Pastor, Nat Windsor, and Mrs. Hamilton, owner and director of the Troika.

Last night when I went backstage at the Earle to bid these regular folks a parting wish for continued success, prosperity, short jumps and the like, they were still their unaffected selves, even in the face of the arduous task of wardrobe trunks, sleeper treks to Philadelphia and the et ceteras of trouping.

I hesitate to go too far in the direction of the Hugh Herberts, but the temptation is very strong, indeed.

They are a couple of pretty elegant persons.

Gracie Barrie, as we have already intimated, perhaps not too veiledly, is in for a run at the Earle. Three weeks will be the least she will do, and it might even go over that. And don't let her get you going with any of that "double talk" of hers. It doesn't make sense, and neither will you if you try to struggle with it for more than a couple of minutes. But it is fun, no end—if you are not in the receiving line! Don't say I didn't warn you.

That Key Tickler.

Famed from one end of the country to the other on stage, screen and radio, Vincent Lopez, master of the piano and composer of many hit tunes, is thrilling thousands of Washingtonians who are attending the General Motors spring showing at the Washington Auditorium.

Lopez, whose last appearance in Washington was at Loew's Fox Theater, brings with him a new aggregation of musicans in the orchestra he is sponsoring. Those who have heard this new group pronounce it even greater than those heard here last.

Since his last appearance here, Mr. Lopez has been on the West Coast, where in Hollywood he appeared in several pictures and played at the best known hotels and night clubs.

Has New Band.

Lopez's new orchestra is not strictly a jazz group. It is a newer type of rhythmic band, who can and do play the better class of music. He avers that today in music there is a trend toward symphonic music and melodies and to please the modern world music must have smoothness.

Lopez is conceded to be the outstanding interpretative pianist of popular music. He has played at such places as the Kit Kat in London, the St. Regis in New York and the Congress Hotel in Chicago. And over the air he is famous for his familiar "Lopez speaking," which always opens his programs.

It would have done your heart good to have heard Vincent pound those ivories at the Sidney Lust party to the Herberts at the Troika Wednesday night. Boy, can he hit the whites and blacks!—and I suspect that he even makes the cracks in between these split notes emit something worth while to the ears.

If you are in doubt as to the length of runs that certain pictures have enjoyed at RKO-Keith's, here is the record: Four weeks, "Rio Rita," "Little Women" and "Hit the Deck;" five weeks, "Roberta;" five weeks and one day, "It Happened One Night." It is a notable coincidence that the longest of these runs—"It Happened One Night" and "Roberta"—were scored during the Lenten period. Now let's see what "Star of Midnight" will do. Those in charge say it will do plenty.

Ten Pounds On or Off!

When Binnie Barnes arived at Universal City last week Producer Edmund Grainger told her that if she would gain ten pounds he would give her the role of Lillian Russell in "Diamond Jim," which will go into prodution this week.

A role like this comes to an actress but once in a lifetime. Binnie Barnes weighed the chances (what an appropriate verb).

Naturally, she had an intense desire to play the role of the most beautiful actress the stage has ever produced. Who wouldn't? But the whole thing was: Would she be able to lose this extra weight when the role was over? She decided that she could gain it, and would gain it, and could lose the ten pounds afterward. Without waiting for the increase to happen, Mr. Grainger cast her for the role of Lillian Russell.

At the same time, Mr. Grainger announced that Eric Blore had been borrowed from RKO to play the role of Samson Fox, British railway equipment manufacturer, who taught James Buchanan Brady some of the tricks of selling. He also announced the casting of Spencer Charters, Robert McWade and Charles Sellon.

One of the important parts is the role of a girl who really loves James Buchanan Brady, who could have married him after Lillian Russell refused him, and who ran away from him. She was the only girl Diamond Jim ever loved. This role has been assigned to Jean Arthur.

Charles J. Brennan, manager of the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater, is about to return home after a fortnight's siege in Providence Hospital, combating one of the more ominous of the ailments to which the human body is heir. It is expected that Charlie will be released from the hospital not earlier than Saturday or later than Sunday. The well wishes of a host of friends will accompany him on his road back to health.

"Holiday" in Virginia.

On the nights of April 12 and 13 the Little Theater of Alexandria will present "Holiday," a comedy by Philip Barry.

Dealing with the struggle of two young people to escape the influence of stultifying wealth and to make their own lives, there are many dramatic as well as humorous moments in the play.

The leading roles are being played by Courtney Page Waller and Ashton Jones. Others in the cast are W. Bernard Knight, Priscilla Temple, Harry B. Caton, Olga Burch, Waller Smith, Paul Arlt and John Hauber.

The sets have been designed by C. David Persina, who was associated with Cedric Gibbons and later with Kenneth Murchison in New York. He also designed the Beaux Arts Ball in New York in 1924 and 1925.

The play is being directed by Ruth Perrott, and it will be given in the Lyceum Hall, 315 Duke street, Alexandria, Va.

Where Credit Is Due Note.

I still think our groundhog is one of the best!

He certainly knows where the bad weather is kept!

They Illuminate the Cinema

Above at left is that talented young raggamuffin, Vaska Buza, who assumes one of the principal roles in "The Road to Life," which initiated its runs at the Belasco Theater yesterday. At right is Mary Boland, that admirable actress who plays so important a part in making the screen version of Harry Leon Wilson's "Ruggles of Red Gap," one of the real comedy treats of the season. Charles Laughton, in case you have forgotten, appears in the title part of this last-named item—and what a job he does!

Belasco

"ROAD TO LIFE." Amkino presentation of a story by Nikolai Ekk, with an all-Russian cast. Directed by the author. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The story of the efforts of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in the eradication of the "wild children" problem through the establishment of children's collectives is, as an historical document, engrossingly recounted in "Road to Life."

However, when this picture is looked at from angles other than those of a purely sociological treatise, it leaves considerable to be desired for the average American cinema patron whose first consideration is entertainment.

Inasmuch as "Road to Life" makes no pretense at being anything but an expostulation of what the Soviet Union tried to accomplish with her vast army of homeless children, consideration of this film might advisedly be restricted to an evaluation of the adequacy with which the subject matter has been treated.

Is Logically Told.

In this respect, the picture is eminently successful, for here is pictured the situation that presented itself to the authorities, the material with which they had to deal, and the methods of founding and developing the children's collectives. It is all logically told and convincingly portrayed.

The Russian cinematographic technique lacks (especially in this sample) much of the American finesse, yet the very technical crudities of this film seem to augment the impressiveness of the Soviet situation and the almost superhuman task of reclaiming the tatterdemalions of the nation's juvenile delinquents.

Juvenile Delinquents.

The several characterizations are excellent, but as names mean nothing to the casual onlooker here, they may be omitted. Author-Director Nikolai Ekk, besides penning an interesting document, has done an admirable piece of directing, especially in the medium and long shots revealing large groups of boys. The picture is prefaced by Dr. John Dewey, professor emeritus of Columbia University.

The subsidiary program consists of "In a Monastery Garden," a delightful color study of cloisters, and a release of Pathe News.

Eastern High

"COME OUT OF THE KITCHEN." The Dramatic Club of Eastern High School presents the comedy in three acts and four scenes by A. E. Thomas. Staged under the supervision of Miss Lillian Wines, with Wallace Cauffman, student manager. In the Eastern High School auditorium, April 11 and 12. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

—THE CAST—

Paul Dangerfield	Wallace Cauffman
Charles Dangerfield	Sam Temin
Mrs. Falkener	Edna Sweeney
Cora Falkener	Lois Retstat
Burton Crane	Wayne Kniffin
Solon Tucker	Douglas Finlayson
Tom Lefferts	Hudson Wells
Amanda	Ruth Hoover
Randolph Weeks	John Donovan

However traditional the stormy weather may have been last evening for early April, a similar adherence to the usual did not obtain in the auditorium of Eastern High School, where "Come Out of the Kitchen" was being presented as the annual spring show by the Dramatic Club before a large and appreciative audience.

For on that stage last evening was one of the most commendable dramatic productions of scholastic acting groups—a play not only commendably staged, but acted with a care and understanding that was firmly predicated upon a knowledge of the theater and things theatrical.

A. E. Thomas' three-acter is not particularly difficult to play so far as handling lines is concerned, but here, as in every play, it is the manner of reading and general stage deportment that makes or breaks the happy illusion. That illusion was not broken last evening—the players offering a happy blending of word and deed to bring out all the inherent delight in the story.

Leads and Support.

Most proficient of the company was Constance Krueger, as the mainspring of the Dangerfield household. Here, indeed, is a budding actress that local semiprofessional groups may seriously consider for ingenue parts. As Olivia Dangerfield, who assumes the role of Jane Ellen, the cook, when it becomes imperative to staff the house for its Northern lessors, Miss Krueger was in command of the stage in fact as she was in fiction.

In the other roles Hudson Wells, as Statistician-Poet Tom Lefferts; Ruth Hoover, as Amanda, the mammy, and Wayne Kniffen, as Burton Crane, the lessor, might be mention especially for shining portrayals.

More than passing mention should be made of the two superb settings, scenes which would do credit on any stage. The company was excellently directed by Miss Marion V. Hummer. The Eastern High School Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Byram, furnished the entr'acte music.

When "Come Out of the Kitchen" is presented this evening Franklin Lusby will play the role of Paul Dangerfield; Mildred Spahr, the role of Cora Falkener, and Mildred Padgett, the role of Amanda.

Revision Urged In Virginia Law On Illegitimacy

Social Experts Hear Plea to Provide for Babes Born Out of Wedlock.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 12.—Revision of Virginia law to legitimatize children born out of wedlock whenever the parentage can be established was advocated by Miss Adele Clarke, who presided over a conference today on the problems of the unmarried mother and her child. The conference was held in connection with the Virginia conference on social work.

Virginia is one of two States making no legal provision for establishing parentage or providing support for illegitimate children, Miss Clarke declared in advocating passage of a statute based on Minnesota's, which she called a model. The stigma of illegitimate birth is considered worse than the blemish on the names of criminals, she asserted. Approximately 3,500 children are born out of wedlock each year in Virginia, she estimated.

Miss Mary Ruth Colby, of the Children's Bureau in Washington, who also urged legitimatizing such children, said America had a higher percentage of such births than any European nation except Switzerland and Sweden.

J. Francis Binford, secretary of the Trial Justice Association, urged that juvenile delinquents be supervised by probation officers rather than committed to industrial schools. He said this practice worked well in his own court. He made the statements to the delinquency conference.

Dr. Wyndham Blanton advocated a medical "clearing house" for all types of indigent patients, in speaking before the public works conference.

The child welfare section was told by Dr. Thomas Wheeldon, of Richmond, that every crippled child in Virginia should have an orthopedic center within 25 miles.

Relief Labor Vetoed On Hagerstown Job

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 12.—Grading at the market house will be done by city labor and not by works relief workers, the city council has ordered by a 3-to-2 vote.

Two councilmen favored the use of relief workers because the project, which calls for the construction of concrete driveways and macadam could be done cheaper. Three councilmen, however, voted against the use of relief workers, even though the cost would be greater.

$787,521 Is Earned By Power Company

Potomac Edison Reelects Head at Frederick.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 12.—At its annual stockholders' meeting and election of officers, the Potomac Edison Co., electric power concern, announced a net income of $787,521 for 1934.

For the previous year the net income was $862,492, it was stated by R. Paul Smith, president of the company. He added that the tax burden rose approximately $130,000 in 1934, material prices increased and additional personnel was employed, accounting for the decreased revenue.

Reduced rates have been applied to the company's service, which will cut income further, Smith said. The company, however, was reported to be in excellent financial condition and has every confidence in the future.

Smith was reelected president.

Attempt to 'Fix' Bowie Race Seen in Poisoning of Two Horses

Burke to Get Final Test On Mound

Southpaw Faces Albany Today in Last Effort Before Race Starts.

Poor Condition of Field Causes Harris to Bench Manush.

THE Nats kept their one-game winning streak intact yesterday with the help of the rain that washed out the schedule game with the Phillies. Today, they compete in cheaper company, meeting their Albany farmhands at Griffith Stadium in their last local appearance before launching the pennant campaign on Tuesday.

Encouraged by an even break in the two games with the Dodgers here, Manager Bucky Harris ordered his men out to the park yesterday for a workout under the stands, which afforded the only dry area in the stadium. Despite the cramped quarters, the athletes were able to unlimber their muscles and retain the physical edge they have acquired.

Manager Harris will keep Heinie Manush on the bench again today for the third consecutive game. Harris is unwilling to risk injury to Manush in the treacherous footing in left field at Griffith Stadium where recent rains have made a quagmire of the turf.

Backward in Hitting.

Manuch, who has been among the most backward of the Nats' htiters during the spring campaign, has appeared at bat only once against enemy pitching in the past week, but Harris nevertheless is taking no chances that his best slugger might aggravate a leg injury which troubled him last year.

On Sunday, when the Nats play at Newark, Manush will accompany the team and take his reular place in the batting order if the Newark outfield is dry.

Bob Burke will take the mound today against the Albany club if the weather man makes good on his promise to abate the rain before 3:00 p. m. The game will be Burke's final test to determine his fitness for a starting role in the Nats' opening series against the Athletics.

Hack Wilson With Albany.

With the Albany club will be four former Nats—Pitchers Ray Prim and Ed Chapman, Second Baseman Bobby Reeves, and First Baseman Pete Susko. The main threat of Albany, however, will be Hack Wilson, former home-run king of the National League, who is now trying to make good in the International.

Manager Bucky Harris yesterday revised his plans for the opening series with the Athletics starting Tuesday. Originally he had planned to start Earl Whitehill in the opener and follow with Burke, also a southpaw, but at the present writing he hopes to give the A's a change of pitching diet by working a right-hander in the second game.

Irving Hadley is Harris' tentative choice to follow Whitehill, but in the event that Hadley is not deemed fit when he rejoins his teammates tomorrow, Monte Weaver or Ed Linke will get the assignment.

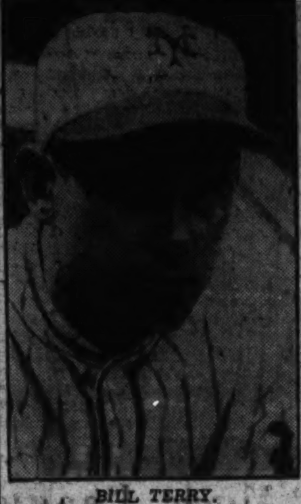
Reese of Georgia Tech Upsets Hall at Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., April 12 (AP).—Billy Reese, captain of the Georgia Tech tennis team, sprang the first upset of the Atlanta invitation tennis tournament today by defeating Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., nationally ranking No. 16, 6-3, 6-3, in a quarter-finals match.

Tomorrow he will face Wilmer Allison, ranking No. 1 and top seeded player of the tournament here. Allison today turned back Malon Courts, of Atlanta, 6-2, 7-5.

Berkeley Bell, of New York, dropped Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 6-4, 6-4. Bryan Grant, Atlanta star, defeated Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Chattanooga.

1936 His Last?



BILL TERRY.

Bill Terry Hints He Will Quit After 1936

'Getting Too Old,' Avers Manager of Giants; Legs Weakening.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.—Memphis Bill Terry, who has been playing baseball for more than half of his 37 years, professes to feel the first pangs of old age and hinted rather broadly today that his active playing days may end with the 1936 season.

Complaining about the weather, which caused cancellation of a game the Giants were supposed to play here with the Cleveland Indians and which has cost his Giants more than $8,000 in exhibition game receipts, Terry said today he is "getting too old for the game."

He expects to go through 150 games this season, however, he said, and "then go through next season. After that, well——."

In Game 20 Years.

He's been hitting at a lively enough clip, the Giants' manager said, but 20 years of baseball playing have taken a lot out of his legs.

Both Terry and Walter Johnson, manager of the Cleveland tean, that the experts have picked to oppose the Giants in the Worlds Series, were well enough satisfied with their ball clubs. Terry said if the club comes along as he thinks it should "we'll be so far out in front at the end of the season that there won't be any race to it."

To Give a Battle.

He prefaced this observation; however, with the less optimistic assertion that "we may not win the pennant but we're going to give somebody a battle."

"Dick Bartell has been the making of our team," he said. "He is just what we have needed. George Davis and Hank Leiber, a couple of powerful hitters, will help us no end in the outfield. Hughie Critz and Travis Jackson are looking great and Gus Mancuso, our veteran catcher, who was ill last year, has recovered and is in fine condition. Our pitchers are not worrying us, either."

Johnson Optimistic.

Johnson said that despite the psychological effect of being "put on the spot" by the experts who picked his Indians to win the pennant he was optimistic about his team's chances of doing just that. "We have a winning ball club this year and as soon as Billy Knickerbocker joins us we'll be set."

Knickerbocker, an outstanding shortstop, is recuperating in a New Orleans hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis, but is expected to join the club in about a month. Pending his return to the line-up, the Indians will use Roy Hughes, a rookie from New Orleans.

Little Men Like Bitsy Grant Help Teams Lure the Crowds

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The U. S. Lawn Tennis Association has finally come up with a brilliant notion resulting in placing a tennis player by the name of Bitsy Grant on the American Davis Cup Team. Grant will play against Mexico, China and South America. It is quite possible that he will then be left off the team that will play in the European finals, in which case these congratulations will be withdrawn with great rapidity.

The U. S. L. T. A. works in a most mysterious way, its wonders to perform. Bitsy Grant belongs on any man's tennis team, not only because he is a great tennis player but also because he is so small, spry, active and indefatigable that he goes into practically every match with at least 15 points a game in his favor, particularly if there is a large gallery present.

Grant is so small that he embarrasses his opponents near to death in the course of a match. Before it has gone very far, all the ladies in the stands are clucking their tongues in sympathy for the poor little fellow who is being made to run all over the court by some big bully. There are audible sighs when Bitsy misses a shot or is outmaneuvered and more or less of a stony silence when his opponent aces him. Pretty soon the opponent begins to blush and it is all up with him.

Bryant M. Grant, jr., comes from Atlanta, Ga., a city which has sent out some great players of games into the world. He stands a fraction over 5 feet, in his tennis shoes, and at one time or another he has beaten every tennis giant against whom he has played. He has beaten Ellsworth Vines (and that in the national championships at Forest Hills, two years ago), Lester Stoefen and Frank Shields, every one of them over 6 feet tall.

After he beat Vines in the national championship, he lost to Lester Stoefen. I saw both matches. Stoefen, 6-feet-4, was a very unhappy man while on the courts with Bitsy. I thought his victory over the little man was a great feat, because Grant and the gallery had the tall, loping man simply fussed to death for a while.

If I had any kind of a team I would always want some kind of a little man on it, because the little men get all the sympathy in this world, and sympathy is worth a stroke a hole anywhere. The toughest thing to combat is that top-dog feeling. Everyone roots for the little man, cheers his success and deplores that of his opponent. The very saying, "A good big man will beat a good little man," is a handicap for the big man to overcome. he ought to win.

And if the little man ever gets him on the run, every effort he makes to win makes him look

Flynn Dead; Once K.O.'d Dempsey

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Man Who Had Met Ring's Greatest.

Mauler Just Forgot to Duck, His Explanation of 1917 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, April 12.—The game heart of Fireman Jim Flynn that carried him through more than 100 bruising ring battles, including a knockout victory over Jack Dempsey, stopped beating today.

The 55-year-old fireman, fighter and in recent years bartender, christened Andrew Chiariglione at Hoboken, N. J., December 24, 1879, breathed his last at the City Receiving Hospital.

A heart attack struck him down last night, but true to the tradition he helped mold in the ring from 1901 to 1923, he refused to quit. An hour before he died Fireman Jim smiled weakly and gasped:

"I'm groggy, but I'm not out. You won't have to throw in the towel."

Fought Ring's Great.

But Flynn was mistaken, as he was all too often in the declining years of a career that took him into the fistic marts against Jack Johnson, Tommy Burns, Billy Papke, Sam Langford, Gunboat Smith, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Luther McCarty and many others.

Flynn already was on the way down when he met Jack Dempsey at Salt Lake City in 1917. Two years later Jack was to become world's champion and one of the greatest. Flynn always said he was lucky in stopping the Manassa Mauler in the first round.

"Well, it was this way," he used to say. "I hit him with one, two. The right nailed his chin. But just put it down that I didn't exactly knock Dempsey out. He just forgot to duck."

Jim was a railroad fireman, living in Pueblo, Colo., when he first started fighting around 1900. The ring records disagree on the time, place and some of the results of his bouts and Flynn couldn't exactly remember himself, as he flipped the foam off mugs of beer here and talked of his encounters.

He had his first chance at the world's heavyweight title in 1906 at Naud Junction, at that time an outlying district of Los Angeles, when he met Tommy Burns. Burns scored a technical knockout in the fifteenth round after a savage battle.

Stopped by Johnson.

Six years later he tried it again, meeting Jack Johnson on July 4, 1912, in Las Vegas, N. Mex. The bout was stopped after nine rounds and Johnson was awarded a technical knockout.

Twice he battled Billy Papke, the former middleweight champion of the world, and both encounters were ten-round no-decision affairs. These took place in Los Angeles in 1909. A year later he met Sam Langford here. The first bout was a no-decision affair, but the Negro knocked him out in ten rounds later that season.

Gunboat Smith stopped Flynn in five rounds in New York, August 8, 1913, but when they met two years later in Cincinnati, the bout went ten rounds without a decision.

Didn't Take Dive, Dempsey Asserts

By the United Press.

New York, April 12.—Jack Dempsey straightened out the records tonight for Fireman Jim Flynn, who died today at Los Angeles and takes to his grave the only knockout ever scored against the old man mauler.

"I've been quoted in the past as saying that I took a dive against the Fireman back in 1917," Dempsey said. "But I didn't take a dive and I never have said that I did. It was a clean knockout.

"The Fireman was game, tough and experienced. He clipped me in the first round with the first punch he tossed, as I recall it. And they lugged me away from there feet foremost.

"I squared it a year later, in 1918, in equally short time. I started that year by belting Homer Smith out in one round, then got the Fireman in one, and also about a dozen other guys—and went on to the title the next year."

Coya, 27-1, Winner In Arlington Race

By the Associated Press.

Arlington Downs, Tex., April 12.—Coya, ridden by F. Fernandez and carrying 100 pounds, thundered down the stretch with a stout burst of speed to win the featured $2,000 claiming race on today's Arlington Downs racing program.

Coya went the Waggoner course in 1:08 4-5 to beat Dorothy B. and Lord Tournament.

The winner paid mutuels of $57.70, $25.20 and $17.20. Dorothy B. paid $13.16 and $10, and Lord Tournament paid $4.10 to show.

Lord Tournament took the early command and at one time had a three-length lead, but weakened under pressure and finished a head back of Coya and Dorothy B.

Dixie Howell Will Escape Operation

Still in Serious Condition; Special Nurses Kept at Bedside.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., April 12.—Dixie Howell, injured rookie with the Detroit Tigers baseball team and former football star at the University of Alabama, will not have to undergo an operation of his face, his physician announced tonight.

The athlete was still considered to be in a serious condition, but sufficient improvement was shown today to dispel fears that he would have to submit to surgery. Dr. John W. Devine, the physician, said he was well pleased with Howell's response ot treatment. Nevertheless, Dr. Devine said Howell was still too ill to have visitors and that he is not yet out of danger of complications. Special nurses were kept on duty at his hospital bed.

The All-America football player was felled by a sizzling drive off the bat of Johnny Mie, Cincinnati Reds' first baseban, during batting practice here yesterday.

Expenses Threaten Poughkeepsie Meet

City, However, Is Expected to Raise Funds.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 12.—Unless the city of Poughkeepsie will contribute $3,000 annually to help pay expenses of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta the annual meet will be moved elsewhere.

Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board of stewards, told Peter H. Troy, local regatta chairman, three other sites were available and Troy said the money undoubtedly would be raised to keep the races here on the Hudson, where on June 16 seven crews will renew the rivalry.

Washington, California, Columbia, Syracuse, Cornell, Pennsylvania and Navy all have entered the meet, making it one of the biggest since its first running in 1895.

Marshall, Northfork Assistant Coach, Dies

Welch, W. Va., April 12 (AP).—Robert Marshall, 25, assistant coach at Northfork High School, died today from pneumonia.

He was graduated in 1933 from Emory and Henry College, where he won his varsity letter in three sports.

Cubs Release Pair.

Chicago, April 12 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs today trimmed Eddie Cihocki, an infielder, and left-handed Pitcher Frank Coleman from their roster. Cihocki was sent to Albany of the International League on 24-haur option, while Coleman was turned back to Hartford of the Eastern League.

Ruth-Like Ballyhoo Is Turned on Gehrig

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 12.—With genuine flourish and obvious enthusiasm, Lou Gehrig today took over the role of "spotlight man" for the Yankees after playing the part of strong, silent understudy to Babe Ruth for ten years.

To emphasize the development, the "iron man" of baseball worked out briskly with the one-time "man mauler" of the ring, Jack Dempsey, at Antie McGovern's gymnasium, which was wired for sound especially for the occasion and gave off echoes of Ruthian ballyhoo. There were no knockdowns.

To make it official, the Yankees subsequently disclosed Manager Joe McCarthy has appointed Gehrig team captain for the 1935 season. This was significant, because there has been no captain on the club since Babe Ruth held the job, only to be deprived of it by the late Miller Huggins "for the good of the service."

Improved Ball Club.

To celebrate, Columbia Lou promptly exercised the prerogatives of his new office and responsibility. He smiled broadly as the boys gathered around, took a deep breath, squared his tremendous shoulders, and boomed:

"The Yankees, for various and good reasons, are a greatly improved ball club. We figure to regain the American League pennant. But for a lot of tough breaks we might have beaten the Tigers last year. We will have more speed, plenty of power and we will get better pitching than Detroit. It looks like a good race, probably a close one, but we have the best team in the league, all things considered."

This was one of the longest non-stop statements Gehrig had ever issued, in addition to being the most dramatic. The boys have taken Gehrig and his exploits for granted for so long that it was all a bit sudden. It was necessary to readjust the focus. The man who has long since passed Ruth, insofar as his performances on the field and his power at bat are concerned, was shedding his inferiority complex, so to speak, and doing a complete job of it.

Warms to Subject.

Gehrig warmed to his subject. He paid tribute to Ruth but suggested the Yankees would not be handicapped, defensively, by having the speedy George Selkirk in right field. He emphasized the comebacks of Tony Lazzeri and Bill Dickey as big factors in the Yankee outlook. He dwelt on the speediness of youngsters like Rolfe, Crosetti, Hill, Walker and Selkirk.

"Pitching? Why, we will have so much good pitching it may be a bit embarrassing," laughed Lou. "Sure, I know Detroit has Rowe and Bridges while Cleveland has a flock of fine right-handers, but we will beat them to the punch."

Gehrig hopes to hit 50 or more home runs this year—for the first time—but says this "all depends on the breaks." He led both major leagues with 49 last season. He agrees with Connie Mack that Hal Trosky, the slugging young first baseman of the Indians, may be his closest rival for the home-run crown.

Capt. Gehrig expects to play 154 games, the full schedule. He hasn't missed a championship game since 1925. His all-time "iron man" record now includes 1,504 consecutive contests.

Middie Ball Team Opposes Michigan

Game With Albany Senators Postponed by Rain.

Annapolis, Md., April 12.—Officials of the Navy Athletic Association went the limit in efforts to bring about the exhibition baseball game between the Middies and Albany Senators, scheduled for this afternoon, but Jupiter Pluvius decreed otherwise. Between noon and 2 o'clock, during a let-up of rain, gallons of gasoline were burned to dry out the diamond, but in vain, as heavy showers again set in and at 3 o'clock it was decided to call the game off.

Tomorrow the Middies will meet University of Michigan, conquerors of Maryland yesterday. In lacrosse the Tars will stack up against Princeton, and University of Pittsburgh will furnish the opposition in tennis.

St. John's also is booked for a contest on the diamond, meeting Johns Hopkins.

Crookedness Rules the Races For One Day of Fun and Fancy

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, April 12.—For entering a kangaroo in the city-sponsored "crookedest horse race" to be run here tomorrow, Harry M Westfall, president of the Seattle park board, was denounced today by Mayor Charles Smith and the board of stewards for "crooked tactics."

"It is not so much that I resent your entering a kangaroo," the mayor wrote Westfall, "but we understand you named him Horsefeathers, with the idea of deceiving the judge, Basil Gray, who was appointed by yourself. I happen to know Mr. Gray is blind. This was scarcely ethical."

The "ringbone derby" of the park board has 40 horses entered, all more than 12 years old. It will be run at Woodland Park tomorrow. The first horse across the line loses, but the third nag to stagger in wins a keg of beer.

"There is no excuse for this derby," President Westfall said, "but the park board is doing its duty in seeking to entertain the citizenry. The only publicity anyone will get out of it will be unfavorable.

"The city council's entry, 'Deficit,' is a good animal, but I understand they are training him on pork chops and swiss cheese, so Deficit is likely to be wiped out."

Handicapping the horses is a fearful problem, the stewards said, but some jockeys will carry opened umbrellas, wear rubber boots, knapsacks and the like.

The King County Humane Society today blocked the idea of using a cannon to start the race, so an old-time school bell was found. The weather was fine today for the final workouts, but the track and horses were terrible.

Lunn Reaches Mason-Dixon Golf Finals

Wins, 1 Up, When Allen's Putt Fails; Topping Also Survives.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 12.—Dick Lunn, former District champion from Washington, today waded into the finals of the annual Mason and Dixon golf championship on the Old White course here by pouring a 15-foot putt into the fifteenth cup in the midst of a heavy downpour.

The putt gave Lunn a birdie deuce and squared his semi-final match with Frank Allen, last year's Georgetown prep captain, who eventually lost, 1 up, by three-putting the eighteenth green.

Lunn meets Dan Topping, defending champion, and medalist from

Bradley Appeals In 20-Year Suit

Seeks $75,000 for Loss of His Four Horses.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 12.—Twenty years after high winds blew an express car from railroad tracks here, killing four of his horses, Col. E. R. Bradley, Lexington, Ky., owner and breeder, still is seeking $75,000 damages.

He appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday from action of a lower court at Nashville in dismissing his suit against the Adams Express Co.

The accident occurred on July 7, 1915. Bradley filed suit in 1917. The action was dismissed in 1932. W. C. Devereaux, United States meteorologist here, testified in the trial that 38 persons lost their lives in the storm that caused $500,000 damage in downtown Cincinnati.

Plot Is Hinted And Probe Ordered

Sudden Illness of Hows Chances, Canterboy Arouse Suspicions.

Both Are Late Scratches; Boston Brook Wins; Odds Fluctuate.

By Walter Haight.

AN ATTEMPT of a gang to "fix" the fifth race at Bowie yesterday is believed to have caused the poisoning of two valuable horses and will result in an investigation by racing stewards. Hows Chances, the property of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, and Canterboy, owned by J. E. Smallman, were found writhing in pain in their stalls yesterday morning. These horses, leading contenders in the graded handicap, class "C," the day's feature race, were reported to have been in normal condition when bedded the night before.

Dr. William P. Collins, Washington veterinarian, who remained at Bowie last night in an effort to save the life of Hows Chances, said there was little doubt in his mind that the horses had been given injections of the same poison. The symptoms were identical, he said.

Stewards Assure Probe.

While Bowie stewards said there was no definite proof the horses had been tampered with, they asserted they would investigate the possibility.

Trainer George Alexandra, in charge of Canterboy, said yesterday: "Canterboy was in fine shape last night. He was frolicking about his stall and gave every indication that he would run well. This morning he was a very sick horse."

Neither horse was eliminated from the race at the usual morning "scratch" hour and their names were printed in position on the official program. The majority of those present did not know that Hows Chances and Canterboy would not run until the scratch sign was placed beside their numbers on the approximate odds board.

Odds Fluctuate.

The betting on the race was the cause of much comment among the "regulars." Sang Froid, which most price-makers installed as the favorite before Hows Chances and Canterboy were scratched, showed at 3-5 on the morning line before the wagering began. A concerted play began on Boston Brook and Sang Froid's quotation rose to 9-5. However, Sang Froid's odds dropped to 7-5 with the horses on the track and to 6-5 on the final "run-down." He was quoted at 1.30 to 1 on the official "equivalents" on the charts.

There has been talk of "fixers" among the horsemen for the past few days. One trainer, who saddled a winner last Wednesday, on being informed that the man to whom he had talked at the stable in the morning was a racketeer, did not leave his barn until the horse was led to the paddock for the race. It was rumored at the track today that a losing favorite on Thursday had been tampered with.

The fifth race was won by Boston Brook in a thrilling nose finish with Sang Froid, the favorite. Only four horses went to the post after the scratching of Hows Chances, Canterboy and High Torque. The last-named was a normal scratch, Trainer P. M. Walker reported.

The finish was one of the closest ever witnessed in Maryland and backers of Sang Froid booed for more than five minutes. Boston Brook had the lead from the start and tired in the stretch. Many believed Sang Froid's closing rush had earned the verdict.

The other starters in the race were Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's derby candidate, Wayward Son, and Robert Stone's Chief Mourner. Neither figured seriously in the running.

The highest price of the short history of the Maryland daily double was recorded when $361.30 was paid to each holder of the combination ticket. The winning "double horses" were Pekin, in the first race, and Miss Firefly in the third race. Both were outsiders in the individual betting, Pekin paying $30.20 and Miss Firefly, $11.60.

Evening Chimes Beaten.

The opener, a 6-furlong sprint for cheap horses, saw the defeat of Evening Chimes, George Watson in the saddle, who managed to lose to Pekin, a $30.20 proposition, by a nose margin. Arctic Lad, the early pace setter, was third. Evening Chimes broke in the first flight and Watson appeared to pull the horse back to last place. In the stretch Evening Chimes came up with a rush, but too late to dislodge Pekin, the property of Mrs. Dan Christmas, of Upper Marlboro. Of course, Watson may have met a minor accident.

Jockey Earl Porter and Advocate Junior were beaten in the second race. Lucky Turn was the hottest kind of a paddock tip and Lucky Turn was the winner. Porter ran the legs off Advocate Junior and at the far turn had a lead of some 15 lengths. He was riding faster than the horse was running. In the stretch, the colt was staggering from the grind and fell easy prey to Lucky Turn's closing rush. The winning mutuel was $5.60.

Watson made no mistakes in the third race. He rated Miss Firefly along, while Clear Knight and Romola ran each other into the ground and then drew out to withstand the closing bids of Dona Dulcin and Pretty Wise. Miss Firefly, conditioned at this track, paid a $11.60 mutuel. Pretty Wise was the failing favorite.

Dancing Doll made a show of her field in the fourth race, merely waiting for Zay to quit before taking command and coasting to the wire. Basquine moved up to be third in the field of five. Pollard rode the winner, which proved something of a relief to the favorite players despite a $3.60 mutuel.

Ahmed and Coucci proved the winning combination in the sixth, a gallop of a mile and a furlong. Inferno Lad, favorite over the winner, lost the purse by three parts of a length while saving second money from Flaxen by four lengths. Apprentice Lindberg tried to ease back with Inferno Lad in the first quarter mile, then shot his mount into several lengths' lead, running Standout into submission. However, the 7-year-old gelding did not have enough left to cope with the well-timed move of Coucci astride Ahmed, which returned $7.80.

Inflee came from last position to win the seventh race by five lengths from Tristrap. Hidden Lore was third in the field of eight. The winner paid $9.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEKIN, $30.20, $7.10, $6.20; EVENING CHIMES, $3.30, $2.60; ARCTIC LAND, $7.30.

PEKIN bettered his position steadily after the opening furlong, wore the leaders down when reaching the home stretch, then continued strongly under stout handling and just lasted long enough. EVENING CHIMES, permitted to drop out of contention after breaking forwardly, circled her field and closed full of run after losing considerable ground. ARCTIC LAND showed good speed in the footing to race VERITAS into submission, saved ground, and held on well when put to a drive. BEAU GOVANS finished stoutly under weak handling. EDYTH M. could not stay after going a half-mile. FLOWER TIME weakened badly after making a bold effort midway of the turn. VERITAS stopped.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08½. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCKY TURN, $5.60, $3.10, $2.50; ADVOCATE JUNIOR, $3.00, $2.30; VOLGADALE, $2.70.

LUCKY TURN, badly outpaced for the first six furlongs, worked her way into contention when reaching the final elbow, closed courageously after being straightened into the home stretch, and was up in the last 15 yards. ADVOCATE, JR., sprinted into a commanding lead while under steadying restraint, was kept in the better footing, but stopped suddenly during the closing furlong. VOLGADALE went into a contending position in the first flight when leaving the back stretch, and came courageously for the final drive after being inclined to bear to the inside during the final drive. HARD CHASE passed tiring horses. EMPLOYMENT had no mishaps. STREET GUIDE was done early.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:40. Winner, W. C. Winfrey's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FIREFLY, $11.60, $5.50, $4.30; DONA DULCIN, $9.70, $3.90; PRETTY WISE, $2.90.

MISS FIREFLY, suited by the footing and, going forwardly in the early racing, responded willingly when reaching the home stretch, wore CLEAR KNIGHT down and held DONA DULCIN safe. Latter moved up resolutely to engage the pace-makers when entering the home stretch, but could not stay with the winner when the real issue came. PRETTY WISE was under stout pressure throughout and had no excuses. FOREIGN LADY broke slowly and could never reach a contending position. O'NEILL went evenly. CLEAR KNIGHT and ROMOLA raced themselves into submission setting the early pace and they both stopped badly.

THE DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races) PAID—$361.30.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. The Laurel. Purse, $800; allowances. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:14½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING DOLL, $3.60, $2.60, $2.10; OUR MAE, $3.40, $2.50; BASQUINE, $3.10.

DANCING DOLL, showing good ability in the footing, raced ZAY into submission to gain command midway of the turn, shook off a stout effort from OUR MAE and came out smartly during the closing furlong to win with much in reserve. OUR MAE moved up fast rounding the turn, but could not threaten after reaching the home stretch. BASQUINE saved ground for the entire journey, but could not reach the two leaders in the closing issue. ZAY displayed high speed in the footing for a half-mile, then stopped. DALMATIA was held perfectly safe.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Graded Handicap, class "C." Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:45½. Winner, H. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOSTON BROOK, $6.40, $3.20; SANG FROID, $2.90; CHIEF MOURNER, (No show mutuels sold).

BOSTON BROOK, showing partiality to the footing, went into command at once, raced in his best form under strong handling, saved ground to open up a winning lead when reaching the home stretch, but weakened fast nearing the finish and barely lasted long enough. SANG FROID kept under pressure to force the pace in the early racing, lost ground entering the home stretch, but closed resolutely under punishment, and was going much the fastest at the end. CHIEF MOURNER went stoutly for five furlongs and held on well. WAYWARD SON was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:14. Off at 5:14½. Winner, P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AHMED, $7.80, $4.30, $3.00; INFERNO LAD, $3.70, $2.60; FLAXEN, $2.80.

AHMED, placed under pressure after reaching the back stretch, challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch, responded to punishment, and came willingly to wear INFERNO LAD down during the closing sixteenth. INFERNO LAD, full of run, and hard held while setting the pace, shook off STANDOUT, then held on gamely when put to a hard drive in the closing stages. FLAXEN saved a lot of ground in the last half-mile, but could not make up any ground on the leaders during the closing drive. OLAMAY was never able to threaten. STANDOUT faltered badly when placed to a drive.

INFILEE, slow to settle in her stride and badly outrun for the first six furlongs, moved up strongly when approaching the home stretch, swung to the outside of the leaders, wore HIDDEN LORE down and drew away rapidly. TRISTRAP, rated back of TWIDGETS in the early racing, went up on the inside at the final turn, struck deep footing, then weakened all during the final drive. HIDDEN LORE went to the outside leaders entering the home stretch to gain a slight lead, but faltered in the closing drive. POST BRIGADE was unable to engage the leaders. McDONALD H. was held safe. TWIDGETS stopped in the last three furlongs.

Brooklyn Club Overlooked Malone

Dodgers Stopped Pitcher's Sale to Yanks, Then Suffered Lapse.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The facts in the alleged mysterious waiving of Pitcher Pat Malone out of the National League have been explained by a club official of the old circuit who declined to permit use of his name inasmuch as the waiver procedure is always of an exceedingly private nature.

According to this man, the Cubs first asked for waivers on Malone September 10, 1934. The Reds, Braves and Dodgers held him up at that time. Then followed his trade to the Cardinals. On October 29 the Cardinals asked for waivers on the pitcher, with Brooklyn alone claiming him. The proffer then was withdrawn. However, on December 17 the St. Louis club again asked for waivers and this time they went through.

The natural conclusion is that the Brooklyn club, which claims to have held up on Pat in October, overlooked the last waivers in some manner and the Carrdinals, as a result, were free to sell him to the Yankees.

County School Teams Postpone Encounters

The scheduled game between Gaithersburg and Poolesville was postponed yesterday on account of the wet grounds. Silver Spring High, now Montgomery Blair, will not play Charlotte Hall tomorrow, as previously scheduled, as the scarlet fever epidemic quarantine in the Leonardtown school is still in effect.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase will move up its scheduled encounter with Eastern to probably next Friday instead of early in May.

Blossom Volley Ball Tourney Slated Today

A dozen teams from five Eastern States will compete in an all-day program of volley ball at the Central Y. M. C. A. today in the fourth annual Cherry Blossom Volley Ball Tournament conducted by the association.

The following Y. M. C. A. teams are entered: North Branch of Philadelphia, York, Pa.; Roanoke, Va.; two teams from Richmond, Va.; Jamaica, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y.; two teams from Baltimore; Greensboro, N. C., and two teams from Washington.

First Round.

Washington Reds vs. Jamaica.
Roanoke vs. Richmond.
Philadelphia vs. Richmond Blues.
Washington vs. Baltimore Reds.
(Other teams drew byes.)

Takoma Tigers Practice.

The New Takoma Tigers will hold practice this afternoon and tomorrow on their new diamond at Blair road and Peabody street. They also wish to cancel their game tomorrow with the Liberty Nationals, due to weather conditions and lack of practice.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Bowie Race Track, April 12.

The muddy track and some ragged riding is my alibi for having only one winner. Ahmed finally got home to save the system players from a shutout with a $7.80 mutuel. Evening Chimes and Advocate Junior were two that should not have lost, and I join the booers in saying that I believe that Sang Froid won from Boston Brook. I'm taking the angle and everything into consideration, but I still think Sang Froid won. But, of course, I picked the horse that was ruled second. Evening Chimes was allowed to drift back to last when he should have been making a front-running effort. At that, this one was beaten only a nose, but that was enough to spoil the daily doubles for most of the customers. Jockey Earl Porter aided in the defeat of Advocate Junior. Instead of rating the horse, he thought he was delivering air mail. He did not take note of the fact that the nearest horse to him was some 15 lengths behind. He just rode and rode and Advocate Junior was not a mechanical horse, so he quit. Anyway, Bennings, Inc., can only pick them. We can't ride them.

BILL.

First race—Blue Zip has a lot of speed now, according to Clocker Mike's workout reports. Doesn't want more opposition than this, however. Starogan and General Lejuene for the other awards. The last named would be a cinch if at tops. Clocker Mike has Oneill as his special.

Second race—Sisowen gets the call over this group of sprinters, despite the appearance of Acautaw. The first named gets a 13-pound shift in the weights and I'm stringing along. Hogan's Fox might have won here the other day with racing room in the stretch. Dangerous even in this company.

Third race—Seabiscuit ran a good race here the first time out after having a rough trip in the early part. Provided Jockey Horn misses trouble, I expect to visit the pay-off window. Patsey Begone for the place and Pollywee for the show. Mike likes the last named. The shift in riders may work miracles.

Fourth race—Wise Duke was something of a juvenile king in Florida. Picks up 12 pounds, but I can't see him missing with these. Victorious Ann's last was a beaut. A factor here. Winter Sport races well and may be close.

Fifth race—Lynx Eye demonstrated that he is at his best in his lone race here. Clocker Mike reports that he has been working briskly and I'm going to gamble on his chances. Dogmata, winner of the Inaugural Handicap, and Evergold for the other money places.

Sixth race—Motley might have won the other day but for some poor handling. Linberg is slated to ride today and that's some improvement. Alladin's Dream and Dancing Cloud for the rest. Saint Kitts has a fighting chance but seems outclassed.

Seventh race—Axentea barely missed taking a purse the other day. Takes off weight here and I'm stringing along. Maddening is the one to beat. Twidgets to show. The last named was run into the ground yesterday.

Good Harvest To Race for Vanderbilt

Buys Horse on Eve of Today's $5,000 Race at Bowie Track.

ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT will have two horses instead of one in the $5,000 Southern Maryland Handicap, today's feature at Bowie. The youthful millionare purchased Good Harvest, from the B. B. Stable yesterday at private terms, and the horse will run coupled with Dofmata, winner of the Inaugural Handicap.

The latest addition to the cerise and white forces was a successful campaigner in Florida last winter and has won twor aces at the Prince Georges County course.

A small, but speedy field has been named overnight for the Southern Maryland. Besides the Vanderbilt pair, the Shandon Farm has entered two stars in Evergold, recent winner, and Dust Girl. Lynx Eye, the property of George Robertson, and St. Moritz, owned by Whitey Abel, owner, trainer and jockey, are the others slated to compete.

While slow time must be accepted due to the heavy condition of the track, the competition should be keen. Only horses that go well on an off track have been entered.

Today will be the last chance for Maryland turf followers to play the daily double until the horses move into Pimlico. The racing scene shifts to Havre de Grace on Monday and that track has decided not to include the combination wager.

Bowie officials expect the daily double to surpass all records for total play today.

Virginians, Satellites Play to 30-30 Draw

The championship of the Girls' Community Center Basket Ball League is still an open question as the result of an embattled fray last night on the MacFarland Junior High court when the Virginians and the Satellites fought to a 30-30 tie. The Virginians won the first of a 2-out-of-3-game series Monday, 30 to 29. Last night's game will be replayed early next week.

Horses Seek Middleburg Laurels

Turf in Fair Condition for Fifteenth Annual Meeting Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEESBURG, Va., April 12.—Everything is in readiness for the fifteenth spring race meet of the Middleburg Hunt, which will be held on the Glenwood race course tomorrow afternoon. All day long vans have lumbered in, bringing blue bloods of the equine world.

Prize steeplechasers munched their oats this evening on the Sands estate, awaiting the call of the bugle tomorrow. Stable boys rubbed down and bandaged legs and did other necessary things to make their charges fit and fine for the morrow.

Stabling accommodations on the grounds have been filled and many private stables near the course are housing the thoroughbreds.

Turf Is Drained.

In spite of the continued rains, the grounds are reported by officials to be in a fair condition. The rolling turf of the course prevents much sogginess, while in lower places the ground has been properly drained. While the going will be heavy, the conditions are said by horsemen to be generally good.

With fair weather tomorrow the races promise to be a success. Large crowds of sporting Easterners are expected to be present and many informal parties have been arranged for the visitors.

The first race, the Sunny Bank, 1¼-mile turf race, will be called at 1:30. Graham Grant's Omarcou is scratched in this race. Late today no scratches had been made in the feature event, the Middleburg Hunt Cup, a 4-mile timber race, which is the second number on the program.

Eight Are Listed.

Eight of the top steeplechasers of the country are listed in this race. They are Northwood Stable's Indigo, Mrs. George Eustis' Charioteer, Mrs. Vadim Makaroff's Gigolo, Mrs. Simon Patterson's Career, Flying Horse Farm's The Prophet, Paul Mellon's Chatterplay, Alvin Untermeyer's Bagatelle and C. E. Perkins' Leguna Secca.

Other scratches announced are Mrs. Lewis A. Parks' Walnut Creek in the William Skinner Memorial, a 2½-mile timber race; Mrs. Norman Whitehouse's Seth Stranger, and John E. Hughes' Main Roe in the Rose Hill, a 3-mile timber race; Graham Grant's Long Prince in the Loudoun Plate, a 2-mile brush race, and Mrs. Paul Mellon's Bad Boy, Paul Mellon's Catalano and J. E. Ryan's Aughrim Boy in the Three Oaks, a mile flat race.

The Loudoun County Hospital will benefit from the admission, which is $1, except for landowners who hold tickets. Judges are Fletcher Harper, Amory Carhart and W. H. Lipscomb.

Archery Tournament To Be Staged Sunday

Washington will be the scene of a big-scale archery tournament Sunday when teams belonging to the Old Dominion Archery Association engage in what is to be known as the York Round Challenge Cup competition. Shooting will start at 10 a. m. on the Potomac Park archery course. Among those to participate will be Dr. John C. Baldwin, champion of Maryland, and a member of the Oriole Archers of Baltimore.

Calvary M. E. Forms Nine.

The Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, Fifteenth street and Columbia road, will enter a team in the Georgetown Church League this year. W. J. Hodges, coach of the basket ball team, will handle the ball team. The following players already have been signed: Hurst, J and H. Williams, Crossette, J. Young, Collison, Via, Black, Hynson, Cheston, Swan, Lore and Wolfe. Others desiring to try out for the team are requested to attend the meeting at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the church.

'Best Card of Year' Booked to Lure District Ring Fans Monday

Jannazzo Foe Of Furr in Feature

All But One Preliminary Boxer Main-Eventer in Own Right.

By Bill McCormick.

CONVINCED by the record crowd drawn to the O'Mahoney-Dusek wrestling bout last Thursday night that new attendance highs may be reached if the public is given outstanding attractions, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn have arranged perhaps the best boxing card of the current indoor season for the Auditorium Monday night.

The 34-round card is topped by a 10-round encounter between the world's ninth and tenth ranking welterweights—Izzy Jannazzo and Phil Furr, respectively—which, in itself, is enough to make any fight show. Not satisfied that the Furr-Jannazzo bout itself will serve to attract the turnout on which they are banking, Turner and Ahearn have arranged a preliminary card consisting of four six-round bouts in which every boxer but one is a main-eventer in his own right.

Rose to Tenth Spot.

Furr's career here has been that of the typical home-town boxer who almost invariably is a prophet without honor in his own stamping grounds. Unnoticed and generally considered an "overexalted preliminary boy" by the local wiseacres, Furr all the time was scoring victories here that earned him the tenth ranking by a national ring publication which keeps an ear to the ground in the mecca of all boxers—New York.

Had Furr been punching out his victories in New York, instead of here, it is entirely possible, even probable, that he would now outrank his opponent of tomorrow night, who acquired his ninth ranking by performing right under the noses of those who rank pugs in Gotham.

Most Are Newcomers.

Most of the main-event performers on the preliminary card are newcomers to local rings. Joe Teems, who fights Pete Powell in a featherweight affair, is a Greek from Florida, who boasts victories over Eddie Burl, Charley Von Reedon, Tony Lopez and Jimmy Reed. Teems has appeared in top bouts throughout Florida and the South for quite a few years. Powell is a main eventer in Norfolk and other Virginia fight centers.

Jimmy Wade, another newcomer, will work against the only fighter on the card who has not fought in a main event—one LeRoy Zinkham, from Baltimore. Zinkham is a knockout artist who consistently has refused to advance out of the preliminary class, preferring to continue his campaigning where the pickings are easier. Wade, who has been imported from Miami, has fought many top bouts in Florida, knocking out such as Andy Callahan and winning on points from Andy Snyder, Snooks Campbell and the likes.

Miller in Debut.

Baby Miller, another Florida featherweight new to Washington fans, will make his debut here against one Phil Baker, of Philadelphia. Miller, a Cuban-Seminole, has defeated Lopez, Guzeman, Chino Alvarez and Moon Mullins, among others, in main events. In his last fight in Florida he handily trounced Johnny Lucas in a 15-round war which set a new high for action in Tampa. Baker, who is no relation to the accordion player, is a member of the famous Boo Boo Hoff stable, who has been fighting featured bouts in such centers as Scranton and the smaller Philadelphia clubs.

In the remaining six, Roy Manley will clash with Pete Bevans in a welterweight snarl which generally is being classed as a local natural.

Dick Lunn Gains Dixie Golf Finals

Greenwich, Conn., in tomorrow's 36-hole final. Topping today carded a fine 72 while eliminating Howard Tryon, of Elmira, N. Y., 5 and 4. His round, however, was completed before the heavy rain swept over the links.

Allen Leads at Turn.

After battling on even terms for eight holes, Lunn lost the ninth to Allan's par 4 and made the turn with a one-hole deficit. Allen added the tenth with another par 4, but lost the twelfth to Lunn's standard 5.

The deluge hit them at that point, but both carded pars on each of the two next holes to set the stage for Lunn's decisive birdie. Lunn went 1 up on the long seventeenth, where Allen lost a stroke in a parallel water hazard.

Lunn's iron shot missed the green on the 140-yard eighteenth, and he required a 4, 1 over par. With a chance to square the match, Allen three-putted, his last effort of some 3 feet rimming the cup.

V. P. I. Is Host To Generals On Track

Double Meet Is Scheduled Today; Varsity Suffers Lack of Practice.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BLACKSBURG, Va., April 12.—The new track season at Virginia Tech will open with a bang tomorrow in a double meet with varsity and freshman runners of Washington and Lee.

The Tech runners will face the Generals without any systematic outdoor practice, having been kept indoors by bad weather practically all three weeks of the spring quarter.

Tech's hopes in the varsity clash rest mainly upon a pair of fleet dash men, Ernie Pritchard and Ed Turner; upon the middle distance running of Ivan Mothershead; the ability of Forrest Rollins and Johnny Fortune in the jumps and upon a trio of pole vaulters, Alex Shafer, Joe Mottola and Frank Fazio.

Four Tech freshmen are standouts on an average yearling team; Bishop, a promising quarter and half miler; Blackwell Davis and Carol Shockey, in the weights, and Ellis, a nifty high-jump prospect.

Two Men Are Lost.

Allison Hartman, ace pole vaulter last spring, and Bill McMullin, sophomore hurdles star, are lost from the squad for the season.

Ivan Mothershead is expected to wage a great race with Dick Dunaj, the Generals' ace, in the half mile, in which a record may fall if track and weather conditions are good. Fred Shirk and Jack Carpenter are slated to help Tech's veteran hurdler, Dick Holberton, do battle with the outstanding timber toppers of W. and L. Tech will present a strong quartet of high jumpers in Rollins, Fortune, Riner and Lenz. Wilson, Carroll and Riner are the center of wavering hopes in the weight events, in which the Gobblers will probably fall shy of the marks of Bill Dyer.

Though he is a lad of outstanding ability in the two mile, Tech's team leader, Locklin Bell, faces imminent defeat at the hands of Dunaj.

Cumberland Boxers Will Vie in New York

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 12.—Ferdinand Franchi, bantamweight; Joey Parker, featherweight; Bill Niland, lightweight, and Tracy Riggins, light-heavyweight, victorious in their matches with members of the Staten Island, N. Y., boxing team, held here last month, have been invited to meet amateur boxers of the New York team in a series of bouts scheduled for Staten Island, Monday, April 29, it was announced last night by George Noonan, member of the Casey A. A. boxing committee.

Noonan also stated that the Staten Island promoters are anxious to have Jack Rorick, Cumberland featherweight, inactive since January 18, because of injury, appear on the same program.

Horse Farm Planned By Elliott Roosevelt

Arlington Downs, Tex., April 12 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt is toying with the idea of raising a few thoroughbreds for both horse racing and horse shows.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained a party of friends today at Arlington Downs and disclosed they had purchased a large tract of land west of Fort Worth.

K. of P. Court Record.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 12.—Under the management of L. H. "Red" Chaney, for the second year, the Cumberland Knights of Pythias basket ball team concluded its 1934-35 schedule with a record of 17 victories and 14 losses and rolled up 1,022 points against 955 for opposing quints.

Little Men Help Teams Lure Fans

clumsier and more hopeless, and augments the picture of villain. The crowd isn't going to like him even if he does win. They are with the underdog, the frail-looking little fellow, and they aren't going to like the man who beats him.

Bitsy has another famous trick. He goes out after a ball. If he fails to reach it in time, like as not he is liable to go sprawling on his face, or back and go sliding along the clay or turf for yards. Now, a light, little man can do that many times and not get hurt, whereas a big man weighing around 180 pounds gets a good shaking up.

But how the gallery loves it when Bitsy does one of his college slides. You can hear the audible murmurs of sympathy go up on all sides—"Oh, the poor little fellow . . . Did you see him try for that . . . Oh, I hope he isn't hurt . . ." This doesn't do the opponent any good because in many cases, said opponent was that his shot was good and that Grant couldn't have reached it on ice skates.

And instead of being applauded and encouraged for his skill, he gets black looks and pursed mouths turned on him for making the poor, dear, sweet, exhausted little man fall down. Most of the time Grant means it, because there is no more indefatigable trier after a ball than Bitsy, but sometimes I think he turns it on for the sake of its unhealthy moral effect upon his opponent.

Yes, I would like a little man on my team, especially if he could play tennis the way Grant can. Because by no stretch of the imagination does Bitsy depend on his pint-size advantage to win. He is a great tennis analyist, a good shot maker, good enough to play his opponent's weakness, and a miraculous ball getter. Small, and light, he can scuttle over the court and make gets that look impossible from the stands.

The big men have it on him in stride, as far as court coverage goes, but it takes so much more out of them. And wherever I found that the opposing team had a big, tall, lanky player, you can bet I'd give them a dose of Bitsy, and maybe win that darned old Davis Cup.

Note—To kind friends, clients, etc., this department has no intention of quitting the newspaper business until requested to do so by his employers, or popular demand. Yesterday's piece saying farewell to literature in favor of manufacturing golf balls with caviar centers was the type of humor known as Ten Ton Irony. At least, it sank like that.

N. C. State and Duke Oppose at Nets Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Raleigh, N. C., April 12.—Tennis teams of N. C. State and Duke University meet tomorrow morning at Southern Pines as a feature of the Spring Blossom Festival being held there.

State's team will be composed of Captain Jack Brown, Jimmy Renn, Don Dixon, Al Folley and Henry Nading. Dixon has been out for several weeks because of poison ivey.

Baltimoreans To Meet D. C. Tankmen

Arrangements Under Way for Meet Next Week at Shoreham.

ARRANGEMENTS were under way yesterday for an intercity all-star men's swimming meet between the pick of Washington's sharks and the fastest-stroking paddlers from Baltimore. The meet will be held a week from tonight in the Shoreham's Venetian Pool.

Picking up the threads of a none-too-kindly rivalry, born several years ago when Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore put up a loving cup for annual summer competition between picked Washington and Baltimore teams, the meet will resume where the Jackson meet left off last year at the Maryland Club Gardens Pool when Washington's representatives came through with a narrow victory.

Winners, Runners-Up.

The members of the Washington team probably will be chosen from the winners and runners-up of the recent District indoor championships. Buddy Hodgson, new District 50-yard free-style champ, will face a tough proposition in his specialty against Homan Kinsley, Baltimore Y. M. C. A. flash, but looms a favorite in the high diving, second only to Johnnie Broaddus, high-soaring champion of the District.

Stewart Fitzhugh, record-breaking back-stroke champion from Central High School, will need all his mark-shattering prowess against Frank Cummings, of Baltimore, who is reported to have covered the 100-yard distance in the sparkling time of 1.09 1-5.

Farber Is Threat.

Ernie Boggs and Bob Jordan in the 220 face tough opposition in the furlong from Brent Farber, of Calvert Hall School, Baltimore, three times a winner over Jordan, runner-up by a hand to Boggs for the District title.

Dyer Ghormley appears to be a promising point-winner in the breast-stroke, while the 200-yard free-style relay and 300-yard medley are nothing but toss-ups at this writing.

Joe LaSalle, 100-yard District champ, trails on the short edd of the odds in the century against Kinsley. The meet should be one of the most colorful aquatic events of the indoor season, sharpened as it is by perennial inter-city rivalry.

Wood Delays Boat Record Attempt

Step Must Be Adjusted Further; Waits Week or 10 Days.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 12. (AP)—Unable to make a proper step adjustment of Miss America X, Gar Wood today indefinitely postponed further efforts to better his own world's motorboat speed record of 124.91 miles an hour.

His decision was reached after mechanics sent the 38-fooot boat across Indian Creek on what Wood described as an unsatisfactory run.

He said one adjustment to the step, which has consumed the last several days, did not permit thhe craft properly to ride the surface.

Accordingly he ordered the boat put back into its cradle and instructed mechanics to continue experimenting with step adjustments in an effort to increase the speed.

Go to Detroit

Wood said he would have to leave here to be in Detroit on April 18 and that he would make no more official attempts to break his record until after he returns, possibly the latter part of next week or the first of the following week.

He recently was clocked at 119 miles an hour over an officially measured mile course and since then has been making various adjustments with the boat in an effort to step up the speed.

Blue Flames Sign Several New Men

Predicting a banner season, Manager Tony Barruto, of the Blue Flame Valet Shop baseball team, yesterday announced his 1935 roster. Finalists last year in The Washington Post Sandlot Association playoffs, the Blue Flames will pack an even stronger punch this season through the addition to the squad of seven of the fastest players in local sandolt circles.

Manager Barruto has signed the following new men for the year: Joe Stankus, John Stankus, Francis McGuire, Archie Ware, all of last year's Griffith's Blue Coals, and Eddie Cinotti, Joe Pusateri, Joe Mulhall, of last year's St. Joseph nine. Members of last year's fast-traveling team back in uniform will be Joe Bertilini, Frank Corkins, Frank Di Nenna, Nelson Jett, Jesse Bowie, Walter Morris, Charlie Mahaney, Jack Casper, Jake Lewis, Ed Colliflower and Doc Baker.

The first practice will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday on the West Ellipse. Any other players besides those mentioned may report. The Blue Flames are again registered with The Washington Post Association.

Virginia Nines In 6 Games Today

Half Dozen Track Teams Also Are Scheduled for Clashes.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.—The weather man, who has permitted only three college baseball games in Virginia this week, indicated tonight that he might rain out a half dozen more tomorrow and make the going very sloppy for a half-dozen Old Dominion track teams.

William and Mary's star-studded track team, a bit deficit in all-round strength, drew the headlining assignment in a dual meet against Duke at Durham, while Richmond's Spiders pushed north with the expectation of taking a whipping from Maryland's fine trackmen. Virginia's harriers, usually a Southern Conference championship threat, appeared far too strong for V. M. I.'s Cadets, but a real battle loomed in the dual engagement between Virginia Tech and Washington and Lee.

Six Baseball Games.

The baseball program, dependent upon the forecaster's whims, listed games between V. M. I. and Virginia at Lexington, Roanoke and William and Mary at Salem, a double-header between V. P. I. and Washington and Lee at Lexington, Randolph-Macon against the medical college at Ashland and Hampden-Sydney against Union Theological Seminary.

Virginia's Cavaliers, who loom as the team to whip for the State baseball championship, prepared for the game with V. M. I. with some fear and some trembling. Aside from the fact that the weather has prevented outdoor practice, they're concerned about the pitching arm of their veteran, Orlin Rogers. Rogers was hit lustily in Virginia's 4-to-2 triumph over Michigan, but his teammates rescued him from several tight spots. Bud Abbitt, a sophomore ace who was expected to be a big help to the Cavaliers, is nursing a bad cold.

Little Counted On.

Whether they succeed in whipping Duke's Blue Devils, William and Mary's trackmen are expected to score heavily with a fine flock of stars headed by the "one-man track team," Monk Little. It was Little who paced the Indians in their losing assault on North Carolina's Southern Conference champions a week ago with four first places and 20 points. He won the 100, 220, the broad jump and the javelin event with good performances despite the muddy underfooting.

If the Indians had some first-class reserves to score a few second and third places, they'd have given the Tarheels the scare of their lives. As it was, they scored first places in seven of the 14 events and tied for first place in another.

Maryland Favored.

Maryland, paced by the sensational Earl Widmyer, one of the Nation's finest collegiate sprinters, appeared too strong for Richmond's trackmen although the Spiders have the best combination in several years.

With Grover Everett, their sensational hurdler, heading a fine team, the Cavaliers should have little difficulty running circles around the hapless Cadets, but to most observers the Tech-W. & L. meet appeared a toss-up. Washington and Lee has a well-rounded team, with Dick Dunaj, its great distance runner, heading the field, while Tech, although weak in the weights and several other events, has enough stars to score heavily.

Hopefuls for Derby Spur Training in Mud

Louisville, Ky., April 12 (AP).—The sun shot a hasty glance at Churchill Downs today as Kentucky Derby hopefuls continued their training in sticky mud. More rain fell in the afternoon.

Mrs. Hollis W. Ryder's Blackbirder was the only eligible to attempt speed, going five-eighths in 1:07 3-5. Meehan Brothers Carroll Day, a "dark horse," breezed a mile in 1:53 4-5. From Lexington came word that the private track on Col. E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour Farm was impassable.

Maryland Will Oppose Shoremen's Nine Today

Rain prevented Maryland's undefeated baseball team from playing its second game with Michigan yesterday at College Park, but the Terrapins hope to return to action this afternoon at Chestertown, Md., where they are to meet Washington College.

Coach Burt Shipley last night announced that Steve Physioc, the squad's most experienced hurler, will get the assignment against the Eastern Shoremen. Physioc defeated Cornell in his first start.

Silver Shares Lend Impetus To Stock Rise

U. S. Smelting and Cerro de Pasco Gain 3 Points Each.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Silver shares again dominated a quiet stock market today and were able to get a little responsive firmness from some other sections of the list.

Some of the silver shares were able to get ahead substantial fractions to as much as 3 points each. The best gainers, as in Thursday's dealings, were United States Smelting at 111, and Cerro de Pasco, at 56⅝, each up around 3 points. A number of other silver and nonferrous metal issues trailed along to rise around 1 to 2 points, including Howe Sound at 50⅞, Silver King at 12, Phelps-Dodge at 17, St. Joe Lead at 14¾, and Magma at 26½.

Among the secondary rail and utility loans a number of issues progressed 1 and 2 points and fractional advances were the rule. The highest grade bonds, however, were barely steady and United States Government obligations receded mildly.

Most important stock classifications gained moderately, and the Associated Press average for 60 stocks ended .5 of a point higher at 38.1. Turnover in the stock exchange was a little better than in the previous session, amounting to 840,210 shares.

Earnings of Some Commercial Banks Large Due to Profits on Sales of Long-Term Governments. Trading in Such Issues Becomes Common.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 12.—Earnings of commercial banks for the first quarter of this year display an unusual degree of variation as between individual institutions. While certain banks are displaying unexpectedly large earning power, as measured by the increase in their undivided profits after allowing for dividend payments, others reflect quite meager income in their condition statements at the end of the first quarter.

Thus, taking the two largest New York banks, one shows indicated earnings of 73 cents per per share for the first quarter of the year, while the other apparently earned less than 15 cents a share. Normally, the earning power of the two banks is not far apart on a per share basis.

It is evident that, with present extremely low interest rates, bank earnings can not be expected to make a brilliant showing. Furthermore, the banks are not expanding their loans, and only holdings of low-yielding government bonds have shown any material expansion. In fact, as Government and other high grade bonds with higher coupon rates are being refunded into those carrying a lower rate of interest, the trend of bank earnings should be definitely downward.

Profits on Governments Major Income Factor.

Closer inquiry reveals that the banks which reported relatively large earnings for the first quarter were able to do so chiefly through taking profits on their holdings of long-term Government bonds. One New York institution, which has enjoyed a substantial rise in its undivided profits account since the beginning of the year, attributes this entirely to sales of long-term Governments, which have risen to high premiums in the market. Of course, where profits are taken on investments held over a considerable period of time, the income is of an extraordinary nature and can not be expected to recur regularly.

However, bankers point out that the profits they have enjoyed on their Government bond portfolio is not always the result of the sale of higher-coupon issues held over any extended period of time. The tendency is growing for banks to trade regularly in long-term Governments, in order to increase their earnings through continuous turnover profits. It is pointed out that discrepancies are constantly arising between quotations of individual Government bond issues, furnishing an opportunity to profit by switches and exchanges without any material risk of loss to the bank. If the expected price change which would permit the taking of a profit does not materialize, then the bonds are simply held as investments.

The extent to which the commercial bank managements have become "price conscious" in their attitude toward the Government bond market, and the growth of trading proclivities among officers concerned with investing their institutions' funds in bonds, are among the remarkable phenomena to be observed in the financial district during the present abnormal cheap money era. One Government bond dealer, in fact, has prepared an elaborate booklet containing a number of charts showing price spreads over a period of time between various long-term Government bond issues. This is designed to guide trading operations of banks in the Government bond market, the theory being that when a price spread between any two issues becomes wider than usual profitable switching may be done.

Short-Term Issues For Long-Term Investment.

The head of one very conservative New York bank has expressed the current policy of many bank managements when he stated that his institution places its long-term investments funds in short-term Governments, and its short-term funds in long-term Governments. He meant to imply by this cryptic statement that the banks are fearful that present low and declining interest rates may not last. Whenever interest rates rise again, long-term bond prices will naturally drop sharply. Metropolitan commercial banks, especially those that possess almost entirely demand deposits, do not feel justified in holding indefinitely a large portfolio of long-term Governments, even though their deposits are increasing, for fear that later a reversal in the trend of interest rates would involve them in a serious capital loss. Hence, the effort is being made to keep the main body of a bank's investments in Governments in issues of near-term maturity, so that higher interest rates could not cause more than a slight decline in price. Of course, as these mature, new short-terms are bought to replace them.

On the other hand, in order to bolster up bank earnings without material risk, a number of institutions are buying Government bonds of longer term on a trading basis. They do not put these long-term issues away as permanent investments, but switch them constantly. As the main price trend on Government bonds has been steadily upward into new high territory, such trading operations have been very profitable for many banks that have indulged in them to any great extent. There are evidences that such trading in long-term Governments on the part of banks is now on the increase.

Texas Corp. May Retire Debt of $100,000,000

New York, April 12 (AP).—A report current in Wall Street that the Texas Corporation was negotiating with banks for a large credit to retire its funded debt in excess of $100,000,000 was met with official silence from Judge C. B. Ames, president.

National Income Up 13.9 Per Cent Over 1933 Total

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—National income in 1934 of 47,600,000,000 increased 13.9 per cent over the 1933 total, it was announced in a survey published today by the National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization sponsored by large corporations. National income, which is the net value of goods and services produced, was $377 per capita last year, an increase of $44 over the 1933 total, the board reported.

Although the conference board found that national income declined 42.7 per cent from 1929 to 1934, the cost of living dropped 20.6 per cent.

"The purchasing power of the national income produced in 1934 was, consequently, about 27 per cent below the pre-depression peak," the survey stated.

Dust and Day's News Lift Wheat Above $1 a Bushel in Pit Flurry

Maximum Gain Is 3½ Cents for the Day, With Closing 2½ Cents Up; May Contracts, $1.00½; Trade Reports and Dust Storms Factors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 12.—Front page display of a Dun-Bradstreet report forecasting the sharpest business rise in 25 years went hand in hand today with dollar wheat. Following the prediction of forthcoming big mercantile expansion, speculative trading in grain, especially wheat, broadened out to a feverish extent, and prices shot skyward, showing a maximum new rise of 3½ cents and rivaling yesterday's sensational gain.

Not only was the old-time rural ideal of dollar-a-bushel for wheat attained but the market today surpassed that price, and in the final minute of trading reached $1.00½ for May contracts and $1.00¼ for September, the latter a new high price record for the season so far as that delivery is concerned.

More Dust Damage.

Further sensational crop damage reports from drought and dust regions of domestic wheat territory Southwest added momentum to the buying stampede. Steep fresh upturns of quotations on silver were also given much attention among grain traders.

Wheat closed buoyant 2⅜ to 3½ cents above yesterday's finish, May, 1.00⅜ to 1.00½; corn, 1 to 1¾ up; May, 88⅜ to 88½; oats, 1⅛ to 1⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

Conspicuous among late stimulating crop advices today was a dispatch from a widely known Chicago observer who, telegraphing at Pratt, Kans., said: "Wheat prospects are practically nothing west of a line from Concordia, Wilson, Otis and Offerle."

No Moisture Relief.

Indications that no moisture relief was in sight for arid sections of domestic wheat territory Southwest did much to prepare for the sudden outburst of speculative buying later. The fact that dust storms had subsided for the time being was not deemed significant as the day approached an end. A spark only was apparently needed to set the market aflame. Once started upward, prices never stopped soaring till the closing gong cleared the throng of excited traders from the pit.

Corn and oats followed wheat. Provisions went lower with hog values.

Silver, 68½ Cents, Continues Climb To New Heights

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—The bull market in silver metal rolled merrily along in the world's principal markets today. In the New York free market the price of silver bullion jumped 2¾ cents an ounce, to 68½ cents, the highest price since July, 1926. This was preceded by a similar rise in London, which carried the price there to the New York equivalent of 68.43 cents an ounce.

Today's rise narrowed the margin between the world price and the new price of 71.11 cents which the Treasury is paying American mines for newly produced metal.

The further rise in prices was said to have been inspired in part by the assertion of Senator Pittman, veteran leader of the silver bloc, that President Roosevelt proposes to lift the price in orderly fashion to its old statutory level of $1.29 an ounce.

Bonds Steady In All Groups; Utilities Gain

Abitibi 5s Rise 3¾; Domestic Corporation Issues in Demand.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Domestic corporation issues were in good demand on the bond market today and a steady to firm tone was the rule in all groups. U. S. Governments were a trifle lower.

Low-priced utilities and industrials were in particular demand as traders and investors sought to pick up individual issues that offered possibilities of price enhancement if and when the inflation bug begins to crawl around at a more rapid pace under the prodding of advancing silver prices and other stimulants.

Abitibi Paper & Power 5s were 3¾ higher at 34¼, International Paper & Power refunding 5s improved 3¼ at 66, and New Orleans Public Service 5s were 3 higher at 68.

Railroad loans were steady but advances were mostly off 1 point or less. U. S. Government obligations could do no better than hold their own and in some cases slipped back, but supporting orders held losses to extremely small fractions.

Relaxation of selling pressure against Italian 7s, which advanced 2½ points to 83¾, featured the foreign department.

Chesapeake Net Is $7,333,045

Corporation's Surplus Rises $3,682,921 During Year.

Cleveland, April 12 (AP).—The Chesapeake Corporation reports a net income of $7,333,045.98 in 1934. The corporation listed $10,899,911 as the balance of its earned surplus account at the year's end, after paying common stock dividends of $2.50 a share. The paid-in surplus account showed a gain from $8,709,481 at the end of 1933 to $12,392,402 at the end of 1934.

Poor & Co., manufacturers of equipment for railroads, report net profits for 1934, after all charges and Federal income taxes, of $296,663, compared with a loss of $236,998 for the preceding year. This increase in earnings, according to Fred A. Poor, president of the company, was due to a gain of 88 per cent in net sales over the previous year, the 1934 total being $4,512,441. The increase in selling, administrative and royalty expenses which accompanied this increase in sales was 13 per cent.

Beatrice Creamery Co. and subsidiaries today reported net profits of $1,229,614 for the fiscal year ended February 28, equal after preferred dividends to $1.31 a share on 377,719 shares of common stock. Net sales for the year rose to $54,883,395, compared with $44,868,398 for the previous year, an increase of 22.3 per cent.

McKesson & Robbins sales for the first quarter amounted to $31,491,666 as against $32,888,718 for the same period in 1934, a decrease of 4.25 per cent. The decrease was entirely in liquor sales, which were abnormally high in 1934 on account of stocking of dealers' shelves immediately after repeal.

Technicolor, Inc., and its wholly-owned subsidiary reports for 1934 net loss of $282,608 after taxes, interest, depreciation and other charges against net loss of $249,396 in 1933.

New York Central Railroad Co. reports a net deficit of $1,227,322 for February, compared with $1,788,938 for the same month last year. For the first two months of the year there was net deficit of $1,904,984, against $2,548,334 in the like period last year.

A. O. Smith Co. Rises 4 Points; Utilities and Oils Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—Rallying tendencies were extended in a number of sections of the curb list today, particularly specialties. Various metal shares added to their recent advances, while a number of utilities and oils recorded sizable improvement. Transfers approximated 151,000 shares compared with 176,000 Thursday.

Aluminum Co. of America staged a striking rise of some 8 points in a fairly active turnover. A. O. Smith & Co. closed 4 points higher and Wilson Jones was up half as much. Issues finishing fractions to around a point higher included American Gas & Electric, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Creole Petroleum, Electric Bond & Share and Sunshine Mining. Singer Mfg. and Meade Johnson were reactionary.

Fewer Lapsed Policies, Fidelity Mutual Says

Philadelphia, April 12.—The first quarter of 1935 continued to show improvement, not only in new business, but a decided decline in lapsed, surrender and termination of policies, said Walter LeMar Talbot, president of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, in a report of the company's condition.

New paid for life insurance increased to over $6,600,000 during the first quarter of 1935, while lapsed, surrender and termination of policies, other than from death, decreased $2,914,192 under the corresponding figure for 1934. This decline of 27.7 per cent in lapsed, surrendered and terminated business, is particularly significant when viewed with the increase in new paid business for the quarter. "I believe," said Mr. Talbot, "that it very clearly reflects the improved economic conditions of the life insurance buying public."

Colt Co. Probe Halted by Call Of President

Roosevelt Asks Delay Until Settlement of Labor Difficulties.

At the telephonic request of President Roosevelt, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday called off an immediate investigation of the Colt Firearms Corporation, pending the outcome of Administration efforts to settle labor differences with the plant.

Chairman Gerald P. Nye, of the Senate Munitions Committee, said he would insist on a sweeping public inquiry, however, if the settlement falls short of National Labor Board recommendations for Colt NRA compliance.

The NRA recently withdrew the company's Blue Eagle, on advice of the Labor Board, following alleged Colt violation of the recovery act's collective bargaining clause. But NRA officials failed to notify the War Department, which buys all of its machine guns from Colt. Army officials said they would continue to do business with the company, unless they received word from NRA.

Richberg Conducting Efforts.

Edwin S. Smith, of the National Labor Board, told the Munitions Committee it was the first instance he knew of in which NRA had failed to advise Government departments of Blue Eagle removal, members said. Chairman Nye had called an inquiry to investigate "failure of the Government to enforce the law against a munitions firm as it does against all others."

President Roosevelt told reporters he called Nye Thursday night and requested the inquiry be put off. He hoped, he said, for a settlement of the labor dispute, and believed the proposed investigation might make that difficult. The Munitions Committee went into executive session with Smith, and voted to postpone the hearing.

Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the NIRA board, had been invited to appear, and the President was said to have interfered at his instance. Richberg, rather than officials of the National Labor Board, is said to be conducting the latest Colt labor negotiations.

"The President seems assured that a settlement of the Colt Firearms Corporation-NRA controversy will be accomplished early next week," Senator Nye told reporters.

Associated Press dispatches from Hartford, Conn., however, quoted Samuel M. Stone, president of the Colt Co., as saying it was "news" to him that the strike was assured of settlement by Monday. No such word had been communicated to him, he said.

Nye Accuses Government.

At the Capitol, it was Senator Nye's contention that striking workmen at the Colt plant had been left practically without Government support even after NRA had removed the company's Blue Eagle. He said he wanted to find out why Richberg had failed to advise the War Department of the removal.

"While there can be no denying a strong relationship exists between munitions firms and certain departments of our Government, I can not believe that NRA and the Administration will tolerate favor in the administration of present recovery efforts," Senator Nye said.

Several members of the munitions committee, including Senator Walter George of Georgia, and Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, said they believed the dispute was an NRA and national labor board matter, and the munitions committee should not interfere.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

What is the history of a freak silver dollar? "Cartwheel," a "dramalogue" presented on WJSV at 8:45 p. m., covers 50 years of the dollar's life, its passing from hand to hand, then bringing about a conclusion that is as unexpected as ironic. "Cartwheel" dispenses with most of the conventional sound effects. There are 24 rapid sequences, involving 36 characters, played by a cast of 7.

The author, Vick Knight, has been in radio for many years, and launched experimental radio drama over WHK, Cleveland. This is his first script presented by Columbia network.

Correction—"Country Hi-Jinks," scheduled at 8:30 tonight, goes on WMAL instead of WRC as indicated in yesterday's column.

Local Notes.

Lewis Gardner Reynolds, custodian of the Lincoln House, has made an intensive study of the assassination of President Lincoln. Today, at 2, WRC, he'll give you a description of the shooting as nearly accurate as his reports permit.

Arch MacDonald wishes the Hot Stove League to know that they are welcome to come to the exhibition game between the Senators and Albany. Present membership cards at the gate.

Seems that Jim McGrath announces sitting at WRC and standing at WMAL. So, when he found himself standing up at WRC he told the public it was "Station WMAL—no, I mean WRC." If you can figure that one.

A great many releases from various sources have been received on the Harvard-Hawaii debate at 6 p. m. The subject, discussed by the two university teams, is "Resolved: That Hawaii be admitted to the Union as a State." Since this is not carried locally, your best bet should be WEAF, if you can get it.

Speeches and Sundries.

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, on the Thomas Jefferson program, WJSV, 1:30 p. m.

Representative Boylan, on Thomas Jefferson, WRC, 12:30 p. m.

Senator Wagner, on "Labor's Stake in World Trade," WMAL, 7:15 p. m.

Leo A. Rover, on "Youth, Truth and the Law," WRC, 7 p. m.

National ski championships reported on WJSV, 5 p. m.

High-Spots.

Constance Bennett guesting with Al Jolson on his new show, WRC, 9:30 p. m.

Jan Garber on Radio City party, 9 p. m., WMAL.

Cincinnati Conservatory concert, WJSV, 11 a. m.

Bonelli singing "Dio Possente" from "Faust" on the WJSV program, 9 p. m.

Roxy playing music by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, 8 p. m.

Paul Whiteman, WRC, 11:30 p. m.

Sigmund Romberg, WRC, 8 p. m. . . . "Let's Dance," WRC, 10:30 p. m.

The third edition of the National Capital Amateur Show, with Arthur Godfrey as master of ceremonies, will be broadcast from the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel at 6:45 p. m. today.

The following six contestants will try for the prizes:

M. Janice Hale, 21, 5331 Forty-third street northwest, singer. Selection, "It's an Old Southern Custom."

Floyd C. Metcalfe, 27, 2809 Fifteenth street northwest, singer. Selection, "Dancing With My Shadow."

Marvin A. Gardner, 21, 716 Sheridan street northwest, singer. Selection, "June in January."

Robin, Hawk-Like, Carries Off Mouse

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 12.—Arthur Wimmer has three witnesses to prove that a robin, instead of being a harbinger of spring and confining its diet to worms and bugs, is a ferocious, blood-thirsty bird of prey.

While standing on his front porch at noon yesterday, he saw a mouse running across the lawn. A robin dived, pecked the mouse on the head, and zoomed for another dive. The mouse scurried to and fro, attempting to escape, but the robin struck a telling blow that knocked the mouse off its feet. A few pecks more and the mouse, dead, was picked up in the robin's claws and carried away.

County Bars Drinking After Closing Hours

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 12.—Liquor purchased for consumption in any drinking place in Washington County must be consumed before the closing hour in the future, the board of liquor commissioners has ruled.

Virginia Hails Roads Program To Create Jobs

Highway Official Says U. S. Allotment Will End Unemployment.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 12.—State Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley, apprised tonight of President Roosevelt's four-point program for elimination of grade crossings, said "that is about what we anticipated; we will be ready to go to work as soon as the money is made available."

Commenting this afternoon on the employment possibilities of the Federal public works program in Virginia, Mr. Shirley said he believed practically every able-bodied unemployed worker in the State would be given a job.

He pointed to the amount, estimated at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000, that will be allocated to Virginia for road projects as compared with $3,700,000 received from Federal sources in 1934-35, and predicted that the increased income would enormously stimulate employment by his department.

In addition, he recalled that the corporation commission wants $7,800,000 for rural electrification and that the health and agriculture departments and the conservation commission have submitted plans calling for large expenditures for labor. Cities and counties also have asked for large sums for projects, he added.

With all this, Mr. Shirley predicted "it looks as though the employment problem ought to be solved."

Farmhand Hanged Praying, Singing

Marches to Gibbet Saying 'God Bless You All.'

Dover, Del., April 12 (AP).—Potters field claimed John C. Morgan, 44, farmhand, whom Delaware hanged today for the slaking of Dominique J. Pierre.

Morgan turned to religion since his conviction and among his last words on the scaffold were "God bless you all. I'll meet you in Heaven." As he marched to his death, accompanied by a clergyman, he joined two women and a man in singing "Near My God To Thee."

Morgan confessed he killed Pierre and buried the body in the hope of getting possession fo his farm. He also confessed to killing Frank Foster in West Dover in July, 1933. Pierre was slain last December 15. The jury recommended mercy for Morgan but the court imposed the death sentence because the crime was too "heinous."

It was Delaware's first execution since 1930 and the first in Kent County since 1891. Hundreds tried to gain admittance to the jail yard but ten policemen stood guard and only those with witness credentials were admitted.

Reich Offer Seen As Peace Wedge

Moscow Observers Hail Bid to Join Accord.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 12.—News of Germany's offer to enter an Eastern nonagression pact was given great importance by foreign observers in Moscow tonight, who viewed it as possibly opening the way out of the acute situation which has been worrying Europe.

Official re-action was unobtainable, particularly since Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs, is en route to Geneva, and the foreign office was closed, this being a "free day" or day of rest.

The German reference to her willingness to enter the accord, even if other signatories "stipulate among themselves accords of reciprocal assistance," was taken as obviously meaning the new Franco-Soviet agreement.

Litvinoff was to discuss the understanding with Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, at Geneva and they planned to draw up a formal project and sign it in the near future, possibly during Laval's forthcoming visit to Moscow.

The burly union 'longshoremen came down, five crews of them, to load the ship. There was a picket line. It was Hensley. Union 'longshoremen do not pass picket lines, so they quit trying to load the boat. The picket line marched up and down all day. The ship was not loaded.

Among the questions to be asked will be those regarding special experience or training of the individual; what employment and investments he may have; to what organizations he may belong and their meeting times; what three hobbies most appeal to him; how he spends his leisure time; what employment opportunities are available in his community; whether or not he plans to pursue further school study and what further work he might like special training in.

It is expected that from the information gathered it may be possible to offer further educational advantages to those desiring them.

Marion Talley Weds Teacher In Secret Rites

Ex-Opera Star's March Marriage Bared; Couple Hollywood Bound.

By the Associated Press.

New City, N. Y., April 12.—A two-year-old romance between Marion Talley and Adolph Eckstrom, a New York City singing teacher, culminated in a secret wedding here last month.

The news leaked out today with the filing of the marriage license return at the county clerk's office.

The wedding, it was disclosed, was performed March 23 by the Rev. D. H. Gridley, pastor of the New York City Methodist Episcopal Church.

It was the second romance to reach the public for the golden-voiced soprano, who stormed the Metropolitan Opera stage from the Middle West nine years ago.

First Marriage Annulled.

Her first was her marriage to Michael Raucheisen, German pianist, in a similarly unheralded ceremony at White Plains, N. Y., in June, 1932. This marriage was annulled six months later in California.

No inkling of an impending marriage between Miss Talley and Eckstrom had been given even to Miss Talley's associates.

George Engels, her manager, said he had heard indirectly of a budding romance, but had heard nothing but belated reports of the wedding itself.

Miss Talley's friends said they understood the couple were en route to California, where the singer is under contract to produce a motion picture.

They left New York by automobile for Washington after the ceremony, they said, and intended to motor to the Pacific Coast via Southern States.

Teacher for Two Years.

Eckstrum has been Miss Talley's voice teacher for two years. Early this year the singer went to Hollywood and signed a contract with a film company. She returned early in March.

Mrs. Kate Bucnenau, town clerk of Clarkstown, New City, asknowledged she had been requested to keep the news quiet by Miss Talley herself.

Miss Talley made her Metropolitan debut in February, 1926, in the title role of "Lucia." The unanimous acclaim of critics and public catapulted her to an operatic success never before equaled by an American singer.

In March, 1929, she suddenly announced her decision to retire from the "Met," and returned to Kansas where she bought a farm to live "like all other farmers."

She is a native of Nevada, Mo., but came to the Metropolitan via Kansas City.

Ambitious Powers Called "Buzzards"

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 12.—In line with similar action taken today by student groups in this and other nations, almost 1,000 University of North Carolina students participated in an anti-war demonstration held in Memorial Hall today. The Rev. Donalds Stewart, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, the principal speaker, branded wars as "international rackets" and asserted the powers which today are trying to "acquire" more and more are "international buzzards."

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

BAKER.

REPEATING the denial that serious inroads have been made on the merit system, Harry B. Mitchell, president, Civil Service Commission, told the Eastern State Regional Conference yesterday afternoon that more employes are within the classified service now than in 1932.

He also emphasized that steps are being taken to bring the alphabet agencies under the classified service, outlining several bills to that effect which are pending in Congress.

"Admittedly," Mr. Mitchell said, "there has been a very considerable increase in the Government service of employes who are not included under the competitive system. These are the people employed in the new agencies.

"There has been much criticism of Congress because it excluded these new agencies from the operation of the civil service laws. While there is some ground for this criticism, experience has indicated that in setting up new agencies where the details of the work to be done are more or less unknown, and where the necessary set-up to do that work is an undetermined quantity, I believe it is wise in such cases to allow latitude for the possible unknown necessity of the particular case."

Mr. Mitchell then used the railroad retirement board as an illustration of this point.

"Some time ago the President instructed the Civil Service Commission to make a survey of these new agencies so that he might determine just which ones it would be disarable to include within the competitive civil service system. * * * Some work has already been done.

"The agencies which are exempt from the civil service act and rules fall into three major classes. There is the class in which the language is permissive rather than mandatory, such as the AAA, for example, in which the statute states that the Secretary may make such appointments without regard to the civil service law and rules."

The TVA was cited as another class, in which the language of the statute reads "The board shall." Then there are the establishments which were created under statutes which place the power of appointment in the President—"The President is hereby authorized to establish such agencies * * * and to appoint without regard to the provisions of the civil service lows * * *."

To clarify that situation and give the President authority to bring these agencies under the civil service laws when he deems it advisable several bills are now before Congress. The principal ones are:

The Logan bill which would bring all Governmental executive positions under the civil service law and rules and would require positive action on the part of the President to take them out.

A bill by Representative Ramspeck would give the President authority to place within the classified service any position or group of positions which may now or may hereafter be exempted.

A bill by Representative Sirovich is much more comprehensive and covers many features of the civil service. So far as bringing people into the civil service, Mr. Mitchell pointed out, it provides that immediately upon the passage of the act all positions within the Government, except those which are elective, shall be under the operation of the civil service law. The bill also provides for voluntary retirement and many other reforms which have been discussed at length in previous Federal Diary articles.

Open House Tonight.

Francis A. McCann (P), chairman of arrangements, again invites Government employes, new in the Capital, to attend the Saturday Evening Kermess Bingo Party at the Knights of Columbus Club, Tenth and K streets northwest. Miss F. Ramona Raley, an official in the Catholic Daughters of America, will tell fortunes and entertain.

To accommodate those wishing to attend the 2 a. m. Sunday mass at Immaculate Conception Church, the club will remain open until 1:30 a. m. The Rev. John Keating Cartwright, D. D., pastor, has invited all Federal employes, including non-Catholics, who work on night shifts, to attend the mass.

Donald Parker (C), and Fritz Peterson (C), both of Commerce, attended the textile show this week in Greenville, S. C.

Barnard Gahm (P), Patent office, is receiving felicitations from his friends upon becoming the father of a 7¾-pound baby boy. Mrs. Gahm and infant are reported resting comfortably at George Washington University Hospital.

Leading at the end of the first week in the contest for the trip to Atlantic City, which will be given by Federal Employes Union No. 262, to the member who obtains the largest number of new members during the national campaign, are George M. Casper, Mrs. Ola G. King and Fred Rehm.

Art Without Activity?

For years we've heard the merry call
Of tennis courts along the Mall—
Of racquets, snowy balls and net,
Of rifled shots well served and met,
By players who with stout young hands
Danced nimble feet o'er chalk-lined sands,
As here and yon the pellet flew—
Withal a pleasant scene to view.

Today we hear those courts are doomed
In high Art's interest, it's assumed.
Yet, be that true, we'd like to know
Just where these clerks henceforth must go,
When they feel tempted to cavort
Upon a netted chalk-lined court?
Can not some space be set apart
For humans in this scheme of Art?
"A Civil Server" (F).

Dan P. Mularkey, RFC, secretary of the Florida State Society, has invited all Floridians in Government service to attend the society's annual reception and dinner-dance at the Shoreham Hotel April 20.

Prince Georges Jury Sees Only Minor Gaming

Body Urges Police Stamp Out 'a Few Places' as Nuisances.

Although there still is a certain amount of gaming in Prince Georges county, "the more vicious nature of gambling has been eliminated," the county grand jury reported yesterday.

It recommended addition of more than four extra police already authorized by county commissioners.

The grand jury described gambling still an existence as "the numbers games and minor gambling of such a nature that it is exceedingly hard to get sufficient evidence to convict." It continued:

"From assurances received from the authorities in control of enforcement of crime regulations in the District, we believe they would be willing to give their fullest cooperation, for reasons that this would be exceedingly advantageous to the better enforcement of the laws in both the county and District," its grand jury said in urging police to concentrate on stamping out gambling and other forms of crime.

"We still believe that there are a few places in the county now under investigation that are of such a character as to be headquarters for vice of various descriptions, and we as a body recommend that these places be diligently investigated and where found to be a menace to law and order, they be proceeded against as public nuisances and dealt with accordingly."

Contrary to reports from the Hyattsville town council, the grand jury reported it found the county lockup located in the Metropolitan building in that town, to be "thoroughly sanitary and efficiently conducted."

Odd Fellows Hear World Commander

Cumberland UnitAddresse by General G. I. Breil.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 12.—Fraternalism is "primarily interested in preserving the democracy in which we live," Gen. George I. Breiel, Mayor of Southgate, Ky., commander of the patriarchs militant of the world, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, stated tonight in an address at the State Armory.

In countries ruled by dictators, he declared, fraternal orders are not permitted to exist. Referring to Odd Fellowship and the Daughters of Rebekah, he said the combined membership in the world was 2,500,000. He added that the Odd Fellows maintained 68 orphanages in the United States and Canada.

Gen. Breiel was welcomed by Mayor George W. Legge at a dinner at Centre Street Methodist Church Recreation Hall, from which a parade was led to the Armory by the American Legion Drum Corps. Patriarchs militant from Maryland and Pennsylvania led the parade.

Following a musical program and the address of Gen. Breiel, the decoration of chivalry, the highest honor in the Rebekah degree, was conferred on Mrs. May Myers by Col. A. Gilbert Isaac and staff of Baltimore.

DRESS UP WITH A FEATHER BOUTONNIERE

A Young Man's Fancy In the Spring . . . .

Sounds like we're reversing the old quotation . . . but in the spring a young man's fancy does turn to love of a smart appearance.

What better touch of cheer and color could be added to his ensemble than a feather boutonniere . . . everything but the scent of a crisp carnation.

Henry Jones, who was sad and downcast for many years, is a happy man now. "It's this way," explains Hank. "It uster be when I got home I hadda eat outa cans or buy a hamburger down at Joe's hash-house. You see, the missus loved gossip and she spent her afternoons hangin' over the back fence tradin' scandal with the neighbors 'stead of gettin' supper.

"But I fixed that. I subscribed to The Washington Post and now she gets enough gossip outa that feller Ed Sullivan's Broadway column to last her all day. She says he sure knows how to tell things, all right."

But Ed Sullivan is not just a gossip-teller, a keyhole listener-inner, a Peeping Tom with a typewriter. Ed chronicles the doings of that biggest of all hick towns, New York. With Broadway and Forty-second street as his base of operations, Sullivan stops (briefly), looks (intently), and listens (long). The result is a column of news and gossip . . . those little whispers which later roar at you from the front page headlines.

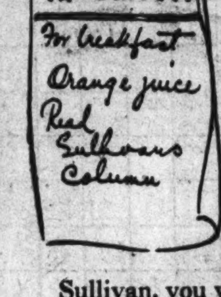
Another nice thing about Ed Sullivan's Broadway column is that it is written for the reader . . . and not just to high-hat some other columnist. We know a college professor who once spent months translating what he termed "Broadwayese." For instance, he learned that "The Umphs who middle-aisled it Choosday yawning, phhht! yesdy. He's carrying the torch for a certain revusical eye-full now" really means that Mr. and Mrs. Umph, who were married last Tuesday, have parted, and that Mr. Umph is now in love with a chorus girl. But when you read Sullivan, you won't have to be a college professor to understand what he means . . . for Sullivan's lines have sparkle, snap and wit . . . and he doesn't depend upon a tortured pun to pack a wallop.



"Broadway," as seen through Ed Sullivan's slightly cynical but ever-interesting eyes, is as breezy as a cocktail party, as smart as a Noel Coward comedy, as entertaining as a ringside table. Not to read Ed Sullivan's column right after downing your orange juice each morning is to miss a lot of fun. Sullivan doesn't tell the news behind the headlines . . . he tells the news ahead of the headlines . . . and tells it five mornings each week in
